JERUSALEM FROM SCOPUS. [JEREMIAH, xiii: 27.]—"Woe unto thee, O Jerusalem! wilt thou not be made clean? when shall it once be?" Jerusalem is upon a ridge between two deep valleys, that of Jehoshaphat on the east, and that of Hinnom on the west, while the city itself is divided by another valley called the Tyropœon, which runs from the northwest to the southeast. That portion of the city on the west of Tyropœon is larger, and comprises Zion and Akra. That on the east is Moriah. All around the Holy City are hills from 50 to 200 feet high, making it true as the psalmist says, "The hills stand about Jerusalem." On the east is the Mount of Olives; on the south the Hill of Evil Counsel; on the west Hanina, and on the north the hill of Scopus. From this point we get a view of Jerusalem of to-day as we pass toward Nazareth.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET

Who continued prophesying about sixty years with small success, ch. 1. 1; 53. 1. He was not the most ancient of the sixteen prophets; but his predictions, containing so much of Christ in them, are now placed first in order. The first thirty-nine chapters, except iv. xi. xii. xxvi. xxxii. xxxv. consist chiefly of divine indictments for sins and denunciations of judgments; the last twenty-seven, of promises relative to the deliverance from Babylon and to the gospel church. In ch. i.–iii. v. vii.–ix. xxii. xxiv. xxvii. 7–11; xxviii.–xxx. 1–17; xxxi. 1–3; lix. lxv. lxvi. is represented the ingratitude, unfruitfulness, idolatry, profaneness, female pride, oppression, drunkenness, perversion of judgment, &c., of the Hebrews; and the terrible punishments thereof by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Romans, &c., are predicted. In ch. vii. 5–9; viii. 4, 21, 22; ix. 8–21; xvii. is predicted the ruin of the kingdom of Syria and Israel, and the calamities of the Philistines, xiv. 29–31; of the Moabites, xv. xvi.; xxv. 10; of the Egyptians and Ethiopians, xviii.–xx.; of the Arabians, xxi. 13–17; of the Edomites, xxi. 11, 12; xxxiv.; of the Tyrians, xxiii.; of the Assyrian army under Sennacherib, x. xiv. 24–27; xvii. 12–14; xxvii. 1; xxix. 5–8; xxx. 27–33; xxxi. 4–9; xxxiii., which is accomplished, xxxvi. xxxvii.; of the Chaldeans, xiii. xiv.; xxi. 1–10; xlviii. 10; xlv. 1–4; xlvi. 1, 2, 11; xlvii. With those charges of guilt and predictions of judgments are intermingled many precious promises of the redemption and glorious kingdom of the Messiah; as i. 18, 25, 27; ii. 2–5; iv. 2–6; vii. 14; viii. 14; ix. 6, 7; xi. xii. xxv.–xxviii. 16. From xl. to the end, the deliverance of the Jews from Babylon and the vanity of idols are frequently hinted; but the incarnation, service, and glory of the Messiah, the erection of the gospel church, the calling of the Gentiles, the rejection and future restoration of the Jews, are the principal subjects. And on account of his clear and striking representations of Jesus Christ and his blessings, and of the gospel church, this prophet has been frequently styled a fifth evangelist.

[Isaiah, if not the first of the noble band of Old Testament prophets, yet belonged to the first cycle or group. His writings were commenced in the reign of Uzziah, B.C. 808–757, and were continued during the reigns of Jotham, Ahaz, and down to the close of the reign of Hezekiah, B.C. 698. From the commencement of his prophecies to the close must thus have been more than half a century. He was a contemporary of Hosea, Joel, Amos, Jonah, and Micah. Nothing certain is known of his genealogy or his private life. From his dress, which appears to have resembled that of Elijah, it might perhaps be concluded that he belonged to one of the transjordanic tribes, ch. 20. 2, or to some remote village in the wilderness of Judah. He resided, however, during his public ministry, in Jerusalem, and near the temple; and he appears to have been held in the highest respect by the princes of the land, and to have exercised much influence in the affairs of the nation. In sublimity of style, purity of diction, and clearness of prophetic delineation of the person, character, and work of the Messiah, Isaiah stands pre-eminent among Old Testament writers. He has been truly called the 'evangelical prophet.' P.]

* In reading this and the subsequent prophets, great attention must be paid to rule x. in chap. ii. of the Introduction, relative to the fulfilment of the same prophecy in different periods; and to history of nations in chap. iv.

CHAPTER I.

1 Isaiah complaineth of Judah for her rebellion. 5 He lamenteth her judgments. 10 He upbraideth their whole service, 16 and exhorteth to repentance. 21 He bewaileth their wickedness. 25 He promiseth grace, 28 and threateneth destruction to the wicked.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 2. Ye heavens and earth, and all that dwell therein, with astonishment know and bear witness that I have marvellously raised up, privileged, preserved, protected, and advanced this Jewish nation; and yet they have, on occasions and in ways unnumbered, perfidiously violated my covenant, and rebelled against my commandments. 3. Brutishly ignorant and inconsiderate of everything important, they scarcely pay me and my ordinances the regard that cattle do to their owners and their stables. 4. Alas! the whole nation is polluted with, and guilty of, the most shocking and multiplied abominations! Unlike to their pious ancestors, they tread in the wicked steps of their immediate parents: they wax worse and worse themselves, and labour to render their posterity still more and more wicked. Revolting more and more from the service and worship of JEHOVAH their God, they have provoked his fearful indignation against themselves. 5. Further punishment of their sin with temporal calamities would but render them still more outrageous and obstinate in wickedness. Already corruption hath infected all ranks, the rulers and the ruled, without any proper means used to prevent it; and misery and distress have overwhelmed the whole nation. 7–9. The Israelites, Syrians, Assyrians, or others, have already, by fire and sword, desolated the whole country of Judah; and Jerusalem alone remains, and that in great danger and distress: and were it not from regard to a few righteous persons still left among us, the whole nation had been utterly destroyed by God in accordance with just law. 10–15. Be therefore assured, saith God, ye detestable monsters of wickedness, that, while ye indulge yourselves in your sinful courses, all your ceremonial services, however solemn and expensive, and even your prayers, amounting to nothing more than legal dissimulation, are utterly abominable, and do but more and more provoke me to wrath. 16–20. By faith applying the word, the blood, the Spirit of Jesus, for your effectual purification from sin, repent of and turn from your vices; and conscientiously exercise yourselves in the contrary virtues of piety, equity, and kindness.—In so doing, you shall not only find your most grievous iniquities, the murder of the Messiah not excepted, fully and freely forgiven, but enjoy a safe and happy continuance in your country. But if you remain obstinate in your evil ways, your destruction, by the sword of your enemies, is inevitable.—21–24. Jerusalem, once so famed for a faithful adherence to the laws and worship of God, and for the justice and integrity of its magistrates and people, has now apostatized to idolatry and every other form of wickedness, and is filled with murders of innocents, saints, and prophets, and even of the Messiah. The practices of all ranks are quite corrupted and their principles depraved, and even the oracles of God debased, by false glosses and human traditions. Magistrates, and other great men, are ringleaders in wickedness, conniving at, or protecting men in, dishonesty; giving sentence according as they are bribed; and suffering the poor, fatherless, and widows, who have nothing to give, to be oppressed without redress. Therefore shall JEHOVAH manifest his almighty power, which has been so long employed in acts of mercy to Israel, in utterly destroying these monsters who desperately hate and oppose him, and are a burden to his Spirit. 25–27. Part of the nation shall nevertheless be preserved, and remarkably reformed by his power and grace. Magistrates and ministers, as in the days of Joshua and David, shall be and bruises, and putrifying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment.[6]

7 Your[o] country is desolate, your cities are burnt with fire: your land, strangers devour it in your presence, and it is desolate, as overthrown by strangers.[7]

8 And the daughter of Zion[8] is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, as a besieged city.

9 Except[p] the LORD of hosts had left unto us [q]a very small remnant, we should have been as [r]Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrah.

10 ¶ Hear[s] the word of the LORD, [t]ye rulers of Sodom; give ear unto the law of our God, ye people of Gomorrah:

11 To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices[u] unto me? saith the LORD: I am full[9] of the burnt-offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts; and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he-goats.[1]

12 When [v]ye come to appear[2] before me, who hath required this at your hand, to tread my courts?

13 Bring[x] no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me; [y]the new-moons and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity,[3] even the solemn meeting.

14 Your new-moons and your appointed feasts my soul [z]hateth: they are a trouble unto me; I am weary to bear them.

15 And[a] when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; yea, when ye make many prayers,[4] I will not hear: your hands are full of [5]blood.[6]

16 ¶ Wash[b] you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; [c]cease to do evil;

17 Learn to do well; [d]seek judgment, [7]relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow.

18 Come[e] now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.

19 If[g] ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land:

20 But[h] if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.[8]

21 ¶ How is the [i]faithful city become [j]an harlot![9] it was full of judgment: righteousness lodged in it; but now murderers.

23 Thy[m] princes are rebellious, and companions of thieves: every one loveth gifts, and followeth after rewards: they [o]judge not the fatherless, neither doth the cause of the widow come unto them.

24 Therefore, saith the Lord, the [p]LORD of hosts, the [q]mighty One of Israel, Ah, [r]I will ease me of mine adversaries, and avenge me of mine enemies:

25 And [s]I will turn my hand upon thee, and purely[1] purge[t] away thy dross, and take away all thy tin:

26 And I will [u]restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning: afterward thou shalt be called, [v]The city of righteousness, The faithful city.

27 Zion [w]shall be redeemed with judgment, and her converts[2] with righteousness.

6 The great and solemn principle is here set forth, that religious formalism, however exact in observance, however scriptural its character, however imposing its ceremonial, is not merely valueless, but is absolutely hateful in the sight of a heart-searching God, when unaccompanied with true piety.—P.

active, upright, and faithful, and the people famed for righteousness in their dealings with men, and for their adherence to the covenant and worship of their God. Thus, through God's righteous execution of judgment upon the wicked and chiefly through the glorious righteousness of his Son, shall his true worshippers, Jews and Gentiles, be delivered from corruption and misery. 28–31. But dreadful and general shall be the ruin of obstinate sinners, who continue in their rebellion against God, and contempt of his worship and Son. Their idols and groves, instead of preserving them, shall add to their confusion and misery.—Deprived of every delight and every enjoyment, they and their idols shall, in the most easy, irresistible, and remediless manner, be destroyed by the sure judgment of God, procured by their sins.

Ver. 2. 'It is Jehovah that speaketh;' 'I have magnified and exalted children,' raised them to eminence in literature, arts, science, agriculture, commerce, and power. C.

Ver. 7. This passage cannot be regarded as literally applicable to any period during the life of Isaiah. It is prophetic rather than historical. It predicts a state of things which must inevitably result from sin and rebellion against God. The judgments are so certain that the prophet speaks of them as if already executed. The language is fearfully graphic, and the curse most terrible and comprehensive.—The country, fields and vineyards, plains and mountains, a desolation. The cities, including every inhabited spot, burned. The land, in all its produce and fruits, eaten up by strangers, and left like a wilderness. P.—Your country is desolation. The period to which this prophecy refers is not stated, but it cannot be referred to the reign of Uzziah, which was prosperous (2 Ch. xxvi.), but may well accord with that of the idolatrous Ahaz, 2 Ch. xxviii. C.

Ver. 8. Cucumbers of various kinds are in great repute in the East as articles of food, and consequently liable to depredations. Zion, in her ruined state, is compared to those temporary huts provided to protect the watchmen of the gardens, either in the heat of the day or dews of the night.—Note, Even the most prosperous countries have many ruins—objects of continual attraction to the traveller, the painter, or the poet. But there is scarcely a ruin in any land that is not a memorial of God's judgments against the kings and nobles, and churches and people, of other days—and a warning to those of present days to 'flee from the wrath to come.' C.

Ver. 10. In all countries, and in all ages of degeneracy, there has been a constant effort at mutual recrimination between 'rulers and people;' the rulers charging the people with insubordination and want of economy, the people charging the rulers with misgovernment and extravagance. Under the ominous names of rulers of Sodom, and people of Gomorrah, God rebukes and threatens both. C.

Ver. 12. Who hath required this? He does not mean, Who has required sacrifice: but, Who has required sacrifices from such impure worshippers? C.

Ver. 16. Wash you, make you clean. That is, 'in the blood of the Lamb,' Re. 7. 14. Neither is there cleansing or salvation in any other. C.

Ver. 18. White as snow that fell from heaven and never was trodden on or stained. White as wool that has been cleansed in water from all impurity. C.

Ver. 23. Gifts. 'Bribes.' The common and abiding curse of all eastern despotisms, in which justice is bought and sold as a common article of traffic; and one of the most portentous symptoms of degeneracy and signs of judgment that can ever infect any individual church or nation. C.

Ver. 25. The meaning is, that God himself, by his judgments, and the sanctifying power of his Spirit, would thoroughly purify his people, removing evil rulers, corrupt judges, and false principles, and developing righteousness and purity in heart, intellect, and social life. P.

Ver. 26. Spiritually this prediction has certainly been fulfilled, for the apostle expressly says, 1 Co. 5. 12: 'Do not ye judge them that are within?' See also 1 Co. 6. 1–5. But as the judgments were temporal, is there not reason to conclude that the blessing will also be temporal: and that Israel restored may yet literally have 'judges as at the first, and counsellors as at the beginning?' Lord, remember thy covenant, and hasten the time! C.

Ver. 30. 'The mention of trees and gardens, as places of idolatrous worship, suggests a beautiful comparison, under which the destruction of the idolaters is again set forth. They who choose trees and gardens, in preference to God's appointed place of worship, shall themselves be like trees and gardens, but in the most alarming sense. For, in answer to the tacit question why they should be ashamed and confounded for their oaks and gardens, ye yourselves shall be like an oak fading, decaying in its leaf, and like a garden which has no water,—a lively emblem, to an oriental reader, of entire desolation' (Alexander). P.

REFLECTIONS.—Prophets and ministers must always declare that will of God which themselves have seen and believed: and God often much diversifies the opportunities which he gives them to declare it. In the most awful manner both heaven and earth attest the importance of what he speaks, and the equity of what he inflicts. How horrid is ingratitude, notwithstanding mercies innumerable received! And shocking is the ignorance and thoughtlessness which are sometimes found among professors of the truth. When heinous corruptions become universal, inveterate, and highly aggravated, what can be expected but ruinous judgments, in which every act and form of wickedness will be resented! But desperate is their case who are hardened by both mercies and judgments, and to whom God ceases to be a reprover. It is a great mercy for a nation, universally ripe for ruin, to have yet a small number of eminent saints. Thrice happy are they who are of the number, and are by true faith preserved from going to hell with the multitude. The greatest enemies to the power of godliness are often the most rigid observers of the form; and men will flee to their most costly devotions for relief, while they cleave to the sins which are the cause of their misery. But nothing is more abominable to God than indulged hypocrisy in our devotions. Indulged sin is so odious sors and of the sinners shall be together, and they that forsake the LORD shall be consumed.

29 For [s]they shall be ashamed of the oaks which ye have desired, and ye shall be confounded for the gardens that ye have chosen.[4]

30 For [t]ye shall be as an oak whose leaf fadeth, and as a garden that hath no water.

31 And [u]the strong shall be as tow, and the maker of it[5] as a spark, and they shall both burn together, and none shall quench them.

CHAPTER II.

1 Isaiah prophesieth the coming of Christ's kingdom. 6 Wickedness is the cause of God's forsaking his people. 10 He exhorteth to fear, because of the powerful effects of God's majesty.

THE word[a] that Isaiah the son of Amoz saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem.

2 And [b]it shall come to pass in the last days, that [c]the mountain of the LORD's house shall be established[1] in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations[d] shall flow unto it.

3 And many people shall go and say, [e]Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he[g] will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for [h]out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.

4 And [i]he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: [j]and they shall beat their swords into plough-shares, and their spears into pruning-hooks:[2] nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

5 O house of Jacob, [k]come ye, and let us walk in the light of the LORD.[3]

6 ¶ Therefore thou hast [l]forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they be [m]replenished from[4] the east,[5] and are soothsayers like the Philistines, [n]and they please[6] themselves in the children of strangers.

7 Their[p] land also is full of silver and gold, neither is there any end of their treasures; their [q]land is also full of horses, neither is there any end of their chariots:

8 Their[r] land also is full of idols; they worship the work of their own hands, that which their own fingers have made:

9 And [s]the mean man boweth down, and the great man humbleth himself: therefore [7]forgive them not.[8]

10 ¶ Enter[t] into the rock, and hide thee in the dust, for fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majesty.

11 The [u]lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down, and the [v]LORD alone shall be exalted in that day.

12 For [w]the day of the LORD of hosts shall be upon every one that is proud and lofty, and upon every one that is lifted up, and he shall be brought low;

13 And upon all the [y]cedars of Lebanon that are high and lifted up, and upon all the oaks of Bashan,[9]

14 And [z]upon all the high mountains, and upon all the hills that are lifted up,

15 And upon every high tower, and upon every fenced wall,

16 And upon [a]all the ships of Tarshish, and upon all pleasant pictures.[1]

17 And[b] the loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men shall be made low; and the LORD alone shall be exalted in that day.

18 And[c] the idols he shall utterly abolish.[2]

19 And they shall go into the [d]holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth,[3] for fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majesty, when [e]he ariseth to shake terribly the earth.

20 In that day a man [g]shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold,[4] which they made each one for himself[5] to worship, to the moles and to the bats;[6] to him, that it renders all our prayers hateful in his sight.—What an extensive and laborious work is the real exercise of godliness! God, by the most gracious pardons, and the most full though merciful rewards, encourages us to it: and graciously he warns men before he strikes them with his judgments. But, alas! nothing is too horrid for apostate professors to commit. And injustice to men, especially the poor, marks magistrates and others as the detested enemies of God, whom he can easily destroy. Reformation and redemption are truly the work of God through the blood of his Son. In his great mercy he redeems believers, when the bulk by their choice perish in their sin. And no ruin is more certain and dreadful than of those who obstinately refuse and apostatize from Christ.

21 To [h]go into the clefts of the rocks, and into the tops of the ragged rocks, for fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth.

22 Cease[i] ye from man,[7] whose breath is in his nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of?

CHAPTER II. Ver. 2–5. In the apostolic and spiritual periods, the firmly established and never to be changed gospel church shall, in all kingdoms, be erected in the most visible manner, and people shall, by the faith and profession of Jesus Christ, enter into it as members. They shall earnestly stir up one another to attend upon the ordinances, and learn and embrace the doctrines of salvation, which began to be published at Jerusalem. And under conviction, conversion, and gracious government, Jesus Christ shall introduce spiritual peace and holy exercises, and even civil concord and virtuous industry, among the nations where murderous wars and idleness had long prevailed. —And may you, Jews, excited by your own preachers and by the Gentiles, cheerfully join yourselves, and partake of these blessed oracles, instructions, and comforts of the Lord Jesus Christ. 6–9. Provoked by their confederacies, and by their mingling themselves with the heathen; their imitation of the Chaldeans on the east and Philistines on the west in magic and divination; and by their insatiable heaping up of wealth, multiplication of horses and chariots, and of idols, and the worship thereof by all ranks,—the Lord has rejected the Jewish nation, and will not suffer them to escape unpunished. 10–17. Notwithstanding all the possible efforts they may make to escape his indignation, the Lord shall through his active providence find them, however high in station, mighty in power, abundant in wealth and trade, or comely in appearance. 18–21. Convinced of the vanity of their idols, they shall renounce them, or, desperately fleeing from the judgments of God, shall cast them from them.

Ver. 2. The last days. The meaning and commencement of the 'last days' is fixed by Peter, Ac. 2. 16–21, by means of the prophetic marks delivered by Joel, ch. 2. 28–32, within which days Joel places the restoration of the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem, ch. 3. 1. C.

Ver. 4. This prediction from ver. 2–4 is in exact correspondence with that in ch. 1. 26, 27. But the first prediction commences with the period when the country was overrun by enemies, and utterly impoverished and ruined, ch. 1. 7–9; whereas this prediction commences a little farther back, when this land was yet 'full of silver and gold,' no end of their treasures, no end of their chariots, ch. ii.: but rapidly advances to the same period of ruin, first in prophecy, ch. 2. 12 17, and in fulfilment, ch. 3. 1–8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—No dispensations of grace must be looked for after that which we at present enjoy. No oppression can hinder the flourishing of the church when the Lord rises up for her help: and no darkness nor error can hide her when Jesus manifests forth his glory. No remarkable fellowship with Christ must be expected but in the way of going upward. And it is comfortable that, amidst the present corruptions and contentions in the Christian church, we may look back-

VIEW FROM THE MOUNT OF BEATITUDES—SHOWING WHERE CHRIST DELIVERED THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT. [ISAIAH, ii : 3.]—"And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." Looking from the Mount of Beatitudes toward the east, we see beneath our feet Lake Galilee, the most beautiful body of water in the world, and then rising gloomy and solemn above it and beyond it, the mountains and hills which make up the Gadarene country. Mount Hermon to the north is in full view, and the whole horizon we take in from this point is filled with points connected with the history of modern civilization. Here was uttered the sermon, which by common consent of the human race, is put down as the wisest that ever fell from the lips of man. Here was the scene of the famous victory of Saladin over the Crusaders on July 5th, 1187.

EXTERIOR OF ST. PAUL'S—A BEAUTIFUL CHRISTIAN CHURCH IN THE CITY OF ROME, SAID TO STAND NEAR THE SPOT WHERE ST. PAUL WAS PUT TO DEATH. [ISAIAH, iv:4–6.]—In the three verses referred to above Christ is represented as cleansing, guiding, and preserving the church. The Lord is represented as creating upon every dwelling place of Mount Zion, and upon her assemblies, a cloud of smoke by day, and the shining of a flame of fire by night. There is to be a tabernacle for a shadow in the day time from the heat, and for a place of refuge and for a covert from storm and from rain. Without fear and without doubt the church may go forth in the discharge of its duty, relying upon the everlasting truth that God shall keep it safely. His mountains are to be round about Jerusalem henceforth and even forever more. The candlestick is not to be removed from out of its place. St. Paul's Church in Rome is but the continuation in modern times of the church which Isaiah referred to as the tabernacle in his day. This church stands just outside the walls of Rome.

the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plant:[6] and [n]he looked for judgment, but behold oppression;[7] for righteousness, but behold a cry.

8 ¶ Woe unto them [o]that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place, that they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth!

9 In mine ears,[8] said the LORD of hosts, Of[9] a truth many houses [p]shall be desolate, even great and fair, without inhabitant.

10 Yea, ten[1] acres of vineyard shall yield one bath, and the seed of an homer shall yield an ephah.[2]

11 ¶ Woe[q] unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink,[3] that continue until night, till wine inflame them![4]

12 And[r] the harp and the viol, the tabret and pipe, and wine, are in their feasts: but they regard[s] not the work of the LORD, neither consider the operation of his hands.

13 Therefore my people [t]are gone into captivity, because they have no knowledge;[5] and their honourable men are famished,[6] and their multitude dried up with thirst.

14 Therefore[u] hell[7] hath enlarged herself, and opened her mouth without measure: and their glory, and their multitude, and their pomp, and he that rejoiceth,[8] shall descend into it.

15 And [v]the mean man shall be brought down, and the mighty man shall be humbled, and the eyes of the lofty shall be humbled:

16 But the LORD of hosts [z]shall be exalted in judgment, and God that is holy[9] shall be sanctified in righteousness.

17 Then [y]shall the lambs feed after their manner, and the waste places of the [z]fat ones shall strangers eat.

18 ¶ Woe[a] unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart-rope:

19 That say, [b]Let him make speed,[1] and hasten his work, that we may see it; and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel draw nigh and come, that we may know it!

20 ¶ Woe unto them that call evil good,[2] and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!

22 Woe[d] unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink:

23 Which[e] justify the wicked for reward, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him!

24 Therefore as the fire[4] devoureth the stubble, and [g]the flame consumeth the chaff, so [h]their root shall be as rottenness, and their blossom shall go up as dust: because they have cast [t]away the law of the LORD of hosts, and despised the word of the Holy One of Israel.

25 Therefore[j] is the anger of the LORD kindled against his people, and he hath stretched forth his hand against them, and hath smitten them: and [k]the hills did tremble, and their carcasses were torn[5] in the midst of the streets. For [l]all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

26 ¶ And [n]he will lift up an ensign to the nations from far, and will hiss unto them from the end of the earth: and, behold, they shall come with speed swiftly:

27 None[o] shall be weary nor stumble among of the land, the estates of the wealthy wicked shall be given to others. 18, 19. Dreadful shall be the ruin of those who are so set upon their wickedness that they spare no expense nor labour to commit it, and scornfully defy JEHOVAH to ruin them by his threatened and purposed judgments. 20 And of those who approve and plead for what is wicked; and condemn, hate, disparage, and persecute what is good: 23. Or accuse and condemn the righteous as guilty; 24, 25. Therefore sudden and utter destruction shall seize upon them. 26-30. Easily determined by the providence of God, the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Romans shall rapidly, and with great success, fury, and cruelty, invade and waste their country; while both heaven and earth shall seemingly concur to render the condition of the inhabitants utterly desperate.

Ver. 1. Now will I sing. Who sings this 'song of loves?' Isaiah the prophet; as will appear from the commencement of ch. vi., where he evidently continues to speak, as here, in the first person. That it is in allusion to Ca. 8. 11 there can be no doubt. C.

Ver. 2. The following circumstances are worthy of special note. (1) The soil fruitful; the position a hill, Mat. 5. 14. (2) Fenced by providential care, holy laws, and vigilant inspection. (3) Stones carefully raised from the soil and gathered out, worldly obstructions removed, such as Egyptian bondage, Philistine invasion, heathen persecution, &c. (4) Planted with the choicest vine—the revelation of Jesus, Jn. 15. 1. (5) A tower for watch and defence: the revealed Word—the glorious headship of Christ over all things to the church—a standing ministry and gospel government. (6) A wine-press—reproof, correction, warning, exhortation, example, promises, with godly and holy discipline—all acting upon conscience in 'terrors of the Lord'—fears and hopes as needful. C.

Ver. 4. Brought it forth wild grapes? The choice vine would not bear wild grapes—some other plant must therefore have sprung up, as the tares among the wheat, Mat. 13. 27, 28. The plant called 'wild grapes' is generally supposed to be a species of the deadly-nightshade which grows profusely in Egypt and Palestine. C.

Ver. 8. It is worthy of solemn note, that covetousness of a field seems to have been the immediate temptation by which Satan entered and possessed the heart of Judas, Ac. 1. 18. C.

Ver. 12. They regard not, &c. Men commonly estimate sin only by its results in the amount of ostensible and immediate injury it brings upon themselves or others: God estimates it by its principle and root—forgetfulness of God, and its ultimate consequences, ruin, sometimes slow, but always certain, in time, and misery inevitable in eternity. C.

Ver. 16. Exalted and sanctified. Angels and men shall honour him for the righteous judgment he has executed, and acknowledge that he is holy in all his works and ways. C.

Ver. 17. Shall the lambs feed. God's people, who are as lambs, young, and unprotected, shall yet feed safely in green pastures, 'after the manner' of lambs, following their own spirit, without any enemy to affright or devour.—Shall strangers eat. Those Gentiles that were 'aliens and strangers' shall inherit the blessings that Israel has forfeited, Ro. 9. 30; 11. 17, 24; Ep. 2. 11, 12. C.

Ver. 18. Those who have read concerning the worship of Juggernaut in the East Indies, and the drawing of the idol's car by a rope grasped and pulled by the pilgrims, will perceive an apt illustration of this verse. C.

Ver. 23. The most remarkable example of this perversion of justice is to be found in the trial and condemnation of our Lord; and many subordinate examples in the cruel martyrdom of Christ's faithful witnesses by Jews, heathens, and nominal Christians. C.

Ver. 25. Hills did tremble. This may be an allusion to the great earthquake in the days of Uzziah, Am. 1. 1; Zec. 14. 5. Josephus relates that this earthquake was so violent as to divide a mountain to the west of Jerusalem, and carry one-half to a distance of five hundred paces. The hills may also be employed as emblems of men of exalted rank, destroyed in the disastrous overthrow of their country. C.

Ver. 26. Hiss. The original signifies to hiss, whistle, or shriek. Cyril states that, in his time, it was customary to collect bees by a shrill whistle, either to take them afield or to bring them home; and it is still said to be employed for the same purpose in Lithuania and Muscovy, countries abounding with bees. See Nature Displayed, vol. iii. p. 23, 12mo edition. C.

Ver. 30. In that day. That day here evidently means a day differing in its circumstances from each of the preceding days so named. Its special characteristic is invasion by a warlike people, ardent for war, admirably accoutred, fierce, ravenous, and irresistible—characteristics that seem fully to describe the Roman armies by whom the Jewish state was finally overturned under Titus, and by whom the people and the movable property of the whole land was borne off as the prey of the conquerors. C.

REFLECTIONS.—All the privileges that we enjoy, whether temporal or spiritual, ought to be viewed as coming from God. And highly favoured are those whom he renders his visible church, and on whom he bestows the ordinances and influences of his grace. But how highly criminal and provoking is it to God if, instead of eminent piety and virtue, they abandon themselves to the most abominable errors and corruptions? Corrupt professors will often go the most fearful lengths in impiety and vice when left to their own hearts' lusts. Nothing is so base, so horrid, but they will become shameless and bold in it. But the most terrible woes are annexed to presumptuous sinning: and awfully correspondent to men's sins are the divine punishments thereof! While God glorifies himself and protects his people, the disdainful imprecators of his judgments are often answered by the rapid, terrible, and ruinous execution thereof. Let the British nation tremble, lest this chapter, which so plainly exhibits the mercies of God to them, and their sins against him, should have its threatenings verified in their utter destruction!

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 1. Christ's train, or skirts, may denote his glorious influences filling his manhood or his church. 2. The winged seraphim, or burning ones, may denote angels, zealous, active, and humble them; none shall slumber nor sleep; neither shall the [p]girdle of their loins be loosed, nor the latchet of their shoes be broken:

28 Whose[q] arrows are sharp, and all their bows bent; their horses' hoofs shall be counted like flint, and their wheels like a whirlwind:

29 Their[r] roaring shall be like a lion, they shall roar like young lions; yea, they shall roar, and lay hold of the prey, and shall carry it away safe, and none shall deliver it.

30 And in that day they shall roar against them, [s]like the roaring of the sea: and if one look unto the land, [t]behold darkness and sorrow,[6] and [7]the light is darkened in the heavens thereof.[8]

CHAPTER VI.

1 Isaiah, in a vision of the Lord in his glory, 5 being terrified, is confirmed for his message. 9 He showeth the obstinacy of the people unto their destruction. 13 A remnant shall be saved.

IN the[a] year that king Uzziah died I [b]saw also the [c]LORD sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his [1]train[2] filled the temple.

2 Above it [d]stood [e]the seraphims: each one had six [g]wings; with twain he covered his [h]face, and with twain he covered his [i]feet, and with twain he did [j]fly.

3 And one cried[k] unto another,[3] and said, Holy,[l] holy, holy is the LORD of hosts: [m]the whole earth is full of his glory.[4]

4 And the posts of the door[5] moved[o] at the voice of him that cried, and the house was filled with [p]smoke.

5 ¶ Then said I, [q]Woe is me! for I am undone;[6] because I am a man of [r]unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the [s]King, the LORD of hosts.

6 Then [t]flew one of the seraphims unto me,

12 And the LORD [k]have removed men far away, and there be a great forsaking in the midst of the land.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Ahaz, being troubled with fear of Rezin and Pekah, is comforted by Isaiah. 10 Ahaz, having liberty to choose a sign, and refusing it, hath Christ promised for a sign. 17 God's judgments are prophesied to come upon Judah by Assyria.

AND it came to pass in the days of [a]Ahaz the son of Jotham, the son of Uzziah, king of Judah, that Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel, [1]went up toward Jerusalem to war against it, but could not prevail against it.[2] attendants of God, and his instruments in the dispensations of Providence; or zealous, active, and humble ministers of Christ. Their covering their face denotes their inability to comprehend the glorious nature and mysteries of God; their covering their feet imports their being ashamed of their best services before God. 6, 7. The live coal taken from the altar, denotes the powerful, quickening, and heart-inflaming word of the gospel, as coming from and through Jesus as our atoning sacrifice. 9, 10. Go, warn this people of their dreadful danger in using the outward means of grace to their own hurt: go, and with the utmost diligence instruct, exhort, rebuke, and threaten them; though abandoned by me to their own lusts, they will abuse all thy pains to render themselves more stupid, careless, unteachable, and obstinate, and so effectually prevent their own forgiveness, conversion, repentance, or reformation. 13. Yet notwithstanding the wretched case to which the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, and Romans shall reduce the nation, a remnant shall be found who shall, in due time, gladly seek the Lord. See introduction, ch. iv. sec. xviii.

Ver. 1. Many commentators think this chapter should be placed first, as they conceive the foregoing prophecies must have been delivered at least as late as the reign of Ahaz. That they describe the days of Ahaz there can scarcely be a doubt: but that they were not delivered till then there is no reason to conclude. In ch. 1. 1 they are expressly called 'a vision,' the nature of which is to describe things future as if they were actually accomplished: because they were visibly represented to the eyes of the prophet. The word was in this verse seems to affirm that the previous vision was in an earlier part of the reign of Uzziah. C.

Ver. 2. Seraphims. Derived from a word signifying 'to burn,' a phrase currently applied to love, zeal, eloquence, and intense delight; thus, 'ardent love, ardent zeal,'—'words that burn,' 'did not our hearts burn,' are everyday expressions. In either or in all of these modes may the seraphs burn, or even in some other, to us, still unrevealed. C.

Ver. 5. The King. 'The King' foretold, Ps. 2. 6. 'The King' described, Ps. 45. 1. 'The King of glory,' Ps. 24. 10. By which familiar name the prophet acknowledges the LORD OF HOSTS. That the prophet in the vision saw Christ in human form there can be no doubt, when the passage is deliberately compared with Jn. 12. 41. C.

Ver. 7. It will be observed that the live coal is taken from the altar. It was therefore part of the sacrificial fire. When it touched his lips his iniquity was taken away. There is therefore the idea of atonement. The meaning of the symbol is that the virtue of the sacrifice is imparted: an atoning work is completed. The great sacrifice of Christ, and its application to his people by the quickening power—the baptism by fire—of the Spirit of God, is here beautifully symbolized. P.

Ver. 10. Make the heart of this people fat, &c. That is, there are a people so unclean that the Lord, for punishment of their sin, delivers them over to judicial deafness and blindness: and commissions the prophet, by the preaching of the truth, to execute this righteous sentence upon a people who loved lies. See note on the hardening of Pharaoh's heart, Ex. 4. 21. C.

Ver. 13. 'And yet in it shall be (left) a tenth; and it shall recover (and serve for pasture) as the elm and the oak, which, when they cast their leaves, have the sap in them; so an holy seed shall be the sap thereof,' (Slack. De Dieu).—Teil-tree. Supposed the lime-tree. C.—Yet, after all the trials and desolations, a tenth, a very small and feeble remnant, shall remain in the country: and even this tenth shall be given up to destruction ('shall return to be eaten'), but not to utter destruction, for even as the oak and terebinth when cut down and but stumps remain, have still vitality in them, so shall the small remnant of the holy seed, the people of Israel, be. P.

REFLECTIONS.—O the infinite, the awful, the amiable glories of our Immanuel. Thrice happy are his servants, who stand in his presence, and triumph in his praise! And blessed be God that his glory has, or shall fill the whole earth; and that faithful ministers and established angels vie with one another in his work. —Clear views of JEHOVAH'S perfections effectually humble the very best of men, and make them to look on themselves, and all around them, as inexpressibly mean, loathsome, and guilty. And God, by such deep humiliation, prepares men for great honours! Thrice happy are those ministers whom God has prepared for their work by the most humbling views of his glory, and the most powerful applications of his heart-cleansing and quieting promises! Great is the importance of a call to the ministerial office. And, alas! infinite is the hazard of such as without this, for the sake of honour or gain, treacherously pretend to be the ambassadors of Christ! But how dreadful is it when the clearest call, and the most faithful execution of it, do but issue in the aggravated wickedness and ruin of the hearers! Not the best of gospel ministrations can avail with sinners without the blessing of God and the almighty operation of his Spirit. And if spiritual judgments begin, we may look for temporal to follow.—But blessed be God that, for his own love and the preservation of the world, he finds faithful a remnant of real saints who, though in winters of adversity seem dead, yet again revive as the corn, grow as the lily, and bring forth fruit to his glory.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 4. Rezin and Pekah, and their armies and kingdoms, are called tails of smoking firebrands, because, notwithstanding their present ing, Syria is [3]confederate with Ephraim:[4] and his heart was [a]moved, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind.

3 Then said the LORD unto Isaiah, Go forth now to meet Ahaz, thou, and Shear-jashub[5] thy son, at the end of the [d]conduit of the upper pool, in the highway[6] of the fuller's field;[7]

4 And say unto him, [e]Take heed, and be quiet; fear not, neither[8] be faint-hearted for the two tails[9] of these [g]smoking[1] firebrands, for the fierce anger of Rezin with Syria, and of the son of Remaliah.

5 Because[h] Syria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah, have [i]taken evil counsel against thee, saying,

6 Let us go up against Judah, and vex it,[2] and let us make a breach therein for us, and set a king in the midst of it, even the son of Tabeal:[3]

7 Thus saith the Lord GOD, [j]It shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass.

8 For[k] the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and within threescore[l] and five years[4] shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people.[5]

9 And [m]the head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is Remaliah's son. [o]If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established.[6]

10 ¶ Moreover,[7] the LORD spake again unto Ahaz, saying,

11 Ask[p] thee a sign of the LORD thy God; ask it either in the depth,[8] or in the height above.

12 But Ahaz said, [q]I will not ask, neither will [r]I tempt the LORD.

13 And he said, Hear ye now, [s]O house of David, Is it a small thing for you to [t]weary men, but will ye [u]weary my God also?

threatening to destroy all before them, they themselves were quickly to be extinguished in ruin. 7–9. The power of Syria and Israel shall never be advanced further than at present: and by the twenty-second year of Manasseh shall the Israelites be wholly carried captive. 15. And as a child partaking of a real manhood, he shall live on common fare. 16. Within two years shall the present kings of Syria and Israel be both cut off. 18. The Egyptians are represented as blood-sucking flies, and the Assyrians as stinging and all-collecting bees, in allusion to the swarms of those insects in Egypt and Assyria. 19–25. Roused by the providence of God, and rewarded with spoil, they shall overspread the whole country, and cut off persons of all ranks, high and low, and render the once so fertile country a waste and uncultivated soil, for briers and thorns, and the residence of robbers and wild beasts, few persons or tame cattle being left therein.

Ver. 6. Tabeal. Who Tabeal was, and who his son was, is unknown: it is most probable, however, that he was some factious pretender to the throne of Judah, and related to the blood royal, either of Ahab or of Pekah. C.

Ver. 12. Ahaz here affects humility and piety: but in reality possesses neither: for as the Lord had directed him to ask the sign, though humility would have acknowledged unworthiness, piety would gratefully have accepted the offered evidence. C.

Ver. 14. Behold, the virgin shall conceive. This prophecy could not be intended for Hezekiah, who was now a young man: neither can it be applied to any of the sons of Isaiah, for none of them ever ascended the throne, as this child of promise evidently did, ch. 9.7. C.

Ver. 16. Before the child shall know. That is, before the child, when born, shall know to distinguish between good and evil, 'the land which thou hatest (Syria and Israel) shall be forsaken of both her kings.' And far within the lowest period allowed for intellectual development was all fulfilled; for Isaiah prophesied about 740 B.C.: and Tiglath destroyed Syria, 2 Ki. 16. 9, and slew Rezin, about 738 B.C.—Hoshea slew Pekah, the king of Israel, about 737 B.C., 2 Ki. 15. 30 (Macfarlane's Script. Chron.).—And thus, within a period of about three years, was all this denunciation fulfilled. C.

Ver. 18. See note on ch. 5. 26. Roberts, however, asserts that the ancient Asiatic nations never kept bees in hives, or under any artificial management, as Cyril's statement implies. Still Cyril's description of customs in times so near his own, seems evidence preferable to any deduction from mere modern observation. C.

REFLECTIONS.—To what alarming terrors, what murderous and destructive invasions and wars, does sin expose men! And while judgments ordinarily begin at the house of God, one guilty nation is made the scourge of another, and then quickly perishes itself! Severe, seasonable, free, and often unasked, are God's interposals for the relief and comfort of men. And if he be on our side, we need not fear the most furious adversaries. No plot, no attempt to frustrate his promises, can fail to issue in the sudden ruin of its authors. And the most proud and boastful are ordinarily the least successful in their enterprises. But faith in his promise is necessary to the establishment of our heart while they rage or reign. What kindness God shows to some wicked men for the sake of their ancestors, though with specious pretexts of regard they often refuse the favours of God, that they may depend on an arm of flesh! But with earnestness and boldness ought we to avouch the Lord for our God, when others refuse their claim. Amidst the deepest distress, infallible are the securities, and strong the consolations, which are derived from Jesus Christ and his connections with us. God easily finds instruments fitted to execute his judgment upon obstinate sinners. And none are more readily chosen by him than those whom we have idolized, and confided on, in his stead. Yea, alas! terrible is the judgment that falls at last upon corrupt professors. Their barrenness under the means of grace, and fruitfulness in wickedness, curse, blast, and desolate the very earth on which they live!

DAMASCUS FROM SALAHIYEH, THE HEAD OF SYRIA. [ISAIAH, vii : 8.]—Damascus is, beyond any doubt, the most attractive city as to its natural features to be found in the East. There is more in Damascus that takes hold of the imagination than in any other city. To its natural features, which are so rare and remarkable as to lift it out of classification with other places, is added its great antiquity and its wonderful historic interest. These render a time of sojourn here a perpetual delight. The population, the rivers, divided in channels, flowing through part of the city, coffee gardens, people from the desert mingling with rich merchants in their flowing gowns, all together make up a picture such as the eye never beholds elsewhere.

"Damascus, daughter of Abana's stream,
How beauteous still are thy enchanting bowers;
Thy gardens that with fruits unnumbered teem,
The perfumes that exhale from loveliest flowers.
Thy native charms defy the gliding hours,
But mar, alas, the work that man hath made."

A STREET IN NAZARETH—WHERE MARY, THE MOTHER OF JESUS, LIVED, AND WHERE CHRIST WAS BROUGHT UP. [ISAIAH, vii : 14.]—"Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." Nazareth, where Mary, the mother of Jesus, lived, and where Christ was brought up, is dearer to the Christian heart than any other place on earth, except Jerusalem. It was a small and obscure village in the Old Testament times, and is not even mentioned by name, nor even by the historian Josephus. Yet, from the fact that Christ was brought up here, it receives an interest and a significance which have led pilgrims to visit it for the past 2000 years. According to ancient records, it never rose to distinction until the time of the crusades. It was then made the seat of a bishopric. It is now the chief town of this district. It is also larger and more prosperous than in any former period of its history.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 In Maher-shalal-hash-baz, he prophesieth that Syria and Israel shall be subdued by Assyria: 5 Judah likewise for their infidelity. 9 God's judgments shall be irresistible. 11 Comfort shall be to them that fear God. 19 Great afflictions to idolaters.

MOREOVER, the LORD said unto me, [a]Take thee a great roll,[1] and write in it with a [2]man's [3]pen[4] concerning Maher-shalal-hash-baz.[5]

2 And I took unto me faithful witnesses to record, [b]Uriah the priest, and Zechariah the son of Jeberechiah.

3 And I went unto[6] the prophetess; and she conceived, and bare a son: then said the LORD to me, [c]Call his name Maher-shalal-hash-baz:

4 For[d] before the child shall have knowledge to cry, My father, and my mother, the riches of Damascus, and the spoil of Samaria, shall be taken away before the king of Assyria.[7]

5 ¶ The LORD spake also unto me again, saying,

6 Forasmuch as this people [e]refuseth the waters of [g]Shiloah that go softly, and [h]rejoice in Rezin and Remaliah's son;

7 Now therefore, behold, [i]the LORD bringeth up upon them the waters of the river, strong and many, even the king of Assyria and all his glory: and he shall come up over all his channels, and go over all his banks.

8 And[j] he shall pass through Judah: he shall overflow and go over; he shall reach even to the neck;[8] and the stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy [k]land,[9] O[l] Immanuel.

9 ¶ Associate[m] yourselves, O ye people,[1] and[2] ye shall be broken in pieces; and give ear, all ye of far countries: gird yourselves, and ye shall be broken in pieces; gird yourselves, and ye shall be broken in pieces.

10 Take[o] counsel together, and it shall come to nought; speak the word, and it shall not stand: [p]for God is with us.

11 ¶ For the LORD spake thus to me with a strong hand,[3] and [q]instructed me, that I should not walk in the way of this people, saying, 12 Say[r] ye not,[4] A confederacy, to all them to whom this people shall say, A confederacy; [s]neither fear ye their fear,[5] nor be afraid.

13 Sanctify[t] the LORD of hosts himself; and let him be your [u]fear, and let him be your dread.

14 And he shall be for [v]a sanctuary; but for a [z]stone of stumbling, and for a rock of offence, to both the houses of Israel, for a gin and for a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

15 And [y]many among them shall stumble, and fall, and be broken, and be snared, and be taken.

16 Bind[z] up[6] the [a]testimony, [b]seal the law among [c]my disciples.

17 And I will [d]wait upon the LORD, that [e]hideth his face from the house of Jacob, and I will look for him.

18 Behold,[g] I and the children whom the LORD hath given me are for [h]signs and for wonders in Israel from the LORD of hosts, which dwelleth in mount Zion.

CHAPTER VIII. Ver. 6, 7 may either relate to the Israelites, who despised the now weak family of David; or to those Jews who despised their own governors, and, not content with their own weak armies, insisted upon calling in the Assyrian troops, and who rejected Christ.—The Assyrians are called the waters of the river, because they came from the river Euphrates in great multitudes, and wasted and destroyed the nations and countries whithersoever they came. 8. The Assyrian army ravaged the whole land of Judea in a rapid and resistless manner (where Immanuel was born, lived, and died), up to Jerusalem the capital. 9, 10. The Syrians, Israelites, and other enemies of God's church, may consult, confederate, collect, and march armies as they will, Immanuel her King shall make their attempts to issue in their own ruin. 12–15. Neither depend on the confederacy of Judah with the Assyrians or Egyptians, nor be terrified at the confederacy of the Syrians and Israelites, or any other, against Judah, but glorify the Lord, by a believing dependence on, holy fear, and sincere worshipping of him: so shall he protect and comfort you, while multitudes of your brethren, through their rejection of him and his Messiah, shall be insnared and ruined. 16–18. While but a few believers will understand, cleave to, and improve God's revelations, I will, by faith, look for the fulfilment of them in the Lord's gracious return to and favour towards his people, and in the manifestation of his Son. And, lo, I and my son and disciples, as well as Jesus Christ and his people, are, and will be, amidst the admiration of some, and the derision of others, God's appointed pledges and tokens of his infallible fulfilment of his promises and threatenings.—19, 20. Should not we, in our distress, seek to our infinitely gracious, wise, and powerful God! Should we, who are living, apply for relief to dead idols or men, instead of the living God? No: God's Word is the sole standard of our direction, instruction, and comfort; and if any direct otherwise, it is owing to their being destitute of all saving knowledge. 21, 22. And instead of prospering, they and their followers shall be driven from their dwellings, famished with hunger, and filled with anguish, till they curse their king for calling in or rebelling against the Assyrians; and their idols for disappointing their hopes, and the true God for inflicting his judgments. And whether they look towards heaven or earth, they shall see nothing but perplexity and trouble, and thus be reduced to despair.

Ver. 1. Roll. When the ancients wrote either upon parchment or the Egyptian papyrus, their custom was to roll up the document; and this practice was evidently before the mind of the translators. The word, however, does not come from a root signifying to roll, but to make clear by rubbing or polishing. It therefore signifies a tablet of polished metal, marble, or wood. C.

Ver. 6. The fountain of Shiloah, or Siloam, is situated in a deep cave at the eastern base of Mount Moriah. Its waters flow with a gentle murmuring current through a subterranean channel, and fall into a large open pool on the southern slope of Moriah. This fountain was an emblem of the quiet, peace, and security of Israel under the beneficent rule of Jehovah; and it is brought into strong contrast with the rushing torrent of the Euphrates, which is made to represent the conquests and desolations of the armies of Assyria. P.

Ver. 8. Wings. Probably a reference to the Assyrian standard, which was a bird; or the prophet views Assyria as a bird of prey, hovering over the devoted country, and ready to descend upon its victim. C.

Ver. 11. Spake to me with a strong hand. That is, when his hand was strongly urging me on to do his work—when I was fully and irresistibly under the influence of divine inspiration. A prophetic impulse is frequently represented in the Word of God as being produced by the laying of his hand on the prophet. Thus in Eze. 3. 14 and 2 Ki. 3. 15. P.

Ver. 13. The Lord of hosts, whom the prophet saw in vision, ch. vi., is evidently the LORD JESUS CHRIST, 'God manifest in the flesh,' and to him this prophecy is applied throughout the New Testament. And HE, and not Isaiah, is the speaker in this prophecy. C.

Ver. 14. An alternative is set before the people in ver. 13 and 14. If they would acknowledge the Lord, if they would fear and venerate him, then would he be to them a sanctuary, a place of refuge and perfect security. If, on the other hand, they would not fear or acknowledge him, then would he be to them as a rock against which they would be dashed, and as a snare in which they would be entrapped. P.

Ver. 16. Bind up, rather, engrave. Seal: but, at the same time, note that this binding up and sealing show that the contents are 'hid from the wise and prudent' of this world, till God be pleased to reveal them 'to babes,' 'among my disciples'—the disciples of Messiah. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great is the importance of the oracles of God! Thrice worthy to be written in our heart!—But what changes, troubles, and wars, sin exposes men to in this world! Quickly they, who disturbed and spoiled others, are plagued in their turn. And who knows for what havoc the wealth, or the children we dote on, may be reserved. Men never refuse God's comforts, but they take up with ruinous plagues instead of them. Thrice happy is it, in days of distress, to be the property and people of the blessed Immanuel, and to have him the uplifter of our head, when the waters of trouble swell to the neck! To have him on our side, and his promise for us, will effectually crush every attempt that hell and earth can make against us.—But an almighty power is necessary to enable the best avoid fashionable evils, and disregard the fear and help of men, and depend only upon Christ! Safety, holiness, and honour are fully to be found in him, but in him alone! For, alas! fearful is their destruction who reject and are offended in him! Great is the mercy, that in the worst of times he has so fixed his oracles in his church and in his people's hearts! And with pleasure may those who have experienced the power thereof, wait for him, notwithstanding the most terrible troubles around, and loads of reproach upon them. Though God hide himself, and afflict his church, he will never leave her. But, alas! great is the folly and guilt, and tremendous the ruin, of those who consult with devils, with lusts, with wicked men, instead of Jesus and his Word, which is confirmed by his oath, and ratified in his blood!

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 1–7. The distress of Judah, under the Assyrian ravages or the Chaldean captivity, shall not be so dismal and lasting as the captivity of the ten tribes. They shall quickly be surprised with a glorious deliverance, a vast increase, amazing consolations, and perfect freedom from bondage: for God, to pave the way for the incarnation and kingdom of his Son, shall, not by the common forms of war, but by a fearful plague, destroy their Assyrian or other enemies. And as God has debased Canaan by the repeated invasions of heathen troops, so he will glorify it by the unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep, and that mutter: [j]should not a people seek unto their God? for the living to the dead?[7]

20 To[k] the law and to the testimony:[8] if they speak not according to this word,[9] it is because there is no light[1] in them.

21 And [l]they shall pass through it, hardly bestead and hungry: and it shall come to pass, that, when they shall be hungry, they shall fret[n] themselves, and curse their king and their God, and look upward.

22 And[o] they shall look unto the earth; and behold trouble and darkness, dimness of anguish; and they shall be driven to darkness.

CHAPTER IX.

1 What joy shall be in the midst of afflictions by the birth and kingdom of Christ. 8 The judgments upon Israel for their pride, 13 for their impenitency, 18 and for their wickedness.

NEVERTHELESS the [c]dimness shall not be such as was in her [b]vexation, when [1]at the first he lightly afflicted the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali, and afterward did more grievously afflict her by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, in Galilee of the nations.

2 The[c] people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined.

3 Thou hast [d]multiplied the nation, and not[2] increased[e] the joy: they joy before thee [g]according to the joy in harvest, and as men rejoice when they divide the spoil.

4 For thou hast [h]broken[3] the yoke of his burden, and the staff of his shoulder, the rod of his oppressor, as in the day of [i]Midian.

5 For[4] every battle of the warrior is with confused noise, and garments rolled in blood; but this shall be [j]with burning and fuel of fire.

6 For [k]unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and [l]the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name [n]shall be called Wonderful, [o]Counsellor, [p]The mighty God, [q]The everlasting Father, [r]The Prince of Peace.

7 Of[s] the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it [t]with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. [u]The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this.

8 ¶ The LORD sent [v]a word into Jacob, and it hath lighted upon Israel.

9 And all the people shall [z]know, even Ephraim, and the inhabitant of Samaria, that [y]say in the pride and stoutness of heart,

10 The[z] bricks are fallen down, but we will build with hewn stones; the sycamores are cut down, but we will change them into cedars.[5]

11 Therefore the LORD [a]shall set up the adversaries of Rezin against him,[6] and join[7] his enemies together;

12 The[b] Syrians before, and the Philistines behind; and they shall devour Israel with open mouth.[8] For[c] all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

13 ¶ For the people [d]turneth not unto him that smiteth them, neither do they seek the LORD of hosts:

14 Therefore the LORD will cut off from Israel [e]head and tail, branch and rush, in one [g]day.

15 The ancient and honourable, he is the head; and the [g]prophet that teacheth lies, he is the tail.

16 For[h] the leaders of this people[1] cause them to err; and they that are led of them[2] are destroyed.[3]

17 Therefore[i] the LORD shall have no joy in their young men, neither shall have mercy on their fatherless and widows: for every one is an [j]hypocrite and an evil-doer, and every mouth speaketh folly.[4] For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

18 ¶ For wickedness [k]burneth as the fire: it instructive and comforting gospel ministrations of his Son and his apostles. Multitudes shall be converted to Christ, and great shall be their spiritual joy, freedom, and victories over their lusts, through the influence of the Holy Ghost; for the Son of God, born in our nature, and given to us, having all power given him in heaven and in earth, shall manifest himself in his wonderful excellencies, offices, and relations, in the erection and government of the gospel church; JEHOVAH'S love to him and the people, and his everlasting love, shall secure the accomplishment of this.—8–10. The Lord has denounced a threatening against the Israelites, the accomplishment of which they shall quickly feel, who proudly boast that, though the Assyrians have demolished their houses, they will build better ones. 11, 12. The Lord shall stir up the Assyrians, together with the enlisted Syrians on the east, and the Philistines on the west (who had lately assisted them against Judah), and they shall make an almost utter end of them: and after all, the judgments of God shall be further inflicted upon them. 14. The Lord will destroy multitudes of all ranks. 18. Their outrageous wickedness has fitted them for ruin, and shall be punished in the destruction of both small and great. 19 21. Amidst their terrible distress they shall restlessly plunder, oppress, and murder one another.

Ver. 1. 'But there shall not hereafter be darkness in the land which was distressed.' Lowthe. 'For as in the former time, he debased the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali: so, in the latter time, he will make glorious the way of the sea, along the Jordan, even Galilee of the nations.' Boothroyd.——The concluding verses of the eighth chapter describe a time of almost universal trouble and darkness. The first verse of ch. ix. indicates a change. Light would dawn in due season. It would shine principally on the dark regions of Zebulun and Naphtali, which were much exposed to foreign invasion. The dawn of the new light is connected with the birth of the child promised in ver. 6, 7. The second clause of ver. 1 may be thus translated: 'And afterward did more grievously afflict the country of the sea-coast (the coast of the Sea of Galilee), Peraea, Galilee of the Gentiles.' The ultimate and perfect fulfilment of this prophecy was in the time of our Lord, when he preached and laboured on the shores of the Galilean lake. P.

Ver. 3. Not increased the joy. Eleven of Kennicott's, and six of De Rossi's MSS., for 'not increased' read 'it increased;' which these high authorities, and the sense of the passage, seem to require. Lowth translates it 'increased their joy.' C.

Ver. 4. His burden. The grammar of the passage seems to refer this deliverance, not to the nation, but to 'the Prince,' ver. 6, who 'in all their affliction had been afflicted.' See ch. 53. 7; 63. 9; Ps. 25. 16; Col. 1. 24.—Staff of his shoulder. The staff whereon eastern slaves still continue to bear burdens. C.

Ver. 5. 'For the greaves (the leg armour) of the warrior in the battle, and the garments saturated with blood, shall be for burning, even fuel for the fire.' That is, dealt with as things accursed of God, as were the spoils of Jericho, Jos. 6. 17—emblematic of the blessed time when men shall be cleansed from covetousness (see Jos. 7. 21), and 'shall learn war no more.' C.

Ver. 6. The everlasting Father. Or, 'Father, author of the future or everlasting age,' the Christian dispensation (Lowth). C.

Ver. 8. This is evidently a new subject—a word of warning and judgment to a portion of God's people—called Jacob as heirs of promise in hope, Israel as mighty princes in possession. It lighted as an arrow from the bow, as a javelin from the arm of a mighty warrior. C.

Ver. 17. The universality of corruption in the days of Noah afforded the chief argument to the world against the power of his preaching. And that one alone, or a very few, should be right, and all others, the whole world, with a two or three disregarded exceptions, should be wrong, to the natural man seems impossible. The same argument was urged against our Lord and his apostles. The same argument was urged against the reformers, and the same argument will continue to be urged so long as men are pleased to 'follow a multitude to do evil.' C.

Ver. 19. The wrath of the Lord of hosts. Many have expressed much dissatisfaction at the ascription of wrath to God. They do so on the ignorant, at least the thoughtless supposition, that there can be no wrath but sinful wrath. Alas! do these objectors neither see, nor know, that whether it come from the east or from the west, 'evil pursueth sinners?' And the holy principle of the divine mind and government, by which that evil is righteously inflicted upon the guilty, is all that the Scriptures mean when they speak of the 'wrath of the Lord.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—God ordinarily tries men with lesser judgments before he inflicts such as are more severe. But it bodes well to a place when God sends to it the light of the gospel. And no load of adversity is so heavy, but Christ's presence can alleviate and his power deliver from it. Thrice happy are those ignorant sinners whose minds he enlightens in the knowledge of himself! They may enjoy much solid and spiritual joy, freedom, and victory, even when they weep and lament. Unbounded are the excellencies, high the dignities, sweet the relations, and savoury the names of that Immanuel whom God has freely given to us sinful

† There could be no more graphic and fearful picture of the state of disorganization in which the country would be involved by sin than that given here. Ephraim and Manasseh were brethren. men! O the infinite zeal of JEHOVAH to honour his Son, and to promote the welfare of his church! Rejoice in these things, my soul—and again rejoice.—God shall make every opposer effectually to know the power of his wrath. But those ripen fast for ruin who continue proud and impenitent under great distress; and whom neither cords of love can draw, nor afflicting rods can drive, to their duty. Hypocrisy towards God, and villany towards men, ordinarily meet together. And none are in God's sight more abominable miscreants than unfaithful ministers. But general concurrence in wickedness issues in general calamities upon all ranks. And often they, whom we make our partners in sin, or in whom we have trusted, are made the distinguished instruments of our ruin.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 1–4. Dreadful shall be the punishment of you Hebrews, who make unjust laws, and pass unjust sentences, and who obstruct the course of justice, that such as are poor cannot have right done them. What will ye do when the Lord shall punish your nation by the desolating ravages of the Assyrians? Who will then assist you, or secure your power and wealth for you? Revolted from me, and deprived of my help, ye shall be rendered more miserable than others who are taken captives or murdered.—5–11, 13–15. And dreadful shall be the ruin of the Assyrians, whom I have now appointed to punish you Jews for your hypocrisy and profaneness, by pillaging your country, and murdering and enslaving many of you. The Assyrian monarch, ignorant of my providence, merely intends to gratify his own lust of dominion; and boasts that as he, by his own wisdom and bravery, has conquered many powerful nations already, and seized on their wealth, he will do the same to Jerusalem, let her God do what he can to resist him; since therefore he, who is merely an instrument in my hand, thus insults me, 12, 16–19. Whenever I have sufficiently chastised my own people of Judah, I will punish his pride, and by a fearful plague cut off most of his huge army in one night, commander and commanded together. 20–33. Then, as well as at the deliverance from Babylon, and in the gospel periods, shall the Jews be weaned from their carnal dependencies on Assyrians, Egyptians, or others; and shall, by faith and repentance, return to their Almighty God and Saviour. And notwithstanding the vast numbers of Hebrews, a mere remnant shall survive the repeated desolations of their country, wherewith I have determined to punish them. 24–27. Fear not, therefore, ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, when the Assyrians shall ravage your land, and, like Pharaoh at the Red Sea, threaten to swallow up your whole nation. Quickly will I remove the tokens of my anger from you, in destroying the Assyrian army by a fearful stroke, similar to that by which the Egyptians were destroyed in the Red Sea, or the Midianites destroyed by Gideon. And in that day, from regard to my promise of royalty with David, from regard to king Hezekiah, and chiefly from regard to the Messiah, will I completely deliver you from all subjection to them. 28–34. The Assyrians shall indeed, to the great terror of the nation, march up almost to the very walls of Jerusalem: but there will I, the almighty Conductor of armies, cut off by death most of Sennacherib's captains and valiant troops, and reduce his forest-like multitude to a despicable remnant.

Ver. 5. 'Woe to the Assyrian' (Boothroyd) appointed to execute judgment—God overruling his blind ambition, ver. 7, to effect his correctional purposes upon ungrateful and idolatrous Israel. C.

Ver. 11. Several ancient eastern monarchs, as Cambyses, king of Persia, have been most zealously opposed to idol-worship. And it seems most probable that this zeal, if not the principle, was at least the pretext, for undertaking the invasion of Israel. C.

Ver. 14. My hand hath found . . . the riches of the people. Wars have often been waged for mere purposes of spoliation and robbery. Even in modern times, when civilization is supposed to have effected a wonderful march of improvement, nations have been stripped of their noblest monuments of art to adorn the capital and minister to the vanity of a conqueror. But let nations beware of indulging the spirit of vainglory, boasting, or covetousness: the God that chastised Israel, that humbled Assyria, and annihilated Babylon, still sits in heaven, and rules amongst the children of men.—As one gathereth eggs that are left. Not forsaken, but left for a time by a bird flushed from her nest.—Peeped. But though the timid bird, moved by instinctive love, will flutter the wing, open her mouth (beak), and peep (chirp) in anxiety for her eggs or callow young; no man, no nation, was found bold enough to offer the shadow of resistance to my victorious progress! Such is the soliloquy of victorious pride—blind to the fall it must soon experience from a Providence disregarded or denied. C.

Ver. 19. The glory of the forest is already consumed, ver. 18; and the rest, instead of being as rising copse-woods that supply by multitude of shoots the absence of full-grown trees, shall be so thinly scattered that a very child could number them. C.

Ver. 20. That day. That is, upon the day 'when the Lord hath performed his whole work upon Mount Zion and upon Jerusalem,' ver. 12; a day of which the believer anticipates the dawn, when 'the Sun of Righteousness will truly arise with healing in his wings.' C.

Ver. 22, 23. Though Israel, because of idolatry, have been exposed to consumpt on as a spring exhausted by the heats of summer; yet in God's day of merciful visitation, they shall be as a spring that is replenished from a higher source, and overflows in pure and cooling streams. C.

Ver. 27. Because of the anointing of JESUS, the Messiah, to the office of Prophet, Priest, and King of Israel and the Gentiles, and the anointing of his people by the Holy Spirit, whereby they are regenerated and sealed till the day of salvation. C.

Ver. 28. The prophet here describes in language of great beauty and graphic power the approach of the Assyrian conqueror to Jerusalem, spreading terror all around: until at length, having reached the Holy City, the Lord in his might strikes the proud conqueror to the earth. It is probable that the description is ideal rather than historical: but it is not on this account the less accurate in its topographical details. Every stage is marked. The army is represented as leaving the great northern road near Bethel, and turning eastward to Ai. Advancing to Michmash, the baggage is left behind, and the troops thus disencumbered cross the wild ravine to Geba. Ramah, situated half a mile westward, 'is afraid.' Gibeah of Saul, which lies on the top of a hill in front, 'is fled,' for the terrible foe is in sight. The army conthat heweth therewith? or shall the saw magnify itself against him that shaketh it? as if the rod should shake itself against them that lift it up,[4] or as if the staff should lift up [5]itself, as if it were no wood.[6]

16 Therefore[b] shall the Lord, the Lord of hosts, send among his fat ones leanness; and under his glory he shall kindle a burning like the burning of a fire.[7]

17 And[c] the light of Israel shall be for a fire, and his Holy One for a flame: and it shall burn and devour his thorns and his briers in one day;

18 And[d] shall consume the glory of his forest, and of his fruitful field, both soul and body:[8] and they shall be as when a standard-bearer fainteth.

19 And the rest of the trees of his forest shall be few,[9] that a child may write them.

20 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that [e]the remnant of Israel, and such as are escaped of the house of Jacob, shall [g]no more again stay upon him that smote them; but [h]shall stay upon the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, in truth.

21 The[i] remnant shall return, even the remnant of Jacob, [j]unto the mighty God.[1]

22 For[k] though thy people Israel be as the sand of the sea, yet a remnant of[2] them shall return: [l]the consumption decreed shall overflow with[3] righteousness.

23 For the Lord God of hosts [n]shall make a consumption, even determined, in the midst of all the land.

24 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord God of hosts, [o]O my people that dwellest in Zion, [p]be not afraid of the Assyrian: he shall smite thee with a[q] rod, and shall lift up his staff against thee,[4] after[r] the manner of Egypt.[5]

25 For[s] yet a very little while, and the indignation shall cease, and mine anger in their destruction.

26 And[t] the Lord of hosts shall stir up a scourge for [6]him, [u]according to the slaughter of Midian at the rock of Oreb: [v]and as his rod was upon the sea,[7] so shall he lift it up after the manner of Egypt.

27 And it shall come to pass in that day, [x]that his burden shall be taken away[8] from off thy shoulder, and his yoke from off thy neck, and the yoke shall be destroyed [y]because of the anointing.

28 ¶ He is come to [z]Aiath, he is passed to [a]Migron; at Michmash he hath laid up his carriages:[9]

29 They are gone over the passage: they have taken up their lodging at [b]Geba; [c]Ramah is afraid; [d]Gibeah of Saul is fled.

30 Lift up thy voice,[1] O daughter of [e]Gallim; cause it to be heard unto [g]Laish, O poor [h]Anathoth.

31 Madmenah[i] is removed; the inhabitants of Gebim gather themselves to flee.

32 As yet shall he remain at [j]Nob that day: he shall [k]shake his hand against [l]the mount of the daughter of Zion, the hill of Jerusalem.

33 Behold, the Lord, the Lord of hosts, [n]shall lop the bough with terror: and the high ones of stature shall be hewn down, and the haughty shall be humbled.

34 And he shall cut down [o]the thickets of the forests with iron, and Lebanon shall fall by [p]a mighty one.[2]

tinues its march. The little villages of Gallim and Laish are overwhelmed. Anathoth, standing in open ground on the mountain side, is captured. Neighbouring towns take to flight. Nob is at length reached; Mount Zion is visible, and the conqueror proudly shakes his hand against it. I have traced on the spot every step on the line of march. P.

Ver. 32. From ver. 28 the march of Sennacherib upon Jerusalem is vividly described, preparing the mind for that signal judgment which the invisible hand of God inflicted upon his pride and power—the first specimen of that judgment which the Father will continue to inflict upon nations till he has made all his enemies the footstool of Messiah. C.

Ver. 34. Lebanon. The king of Syria is here called Lebanon, one of the most remarkable districts of his country—a mode of speech still common in all countries, as characterizing kings, nobles, and proprietors of lands. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Dreadful punishments, both in time and eternity, may those rulers expect who make unrighteous laws, and who enrich themselves at the expense of the poor, the fatherless, and widows, whom God has taken into his peculiar protection! And fearful misery and desperate anguish await those who live without or revolt from God; or who hypocritically profess to know him, and yet in works deny him. In a marvellous manner God makes the most insolent and atheistical tyrants the tools of his providence; and even overrules their lusts and mischievous purposes and conduct, in subservience to the glory of his perfections and the welfare of his church! Alas! of what base robbery and bloody murder do conquerors of this world make their boast! Their success makes them stupid, proud, and atheistical. But when God has finished his work by them, easily he brings them down, and makes their vanity and boasting issue in shame and disappointment. Let us then greatly fear that God with whom is so terrible majesty; who, after he has killed the body, can cast both soul and body into hell-fire; and who in a moment can hurl the mightiest criminals into endless ruin! Alas! what multitudes are hurried into damnation by every national disaster! But God limits and regulates all the devastations which he makes in the earth, and causes the very providences which ruin multitudes to be the means of conversion and reformation to others.—And O how short-lived are his frowns against his people! How certain and sweet, and often sudden, their deliverances, through Jesus Christ and his anointing Spirit! Why then should they ever slavishly fear the fury of the oppressor? When their nights of distress are at the darkest, they may cheerfully expect their deliverance to be near.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 1–5. In a most weak and debased appearance, the Messiah shall spring from the family of David, when it is reduced to a very low and withered condition. And the Holy Ghost, bestowed on him above measure, and for ever secured to him, shall qualify him with ineffable wisdom and knowledge, courage and reverential awe of God: and he shall not judge of things according to external appearances; but with infinite exactness and equity shall he judge and save his own poor and afflicted people, and according to the threatenings of his Word, he shall easily destroy his wicked opposers: and equity and faithfulness shall at once fit him for and honour his ministrations. 6–9. Through the abundant spread of his gospel in the world, and the saving instructions of his Spirit, shall the most mischievous and untractable sinners of mankind be rendered meek, gentle, peaceful, and harmless. 10–16. And to him, as exhibited and offered in the gospel, shall multitudes of Gentiles come by faith, repentance, and daily worship: and his Spirit, by the effusion of his gifts, graces, and comforts, shall render his church eminently glorious. The Jews too, in the apostolic age, and in the fullness of time when, by the power of God, they shall be brought back to their own land, shall, with united hearts, embrace the gospel, and assist in the conversion of the Gentiles to Christ; while opposers, heathens, or anti-christians shall be overcome, and every hinderance be removed.

Ver. 1. This prophecy is distinctly applied to Christ, Ro. 15. 12, and cannot, as some have thought, refer to Hezekiah, for he was already born—neither were the Gentiles gathered to the church of God during his reign—an event distinctly predicted as occurring during the reign of the Branch, ver. 10. C.

Ver. 3. This was remarkably exemplified in our Lord's unparalleled reproofs to the scribes and Pharisees, who appeared to the eyes of men fair without, but were yet as 'whited sepulchres' full of rottenness within, Mat. 23. 25–27, and in the choice that he made of humble fishermen, who appeared to the eyes of men utterly unqualified for the spiritual conquest and reformation of the world, but who nevertheless have already achieved that work in part, and are, by their word and the Lord's good Spirit, achieving it still. See 1 Co. 1. 26–31. C.

him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge, and of the fear of the LORD;

3 And [d]shall make him of quick understanding[2] in the fear of the LORD: and [e]he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears:

4 But [g]with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove[3] with equity for the meek of the earth:[4] and he shall [h]smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked.

5 And [i]righteousness shall be the [j]girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins.

6 The[k] wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf, and the young lion, and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them.

7 And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.

8 And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice'[5] den.

9 They[l] shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for [m]the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea.

10 ¶ And[o] in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek; and [p]his rest shall be glorious.

11 And it shall come to pass in that day, that[q] the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from [r]Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from [s]Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea.

12 And he [t]shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall [u]assemble the outcasts of Israel, and [v]gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners[6] of the earth.

13 The[w] envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off; Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim.[7]

14 But[y] they shall fly upon the shoulders of the Philistines toward the west;[8] they shall spoil them of the east[9] together: they shall lay their hand upon Edom and [1]Moab; [z]and the children of Ammon shall obey [2]them.[3]

15 And the LORD [a]shall utterly destroy the tongue[4] of the [b]Egyptian sea; and with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand over the river, and shall smite it in the seven [5]streams, and make men go over dryshod.[6]

16 And[c] there shall be an highway for the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria; [d]like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.

CHAPTER XII.

A joyful thanksgiving of the faithful for the mercies of God.

AND in[a] that day thou shalt say, O LORD, I will praise thee: [b]though thou wast angry with me, thine anger is turned away, and thou comfortedst me.

2 Behold, [c]God is my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid: for the LORD JEHOVAH is my strength and my song; he also is become my salvation.

3 Therefore[d] with joy shall ye draw [e]water[1] out of the wells of salvation.

4 And in that day shall ye say, [g]Praise the LORD, call upon his name,[2] declare his doings among the people, make mention that [h]his name is exalted.

5 Sing[i] unto the LORD; for he hath done excellent things: [j]this is known in all the earth.

6 Cry[k] out and shout, thou inhabitant[3] of Zion: for [l]great is the Holy One of Israel in the midst of thee.

Ver. 4. Smite the earth. That is, men who 'are of the earth, earthy,' 'who mind earthly things.'—Slay the wicked. That is, judicially deliver over wicked nations to destruction by the hands of nations generally as wicked as themselves, but who nevertheless execute God's righteous purposes of judgment. C.

Ver. 9. A good rule of prophetic interpretation requires that the destructive animals here enumerated should be understood as emblems of men of like evil dispositions. The rule is this—when a particular prophecy commences emblematically, the remainder is to be interpreted emblematically. Some have, nevertheless, interpreted ver. 6–9 literally, as foreshowing changes yet to be effected in the dispositions and habits of animals of prey—a speculation upon which, however pleasing, it is better not to dogmatize. The Lord knoweth. Not that any direct evil can result from the expectation and belief of such a change; the danger lies in the indulgence of a spirit of speculation which may soon terminate in an attempt to be wise 'above that which is written.' C.——In this verse the strong and striking figures of the preceding passages are resolved into literal expressions. With such a key as is here afforded to the meaning, no rational and thoughtful critic can mistake the real sense of ver. 6–8. To interpret them literally, as if the influence of true religion would change the physical organization and natural instincts of beasts, is not only an outrage on common sense, but it is opposed to the true principles of interpretation. Ver. 6 can no more be interpreted literally than ver. 5. The whole passage is a highly figurative and graphic representation of the change that will be produced in human society by the reign of the Messiah. Love shall fill every heart, and beneficence shall characterize every act. P.

Ver. 10. His rest shall be glorious. His church glorified by the possession of his Word of truth, his ordinances, promises, and Spirit. See Ps. 132. 14; Col. 1. 27. C.

Ver. 11. The Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people. So called as somewhat similar to the first deliverance from Egypt. See ver. 16. C.

Ver. 12. This glorious prophecy stretches away onward into an indefinite and probably still distant future. It embraces the Jews alone—the natural, and not the spiritual Israel. It shows that the remnant of them shall be gathered into the Messiah's kingdom; but whether the remnant or residue of the nation then existing, or the remnant according to the election of grace, cannot be determined. The countries here enumerated are to be understood as the representatives of all those lands into which the Jews have been or shall be scattered. God's providence and grace will reach them everywhere, and draw them in again. P.

Ver. 15. Tongue. The same word is translated bay, Jos. 15. 2; 18. 19.—River. Most probably not the Nile, but the Euphrates; for though the Nile is called 'seven-streamed,' the title is poetical rather than literal. C.

Ver. 16. The general meaning of this whole chapter is that when the kingdom of the Messiah shall be finally and fully established, the Jews shall be gathered into it; all men shall be subject to the church; all obstruction and opposition shall be removed from the spread of the gospel; and universal peace and love shall prevail. P.

REFLECTIONS.—Come, my soul, behold the Lamb of God! Behold how he assumes my nature; is conceived and born of the Virgin, in the likeness of sinful flesh, and laid in the manger! Behold him filled with the Holy Ghost above measure, and qualified to save his people to the uttermost, and avenge himself of his enemies! Behold how his almighty grace transforms the most outrageous sinners into the most amiable saints! See his gospel rapidly spreading in the earth, and his power and glory revealed in the hearts of men. See him in prophecy conquering all opposition, removing every impediment, slaying the enmity, and making of Jews and Gentiles one new man, so making peace! Let me believe, let me plead, let me hope, let me rejoice, that he who has begun to fulfil these great and precious promises, will perfect the same in believers.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 1. 'Taking occasion from the reference to Egypt and the exodus in the close of the preceding chapter, the prophet now puts into the mouth of Israel a song analogous to that of Moses, from which some of the expressions are directly borrowed. The structure of this psalm is very regular, consisting of two parts, in each of which the prophet first tells the people what they will say, or have a right to say, when the foregoing promises are verified, and then addresses them in his own person in the usual language of prediction' (Alexander). P.——That day. The day of the second recovery of Israel from bondage, ch. 11. 12—a day yet future, but not doubtful; for God is faithful who has promised.—Thine anger is turned away. This comfortable word indicates the termination of all the series of judgments described, ch. 5. 25; 9. 12, 17, 21; 10. 4. C.

Ver. 4. His name. Whatever name, at any time, God has given of himself. See Ex. 34.5;" Ps. 8. 1. C.

Ver. 6. Inhabitant. 'Thou woman inhabitant'—the emblem and title of the church, no longer a woman hid in the wilderness, but restored to her Lord's house in Zion. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How far the glories and comforts of the New Testament church exceed those of the Old! The great forgiveness, through Jesus' blood, inflames the heart, and tunes the lips to praise. Nor ought JEHOVAH's frowns to untune our soul. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. O the inexpressible pleasure of enjoying a reconciled God as our ALL and IN ALL! If he be ours, we may safely

1 God mustereth the armies of his wrath. 6 He threateneth to destroy Babylon by the Medes. 19 The utter desolation of Babylon.

THE burden[1] of[a] Babylon, which Isaiah the son of Amoz did see.[2]

2 Lift[b] ye up a banner upon the high mountain, exalt the voice unto them, shake the hand, that they may [c]go into the gates of the nobles.

3 I [d]have commanded my sanctified ones,[3] I have also called my mighty ones for mine anger, even them that rejoice in my highness.

4 The[e] noise of a multitude in the mountains, like as[4] of a great people; a tumultuous noise of the kingdoms of nations gathered together: the[g] LORD of hosts mustereth the host of the battle.

5 They come from [h]a far country, from the end of heaven, even the LORD, and the weapons of his indignation, to destroy the whole land.

6 ¶ Howl[i] ye; for the [j]day of the LORD is at hand; it shall come as a destruction from the Almighty.

7 Therefore [k]shall all hands [5]be faint,[6] and every man's heart shall melt:

8 And they [l]shall be afraid: pangs and sorrows shall take hold of them; they shall be in pain as a woman that travaileth; [m]they shall be amazed[7] one at another;[8] their faces shall be as flames.[9]

9 Behold, [o]the day of the LORD[1] cometh, cruel[p] both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate; and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it.

10 For [q]the stars of heaven, and the constellations thereof, shall not give their light: the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine.

11 And I will punish [r]the world for their evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; and [s]I will cause the arrogancy of the proud to cease, and will lay low the haughtiness of the terrible.

12 I [t]will make a man more precious than [u]fine gold; even a man than the golden wedge of Ophir.

13 Therefore[v] I will shake the heavens, and the earth shall remove out of her place, in the wrath of the LORD of hosts, and in the day of his fierce anger.

14 And [x]it shall be as the chased roe, and as a sheep that no man taketh up: they shall every man turn to his own people, and flee every one into his own land.

15 Every[y] one that is found shall be thrust through; and every one that is joined unto them shall fall by the sword.

16 Their children also shall be dashed to pieces before their eyes; their houses shall be spoiled, and their wives ravished.

17 Behold, I will stir up [z]the Medes against them, which shall not regard silver; and as for gold, they shall not delight in it.[2]

18 Their bows also shall [a]dash the young men to pieces; and they shall have no pity on the fruit of the womb; their eye shall not spare children.

19 ¶ And Babylon, [b]the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency, shall be as when God overthrew[3] Sodom and Gomorrah.

2 This was a well-known and remarkable characteristic of the Medes. Cyrus is represented by Xenophon as thus addressing his troops:—'Ye Medes and others who now hear me, I well know that you have not accompanied me in this expedition with a view of acquiring wealth.' Xenophon farther says: 'So little did he regard silver, or delight in gold, that Croesus told him that by his liberality he would make himself poor, instead of storing up vast treasures for himself.' The Medes possessed in this respect the spirit of their chief, and many illustrations of it are given in Xenophon's graphic narrative.—P.

trust him with all our happiness, all our work, all our care. If he be our strength, no foe can hurt us. If he be our salvation, eternity is too short to speak his praise. Great is the happiness, temporal, spiritual, and eternal, which we may by faith draw from his perfections, his Christ, his promises, and ordinances! And thrice happy is the church when her members know him and his mighty works, and with one mind, and one mouth, glorify him!

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 1. Prophecies of heavy, oppressive, and ruinous judgments are often called burdens; and those denounced against Babylon also often relate to Antichrist. 2, 3. Assemble the forces to their respective standards.—Order them to present themselves to the noble captains of Media and Persia, and to break into the houses of the noble Chaldeans. I have stirred up, and by my providence separated and strengthened these Medes and Persians, to execute my judgments upon Babylon, and to perform the most gallant actions, which will illustrate my honour and greatness. 6, 9. The day of the Lord, or of the wicked, denotes the period of his awful judgments upon them. 10. The whole country of Chaldea shall be filled with horror, and their princes and nobles degraded or murdered. 12. Men fit to bear arms shall become very rare; or the Medes and Persians shall refuse every ransom of their lives. 13, 14. Because of their wickedness, the whole nation shall be quite unhinged and ruined. The Chaldeans shall flee for their lives; but none shall dare to harbour them. All their auxiliaries shall run away, and leave them to shift for themselves. 19. Babylon, once the so large, glorious, and impregnable capital of Chaldea, shall be utterly destroyed in the most wrathful manner.

Ver. 1. Burden. 'Oracle' (Boothroyd). But the word burden, denoting the heavy judgment that Babylon was doomed to bear, seems best calculated to convey the meaning of the prophet. See Ge. 4. 13. C.

Ver. 3. Sanctified ones. 'My enrolled warriors' Lowth). There can be little question of the preference due to this translation.—That rejoice in my highness. 'Them that rejoice in their own dignity' (Boothroyd). C.

Ver. 4. In the mountains. Media and Persia, from which countries Cyrus drew his armies against Babylon, were mountainous countries, and are described as such in contrast with the low-lying plain upon which Babylon was built. C.

Ver. 5. End of heaven. There is not here, as some have foolishly objected, any astronomical error—such as that heaven and earth meet at a particular point. From Ps. 19. 6 it appears that the 'ends of heaven' signify the sun's apparent daily and annual course, and whoever considers the wonderful collection of adventurers from all nations that are gathered to armies, but especially to eastern armies, where mercenary foreigners often constitute their greatest strength, will find little difficulty in understanding how literally and truly the prophet here speaks. C.

Ver. 10. 'Stars, constellations, sun, and moon,' are all emblems of the various ruling powers of kingdoms, especially of the Babylonish empire, whose wise men were remarkable for their astronomical skill, and therefore fully prepared to understand and appreciate their import. C.

Ver. 11. World. The men who are not only in, but of the world. See Jn. 17. 11, 14, 16. The world that by wisdom knew not God, 1 Co. 1. 21. C.

Ver. 12. Such will be the depopulation of 'Babylon the Great,' that a man will scarcely be found at any price, either for service or defence. See ch. 4. 1; 1 Sa. 3. 1. C.

Ver. 13. Astronomers can both calculate and explain certain irregularities or shakings that literally take place in the visible heavens. To a people skilled in astronomy as the learned Babylonians were, the heavens shaken, and the earth removing from her orbit, would therefore be perfectly intelligible and familiar emblems of thrones overturned, nobles degraded, armies disbanded, commerce forsaken, fields laid waste—a kingdom desolate. C.

Ver. 15. Whether they flee singly for secrecy, or in companies for mutual help, all the Babylonians shall be cut off. C.

Ver. 17. The Medes, inhabiting a mountainous and forest country, were at this time a people so rude that they neither understood the use nor value of gold or silver money. Hunting was hitherto their chief employment; and their weapons for the chase their most valued property. C.

Ver. 21. Satyrs. Literally, 'hairy ones.' In Le. 4. 24 the word is translated goat; but in 2 Ch. 11. 15 it is translated devils, demons being worshipped, most probably, under the form of goats. The whole of this prophecy, as may be seen exemplified in Newton, Keith, &c., affords one of the plainest and most irresistible attestations to the divine origin of the Bible. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how oppressive and destructive are the judgments of God upon guilty nations, or even the threatenings thereof! Nor is there any destruction on earth but comes because of sin. He sets apart the instruments of justice, as well as those of his grace. He can raise mighty armies by his call or by his nod; and with alacrity they march, under his encouraging direction, to execute his judgments. How dreadful is it when the terrors of a guilty conscience are added to the heavy judgments of affliction! The hearts and hands of the mightiest fail them, when JEHOVAH appears against them in his judgment; and all helpers desert when a nation gives itself to ruin. Into what savage devils has sin transformed men, especially when they serve in conquering armies! But God is righteous in returning men's cruelties upon themselves. He has exhibited the most terrible marks of his indignation against sin on persons, cities, and nations. And the ruins of places, once famous and wicked, attest his infinite holiness, equity, foreknowledge, and faithfulness, and the divine authenticity of his Word.

CHAPTER XIV. Ver. 1–3 not only predict that the Jews, attended by many Gentile proselytes and Chaldean slaves, should return to their own land from Babylon; but that they, and multitudes of Gentiles, in the apostolic and coming periods, shall coalesce into one gospel church. 4–11. Not only the neighbouring nations, but the very dead and damned, shall, in their respective forms, insult the disgraced and ruined king and princes of Babylon. 12. Proud as a devil, shining as an angel, and possessed of distinguished glory and majesty among the nations, how art thou debased and ruined! Notwithstanding thy ambition and boasts to raise an empire wide as the heavens, and to sit like JEHOVAH in his temple and heavenly mansions, thou shalt be debased into contempt, death, and 20 It[c] shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation: neither shall the Arabian pitch tent there; neither shall the shepherds make their fold there:

21 But[d] wild beasts[4] of the desert shall lie there: and their houses shall be full of doleful creatures:[5] and [6]owls[7] shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there.

22 And the wild beasts[8] of the islands shall cry in their desolate houses,[9] and dragons in their pleasant palaces: and [e]her time is near to come, and her days shall not be prolonged.

1 God's merciful restoration of Israel. 3 Their triumphant insultation over Babel. 24 God's purpose against Assyria. 29 Palestina is threatened.

FOR the[a] LORD [b]will have mercy on Jacob, and will yet choose Israel, and set them in their own land: and [c]the strangers shall be joined with them, and they shall cleave to the house of Jacob.[1]

2 And the people [d]shall take them, and bring them to their place; and the house of Israel shall possess them in [e]the land of the LORD for[g] servants and handmaids: and they shall take them captives, whose captives they were;[2] and they shall rule over their oppressors.

3 ¶ And it shall come to pass in the day that [h]the LORD shall give thee rest from thy sorrow, and from thy fear, and from the hard bondage wherein thou wast made to serve,

4 That thou shalt take up this proverb[3] against the king of Babylon, and say, How hath the[i] oppressor ceased! the [4]golden city[5] ceased!

5 The[j] LORD hath broken the staff of the wicked, and the sceptre of the rulers.

6 He [k]who smote the people in wrath with a continual stroke,[6] he that ruled the nations in anger, is [l]persecuted,[7] and none hindereth.

7 The [m]whole earth is at rest, and is quiet: they[o] break forth into singing.

8 Yea, the fir-trees[8] rejoice at thee, and the cedars of Lebanon, saying, Since thou art laid down, no feller is come up against us.

9 [p]Hell[9] from beneath is moved for thee to meet thee at thy coming: it stirreth up the dead for thee, even all the [1]chief ones[2] of the earth; it hath raised up from their thrones all the kings of the nations.

10 All they shall speak and say unto thee, Art thou also [q]become weak as we? art thou become like unto us?

11 Thy[r] pomp is brought down to the grave, and the noise of thy viols: [s]the worm is spread under thee, and the worms cover thee.

Each prince and potentate had generally a large chamber for himself, where his remains were deposited in a marble sarcophagus beautifully sculptured. The tombs of the kings contain some fifteen or twenty chambers connected together by corridors and stairs. 14 I[x] will ascend above the heights of the clouds: I will be like the Most High.

15 Yet[a] thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit.

17 That made the world as a wilderness, and destroyed the cities thereof; that opened not the house of his prisoners?[5] damnation. 18, 19. Other kings lie interred in their stately tombs; but thou shalt lie unburied, as a rotten stick or polluted cloth which none cares to touch. 24–27. I have determined, in my infinite purpose, to destroy the Assyrian army before Jerusalem; my almighty power shall, without fail, accomplish it. 29–31. O Philistines, though David and Uzziah, who smote you, be dead, and Ahaz his grandson weakened or dead, Hezekiah his son shall ravage your country: and while God shall take care of the poorest Jews, they, and afterwards the Assyrians or Chaldeans, shall, with great unanimity and fury, destroy your nation. 32. And by their ambassadors the neighbouring nations shall be informed, that to the power and care of God alone the stability and safety of Jerusalem and the church, however poor, is entirely owing.

30 And the [s]first-born of the poor shall feed, and the needy shall lie down in safety: and [t]I will kill thy root with famine, and he shall slay thy remnant.

31 Howl, O gate; cry, O city: thou, whole Palestina, art dissolved: for [u]there shall come from the north a smoke,[5] and [6]none shall be alone[7] in his appointed times.[8]

CHAPTER XV.

The lamentable state of Moab.

THE burden[1] of Moab. Because [a]in the night Ar[b] of Moab is laid waste, and brought to silence;[2] because in the night [c]Kir of Moab is laid waste, and brought to silence:

2 He is gone up to [d]Bajith, and to Dibon, the high places, to weep: Moab shall howl over Nebo,[e] and over Medeba: [g]on all their heads shall be baldness, and every beard cut off.

3 In their streets they shall gird themselves with[h] sackcloth: [i]on the tops of their houses, and in their streets, every one shall howl, weeping abundantly.[3]

4 And [j]Heshbon shall cry, and Elealeh: their voice shall be heard even unto Jahaz: therefore Etymologically it is so, but geographically it is much more limited. In the time of Isaiah Palestina included only the plain of Philistia, extending from Joppa to Gaza, and from the Mediterranean to the mountains of Judah.—P.

Ver. 9. Hell. Sheol sometimes signifies the grave, but is more generally applied to the state and region of the dead. Here the kings of conquered nations are represented as rising from the stately couches upon which in several eastern countries it is still the custom to bury the dead, and taunting the monarch of Babylon on his entrance into their dreary abode. C.

Ver. 13. If, in expounding Scripture, the meaning of words and phrases is to be drawn from Scripture, then 'the mount of the congregation,' by comparison with ch. 10. 32, will be Mount Zion in Jerusalem: and 'the sides of the north,' by comparison with Ps. 48. 2, will be the city of Jerusalem, which lay to the north of Mount Zion. The search after exposition from other than Scripture sources, has led some to imagine that the 'sides of the north' meant the north-pole: and 'mount of the congregation,' the imaginary residence of the Chaldean gods: but there is no scriptural ground for such a conjecture. C.

Ver. 22. Son and nephew. 'Son and grandson:' accordingly, Evil-Merodach the son, and Belshazzar the grandson, of Nebuchadnezzar, were both cut off by violent deaths in the flower of their age. C.

Ver. 24. This is no 'fragment of a distinct prophecy:' but is, with the three following verses, a sequel to the prophecy of Syrian or Assyrian invasion (see ch. 9. 12; 10. 5); and from ver. 28 to the end there is still a sequel to the prophecy of the Philistine auxiliaries by whom the Assyrians should be joined, ch. 9. 12, to 'devour Israel with open mouth.' C.

Ver. 26. Upon the whole earth. That is, upon both Jews and Gentiles; the judgments upon the Jews being the emblems or specimens of judgments upon all unfaithful churches: and his judgments upon Assyria and Babylon, emblems or specimens of his judgments upon every cruel and proud nation. C.

Ver. 29. Whole Palestina. Palestine was divided into five states, and the prophecy is addressed to their federal capacity. The judgments of Palestine are the emblems or specimens of the divine judgments upon churches or nations who cherish a spirit of unkindness or unceasing hostility to their neighbours.—Out of the serpent's root shall come, &c. Uzziah had subdued the Philistines, 2 Ch. 26. 6, 7; 28. 18: in the days of Ahaz his son, they threw off the yoke; but Hezekiah, the grandson, again subdued them, 2 Ki. 18. 18, the emblem and specimen of the final victory of original truth, after an age of apparently successful rebellion and hopeless apostasy. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How strangely nations rise and fall in the scales of God's providence! But a pleasant aspect, towards the saints, have all the clouds of wrath that hang over their adversaries. And the overthrow of nations directs men to Jesus and his church. Great is the instability of earthly honours, power, or wealth. Such as were masters one day, are often slaves to their slaves the next.—All our salvation must be ascribed to the rich and gracious mercy of God. It is his blessed grace and our free-will, that can bring us to the inheritance incorruptible and undefiled. And ever certain, however slow, is the deliverance of his saints, his church, from all their griefs, fears, and toils. But to what fearful misery and disgrace are proud and powerful oppressors reduced at the last! Neither power nor wealth profit in the day of his wrath. Both God and men take pleasure in humbling and debasing the proud. But if haughty tyrants sink to ruin—to suffering—with such cruel derision—in what fearful forms shall devils and lost heathens welcome to hell the proud despisers of Jesus Christ! Great is the misery which the wickedness of parents entails upon their impenitent posterity, and the marks of wrath which sinners fix upon the spots where they lived. Stable, and infallibly executed, are the purposes of God. And it is vain for his enemies to hope for exemption from ruin; for if one foe be cut off, he can raise up a worse. But, amidst all the commotions on earth, fixed is his church, and safe the poorest of her members. JEHOVAH is her founder, foundation, protector, and refuge.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 1. Joshua spared Moab by divine command, because the people were the descendants of Lot, De. 2. 9, but they made most unkind returns. Moab caused one of Israel's greatest sins, De. 23. 3; Eglon king of Moab oppressed Israel eighteen years; pride, bloodshed, and idolatry filled up the measure of her guilt. This prophecy against her is the emblem and specimen of God's judgments upon the unkindness and quarrels of churches and nations of cognate descent. C.——Moab was situated on the eastern shore of the Dead Sea. It extended from Heshbon on the north to the borders of Edom on the south, and on the east lay the great desert of Arabia. It is a high table-land, and though in parts rocky, the soil is rich and the pasture luxuriant. It was on Mount Nebo, near its northern border, that Moses died. P.

Ver. 3. On the tops of their houses. The roofs of eastern houses lay almost universally flat; the people lived much upon them—a mild climate inviting to the open air. C.

Ver. 5. 'Her fugitives shall flee unto Zoar, to Eglath the third' (Lightfoot), Eglath-Shelashiah being the proper name of a place.—'For the steep of Luhith with weeping they ascend; yea, in the way to either Horon they raise a wail of destruction.' C.

Ver. 6. Nimrim was a town in the plain of the Jordan at the foot of the mountains of Moab, a short distance north of the Dead Sea. In the midst of the ruins is a copious fountain. The region round it is abundantly watered, and is celebrated for the luxuriance of its pastures. When the waters of Nimrim would fail, it would be a certain sign of general desolation. P.

REFLECTIONS.—Destruction and anguish in tremendous triumph follow sin through impenitent cities and nations. Sudden and unexpected ruin awaits haughty transgressors. And to call on idols or creatures when God is our enemy is but to add to our anguish. The wealth which men eagerly gain but invites the invader, tempts the robber, and endangers the owner. It increases the owner's care and grief, while it assists his enemy to destroy him, and if hardened sinners escape one judgment, they prepare for another. But if such be the case of a ravaged nation, alas! the terrors, the torments, the howlings spoiler: for [g]the extortioner[8] is at an end, the spoiler ceaseth, the oppressors[9] are consumed out of the land.[1]

5 And [h]in mercy shall the throne be established:[2] and he shall sit upon it in truth in the tabernacle[i] of David, judging and seeking judgment, and hasting righteousness.[3]

6 ¶ We have heard[4] of the [j]pride of Moab; he is very proud: even of his haughtiness, and his pride, and his wrath: but his lies[5] shall not be so.[6]

7 Therefore shall Moab [k]howl for Moab; every one shall howl: for the foundations[7] of Kir-hareseth shall ye mourn;[8] surely they are stricken.

8 For [l]the fields of Heshbon languish, and the vine of Sibmah: the lords of the heathen[9] have broken down the principal plants[1] thereof, they are come even unto Jazer, they wandered through the wilderness; her branches are stretched out,[2] they are gone over the sea.[3]

9 Therefore[m] I will bewail with the weeping of Jazer the vine of Sibmah: I will water thee with my tears, O Heshbon, and Elealeh; for the shouting[4] for thy summer fruits, and for thy harvest is fallen.

10 And [o]gladness is taken away, and joy out of the plentiful field; and in the vineyards there shall be no singing, neither shall there be shouting: the treaders shall tread out no wine in their presses; I have made their vintage shouting to cease.

11 Wherefore [p]my bowels shall sound like an harp for Moab, and mine inward parts for Kir-haresh.

12 ¶ And it shall come to pass, when it is seen that Moab [q]is weary on the high place, that [r]he shall come to his sanctuary to pray; but [s]he shall not prevail.

13 This is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning Moab since that time.[5]

14 But now the LORD hath spoken, saying, Within three years,[6] as the years of an hireling, and the glory of Moab shall be contemned, with all that great multitude; and the remnant shall be very small and feeble.[7]

6 This passage and the parallel in Je. 48. 32, are rendered obscure by the reference to 'the sea.' Jeremiah says, 'Thy plants are gone over the sea, they reach to the Sea of Jazer.' What sea is here meant? Some say it was a noted pool or lake; but there is no lake in that district, and the word 'sea' would scarcely be applied to a mere pool. We learn from Nu. 32. 1 that the country round Heshbon and Jazer was called 'the land of Jazer.' That land must have extended to the shore of the Dead Sea. May not that sea therefore have been called by the inhabitants of the district 'the Sea of Jazer,' just as the northern lake was called Tiberias and Gennesaret?—P.

in woe. Who shall abide with devouring fire? Who shall dwell with everlasting dispair.

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 1. Send ye the lamb—your acknowledgments of tribute to the king, see 2 Ki. 3. 4, and so, either by repentance avert the threatened judgment, or secure a home and protection against the day of national calamity. The main object of this prophecy is to exhort Moab to look for and submit to Messiah the ruler on his appearing. See ver. 5. C.— Sela. Sela is unquestionably the celebrated city Petra, afterwards the capital of Edom. It is situated in a deep and wild ravine, or rather cluster of ravines, in the midst of a mountain-range of red sandstone. Its rock-hewn temples, tombs, and palaces are still the wonder and admiration of travellers. Sela was not in Moab: but it seems probable that on the occasion the prophet here refers to the fugitive Moabites had taken refuge in the ravines of Edom, and they are exhorted to send from thence their tribute, and the tokens of their submission. The words rendered 'from Sela to the wilderness' may either signify, as they are translated in the Vulgate, 'from Sela of the wilderness;' or, as interpreted by Vitringa, 'from Sela towards the wilderness to,' &c.; that is, from Sela towards the wilderness that leads to Jerusalem. The great wilderness in Hebrew Midbar, which is the word here used, of Judah lay between the border of Edom and Jerusalem, and through it lay the direct and indeed the only road. P.

Ver. 9. To 'weep with those that weep' is a distinguished Christian duty, not only of perpetual obligation, but for the discharge of which the world affords continual opportunities. Our Lord wept over Jerusalem, leaving us an example of the sympathy with which we should regard, not only our friends, but our enemies, in their sorrows. C.

Ver. 13. That time. What time? When it was seen that he had become 'weary of his idolatry on his high places,' ver. 12, and had come to his sanctuary, not in the piety of faith, humiliation, and penitence—but in the superstitious throes of despair, to offer his unacceptable, because his compelled, petitions. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How unwilling is God that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance! Injustice towards God or men is a ready mean for depriving us of all we have. Never do any protect or cherish the people of God in their distress but he remarkably rewards them in kind.—Nor is it ever wise to stand aloof from them; for though they fall, they shall quickly arise: though now they wither, anon they shall flourish in glory and honour. When sin abounds, rage against the church flames, and pride towers, destruction and anguish are at the door; and carnal mirth shall quickly be turned into weeping and wailing. And when God rises up to punish the guilty, no idol can help, avert, or defer his stroke.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 3–5. The Syrians shall be in as despicable and ruined a condition as the Israelites; and the glory and multitude of Israel shall be exceedingly diminished, like one dying of a consumption. And being ripe for ruin, the Assyrians shall make a clean riddance of them, as reapers in harvest do of the fields of standing corn. 9–11. The cities of the Israelites shall stand as high heaps in the country, forsaken by the inhabitants, as they were by the Canaanites in the days of Joshua or Barak. Because they have forsaken their God, Saviour, and Protector, nothing shall thrive with them; but after all their care to strengthen their state, the Assyrians shall seize everything they have, and carry them into a miserable and lasting captivity. 12–14. But notwithstanding all their vast multitudes, fury, noisy ravage, and blasphemous boasting, God, by his just rebuke, shall destroy the Assyrian army before Jerusalem, and make the small remains thereof flee homeward with the utmost terror and precipitation.

Ver. 1. Damascus is taken away. The inhabitants of Damascus were taken away captive by Tiglath-Pileser, 2 Ki. 16. 9; and to what ruinous condition it was then reduced, and how long it remained so, history gives no information. It has, however, still continued a city of great note and importance; but that fact forms no contradiction to the prophecy, as it is evident from ver. 3, that by 'being a city,' the prophet meant the capital city of a Syrian monarchy. But to that estate it never returned: for since the death of Rezin, its last king, the country around Damascus has always continued a mere province of some of its conquerors. These have successively been Sennacherib, whose capital was Nineveh (2 Ki. 19. 36). Nebuchadnezzar, the generals of Alexander, Judas Maccabeus, the Romans, the Saracens, the Crusaders, Tamerlane, the Mamelukes, the Turks, lately the Egyptians, from whom, by aid of England, it has again been wrested by the Turks. C.

Ver. 2. Aroer. For Aroer, on the Arnon, the Septuagint, followed by Boothroyd, reads for ever; but there appears no sufficient authority for the change. The verse is a prediction of the destruction of Moab. See Burckhardt's Syria, p. 364. C.

10 Because[n] thou hast forgotten the God of thy salvation, and hast not been mindful of the rock of thy strength, [o]therefore shalt thou plant pleasant plants,[6] and shalt set it with strange slips:

11 In the day shalt thou make thy plant to grow, and in the morning shalt thou make thy seed to flourish; [p]but the harvest shall be a heap in the day of grief and of desperate sorrow.[7]

12 ¶ Woe[q] to the multitude[8] of many people, which[r] make a noise like the noise of the seas; and to the rushing of nations, that make a rushing like the rushing of mighty[9] waters!

13 The nations shall rush like the rushing of many waters: [s]but God shall rebuke them, and they shall flee far off, and shall be chased as the chaff of the mountains before the wind, and like a rolling thing[1] before the whirlwind.

14 And, behold, at evening tide trouble; and before the morning he is not. This[t] is the portion of them that spoil us, and the lot of them that rob us.

3 All[e] ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when [9]he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains; and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 The confusion of Egypt. 11 The foolishness of her princes. 18 The calling of Egypt into the church. 23 The covenant of Egypt, Assyria, and Israel.

THE burden[1] of Egypt. Behold, the LORD rideth[a] upon a swift cloud,[2] and shall come into Egypt; and [b]the idols of Egypt shall be moved at his presence, and [c]the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it.

2 And[d] I will set the Egyptians against the Egyptians:[3] and they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbour; city against city, and kingdom against kingdom.

3 And [e]the spirit of Egypt shall fail[4] in the midst thereof; and I will destroy[5] the counsel thereof; and they [g]shall seek to the idols, and to the charmers, and to them that have familiar spirits, and to the wizards.

4 And the Egyptians will I give over[6] into the hand of [7]a cruel lord;[8] and a fierce king shall rule over them, saith the Lord, the LORD of hosts.

5 And the waters shall fail from [h]the [9]sea, and the river[1] shall be wasted and dried up.

6 And they shall turn the rivers far away, and the brooks of [2]defence shall be emptied and dried up:[3] the reeds and flags shall wither.

7 The paper reeds by the brooks, by the mouth of the brooks, and every thing sown by the brooks, shall wither, be driven away, and be no more.[4]

8 The fishers also shall mourn, and all they that cast angle into the brooks shall lament, and they that spread nets upon the waters shall languish.

9 Moreover they that work [i]in fine flax, and they that weave networks,[5] shall be confounded.

10 And they shall be broken in the [6]pur-

Ver. 8. This prediction began to be fulfilled when many of the survivors of the captivities of Salmaneser and Esarhaddon turned from idols to the true God, 2 Ch. 30. 10, 11; 35. 18, and it continues to be fulfilled in the gleanings that are still gathered to Christ. C.

Ver. 14. The multitudinous host of Sennacherib seems to have been immediately in the eye of the prophet, of whom the angel of the Lord smote 185,000 in one night, 2 Ki. 19. 35. But similar destruction is predicted against all the spoilers and robbers of Israel—a prediction amply verified in the overthrow of the Babylonian, Grecian, and Roman powers, mainly on account of their cruelty to the people of God. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Companions in wickedness are soon made partners in punishment. Nor can the strongest fortifications defend from God's almighty wrath. Sin fearfully sickens and consumes persons and societies. And when nations are ripened by it, easily and extensively God strips them of their numbers, glory, power, and wealth. But thrice happy is it when the destruction of many is rendered instrumental for the conversion of a remnant to Christ, and when the loss of outward things makes us look off from them all to God himself. Alas! how professors, by their forgetfulness of God, ruin themselves and their country, and turn their most noted outward comforts into real plagues! But puny and empty nothings before God are the mightiest armies of his adversaries. He triumphs over those in his judgments who triumph over his people in their wickedness. And short-lived are the terrors or troubles of believers. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. Let them therefore treasure up past experiences as a ground of future confidence in the like temptations.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 4. God's being like a clear heat, or a cloud of dew, may either be understood of his afflicting or of his comforting them. 5, 6. Before they can ripen their designs, they will bring to themselves destruction, and by their wickedness bring eternal woe to their souls.

Ver. 2. Vessels of bulrushes. That the Egyptians employed vessels of bulrushes, coated with bitumen, is evident from Ex. 2. 3, as well as from general history. And it appears their Ethiopian neighbours employed them likewise. C.—Go, ye swift messengers, to a nation 'stretched out and levelled,' to a people terrible from their beginning hitherto the dread of neighbouring nations), a nation 'that measureth out' (its fields after each inundation) and then 'treadeth down' its seed with the foot of the husbandman, whose land the rivers have 'nourished.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—No place can protect sinners from a just God. No furious rage, which may render them a terror to their neighbors around, can hinder him from finding them. His providential interpositions ought carefully to be remarked: and when dangers are most alarming, he is often nearest to defend and save us. No rage of his enemies can ever disturb his PALM TREES AND PYRAMIDS—THE PYRAMIDS OF CHEOPS IS REPRESENTED BY SOME AS BEING THE ALTAR OF THE LORD, REFERRED TO IN THESE VERSES [ISAIAH, xix: 19–20.]—"In that day there shall be an altar of the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof to the Lord. And it shall be for a sign and for a witness unto the Lord of hosts in the land of Egypt." In a curious book entitled "A Miracle in Stone," Dr. Joseph A. Seiss claims that the 19th and 20th verses of this chapter refer to the great pyramid of Egypt. He says that the altar and the pillar in these verses refer to one and the same thing, that the verses refer to some specific and telling monument, and that all their terms most fully apply to this marvellous hand-made mountain of stone. He thinks the location of the pyramids corresponds to the teachings of the text, that the great pyramid is the hub of Egypt's curved shore line, and so is in the midst of the land and at the border between Palestine and Egypt.

11 ¶ Surely the princes of [j]Zoan are [k]fools, the counsel of the wise counsellors of Pharaoh is become brutish: how say ye unto Pharaoh, I am the son of the wise, the son of ancient kings?

12 Where are they?[9] where are thy [l]wise men? and let them tell thee now, and let them know what the LORD of hosts hath purposed upon Egypt.

13 The princes of Zoan[1] are [m]become fools, the princes of Noph[2] are deceived; they have also seduced Egypt, even they that are [3]the stay[4] of the tribes thereof.

14 The[5] LORD hath mingled a perverse spirit[6] in the midst thereof: and they have caused Egypt to err in every work thereof, as a drunken man [o]staggereth in his vomit.

15 Neither[p] shall there be any work for Egypt, which the head or tail, branch or rush, may do.

16 In that day shall Egypt be [q]like unto women: and it shall be afraid and fear, because of [r]the shaking of the hand of the LORD of hosts, which he shaketh over it.

17 And [s]the land of Judah shall be a terror[7] unto Egypt: every one that maketh mention thereof shall be afraid in himself, because of the counsel of the LORD of hosts, which he [t]hath determined against it.[8]

18 ¶ In [u]that day[9] shall [v]five cities[1] in the land of Egypt speak the language[2] of Canaan, and swear[w] to the LORD of hosts: one shall be called, The city of destruction.[3]

19 In that day shall there be [y]an altar to the LORD in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof to the LORD.

20 And it shall be [z]for a sign and for a witness unto the LORD of hosts in the land of Egypt: for [a]they shall cry unto the LORD because of the oppressors, and he shall send them a saviour,[b] and a great one, and he shall deliver them.

21 And[c] the LORD shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the LORD in that day, and shall do sacrifice and oblation; yea, they shall vow a vow unto the LORD, and perform it.

22 And the LORD [d]shall smite Egypt; he shall smite and heal it: and they shall return even to the LORD, and he shall be entreated of them, and shall heal them.

23 ¶ In that day shall there be [e]a highway out of Egypt to Assyria; and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria; and the Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians.[4]

24 In that day [g]shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria, even a blessing in the midst of the land;

25 Whom the LORD of hosts shall [h]bless, saying, Blessed [i]be Egypt my people, and Assyria the work of my hands, and Israel mine inheritance.

CHAPTER XX.

A type prefiguring the shameful captivity of Egypt and Ethiopia.

IN the year that [a]Tartan came unto [1]Ashdod, (when Sargon[2] the king of Assyria sent him,) and fought against [b]Ashdod and took it;

2 At the same time spake the LORD by Isaiah[3] the son of Amoz, saying, [c]Go and loose the [d]sackcloth from off thy loins, and put off thy shoe from thy foot. And he did so, walking naked[4] and barefoot.

3 And the LORD said, Like as my servant Isaiah hath walked naked and barefoot three years for a sign and wonder upon Egypt and upon Ethiopia;

4 So[e] shall the king of Assyria lead away the Egyptians prisoners,[5] and the Ethiopians captives, young and old, naked and barefoot, even [g]with their buttocks uncovered, to the shame[6] of Egypt.

5 And [h]they shall be afraid and ashamed of Ethiopia their expectation, and of Egypt their glory.

6 And the inhabitant of this isle[7] shall say in that day, [i]Behold, such is our expectation, whither we flee for help to be delivered from the king of Assyria: and how shall we escape?

And Paul declares 'he had rather speak five words with understanding, than ten thousand in an unknown tongue,' 1 Co. 14.19. May not 'five cities' be, therefore, considered not so much a definite number as the representatives of the whole kingdom in its conversion to the gospel? —C.

It must have been a place of great strength, as it stood the longest siege on record, having been besieged by Psammitichus king of Egypt for twenty-nine years. At present it is a miserable village of some fifty huts rather than houses. C.—Its site is now covered with gardens and orchards, among which a few columns and large building stones are here and there seen. These are the only remains of the royal city of Ashdod. The situation is beautiful, and the surrounding plain is not surpassed for fertility in Palestine.—P.

repose. Often he seems to have forgotten his people when he is just ready to work their deliverance. And while he is all-sufficient for the protection, quickening, and comfort of the people, he will not save them unless they repent and accept Christ.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 1. God's riding upon a swift cloud denotes his coming speedily and irresistibly to execute fearful judgments. 2. After the death of Sethon the country was divided into twelve petty governments; all which, after a long civil war, Psammitichus subdued. It may also relate to the civil war between Amasis and Pharaoh-Hophrah, &c. 4. God shall give them up to the tyranny of Psammitichus, Nebuchadnezzar, the Persian kings, &c. 13–17. Infatuated by their giddy tempers, the princes shall follow pernicious counsels, and lead the subjects into ruin. Neither shall any, high or low, do anything proper for their relief, but shall be quite dispirited and terrified by the threatenings and judgments of God. The report of the destruction of Israel and ravage of Judah by the Assyrians, and the overthrow of Judah by the Chaldeans, or the prophecies uttered in the land of Judah, shall throw the Egyptians into the utmost consternation and fear of the like miseries. 18–23. Nevertheless their terrible and long-continued distresses shall at last issue in the conversion of a great many of them, even in the city of their idols, to the Christian faith; and they shall make a solemn and open profession thereof, and shall, through Jesus Christ, avowedly worship the true God everywhere in the country. After God has, by his angel's cutting off Sennacherib's army, and by Alexander's victories, delivered them from their Assyrian and Persian oppression, Jesus, the infinitely mighty Saviour, shall deliver them from Satan and their lusts, and their heathen abominations. By God's wonderful providences they shall be gradually brought to the saving knowledge of, and openly worship him, and solemnly and candidly devote themselves to his service. And in the apostolic, and especially the millennial period, they, and the eastern nations, who had warred with and oppressed them, and the Jews, who had sinfully courted and been sadly oppressed by both, shall harmoniously embrace the gospel, and unite in the service and distinguished favours of God.

Ver. 1. The idols of Egypt shall be moved. Egypt was anciently either the parent or the great patroness of idolatry. The remains of her idols, even til this day, are of the most gigantic stature. But truly they have been moved, for they are often mutilated, or thrown down, or even carried away into distant lands memorials at once of the greatness and the littleness of man. His greatness of power in executing works so truly wonderful; and his littleness of understanding in worshipping them as gods. C.

Ver. 7. The paper reeds by the brooks. The papyrus whence the English word paper, from which were manufactured rolls for writing, cordage, baskets, boats, &c. C.

Ver. 18. The city of destruction. The slightest possible change of the first letter makes it either the 'city of destruction' or the 'city of the sun.' 'City of destruction' seems the most probable reading, as 'city of the sun' seems heathenish rather than scriptural: and is expressively emblematic of that ruin from which the gospel delivers sinners who have destroyed themselves. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God pours the greatest contempt on men's idols; on everything which they inordinately loved or trusted. At his will created comforts concur to aggravate our ruin, and created supporters fail or fight against us. Fomenters of faction, cruel tyrants, and infatuated and giddy princes are the greatest plagues to nations. And when one sinner or sinful society is cut down, it becomes survivors to consider and tremble. If men persist in their wickedness, God is determined to destroy them. But strange, and often unaccountable to us, are his providential dispensations. He often deals most sharply with those for whom he has the greatest mercies in reserve. Deeply he wounds in order that he may graciously heal. He bereaves men of all that they have in this world, that he may give them his gospel, his grace, his ordinances, his Christ. He seeks constantly to form intelligent, devout, and harmoniously bold societies of believers out of those whom Satan had singularly besotted, sin corrupted, and miseries depressed. And it is comely when the servants of the same God, purchased by the same blood of his Son, and begotten by the same Spirit, lay aside all their animosities, and with one heart, one mind, and one mouth glorify God!

POMPEY'S PILLAR—RAISED IN HONOR OF DIOCLETIAN. [ISAIAH, xix: 23.]—"In that day shall there be a highway out of Egypt to Assyria; and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria." In the verse quoted from Isaiah, Egypt is represented as going to Assyria, and the Assyrians as coming to Egypt. What is true of Egypt and Assyria has been true of Egypt and many other surrounding nations. There was a Persian dynasty in Egypt, a Macedonian dynasty, and a Roman dynasty. Pompey's pillar may be taken as a monument which stands for this universal relation of Egypt with other nations. This was erected by Pompey, a Roman prefect, in honor of Diocletian some little time after A. D. 302. It is made of granite brought from Aswan. The shaft is about seventy feet and the whole monument, including its pedestal, is a little over one hundred feet high.

CHAPTER XX. Ver. 1. The word Tartan signifies 'general' or 'commander-in-chief;' and it is probable it is the official title of the first military officer of Assyria rather than a proper name.—Sargon was one of the greatest of Assyrian kings. He reigned between Shalmaneser and Sennacherib, and was the father of the latter. He ascended the throne in B.C. 721, and appears to have reigned about fifteen years. His various expeditions are recorded on the Assyrian monuments. He is only mentioned by name in this passage of Scripture; but he may be 'the king of Assyria' intended in 2 Ki. 17. 6. P.

Ver. 3. Three years. Probably he so walked only three days, a day for a year, according to prophetic rule, Nu. 14. 34; Eze. 4. 6. C.

Ver. 5. And they. That is, the Jews who trusted to Egypt and Ethiopia for help against Assyria, and who disregarded seeking help of God, shall now be afraid of similar calamities, and be ashamed of their unbelief and ingratitude. C.

Ver. 6. Isle. The Hebrew word here translated 'isle' has various shades of meaning. Generally it means 'land' as opposed to water. Then it signifies 'coast,' and then 'isle.' In this passage it should be rendered 'coast.' The reference manifestly is to Philistia, which lay on the coast of the Mediterranean. P.

REFLECTIONS.—O what need of a self-denying humility in the ministers of Christ! They know not to what apparently hard service he may put them. Into what pitiful condition men's wickedness plunges them! Alas! the dreadful nature of slavery and captivity to inward lusts! How created confidences shame, pain, and ruin us at last! But thrice happy are those who in time flee from them all to the never-disappointing Jesus Christ!

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 1, 2. Dreadful calamities shall come upon Babylon on the river Euphrates, which shall reduce it to a desert and fen. Irresistibly they come from Media and Persia, between which and Babylon the wilderness is inhabited by fierce savages. The revolted Medes and Persians shall furiously revenge upon the Chaldeans all their treachery and cruelty to other nations, and shall relieve the enslaved Jews and others from their bondage. 3–5. To their infinite consternation and anguish, their nights of revelling and mirth, and their luxurious feasting, shall be quickly turned into ruinous wars, and into horrid scenes of murder. 6–9. For lo! within view of their watchmen, Darius and Cyrus march forward, with their armies of Medes and Persians, well furnished with everything necessary to destroy Babylon and her multitude of idols. 10. This either represents the afflicted Jews as having this prophecy delivered to them for their comfort, or the Chaldeans as threatened with terrible destruction after they had miserably destroyed the Jews and others. 11, 12. To the affrighted Edomites no other information can be given than that a night of dreadful calamities, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, &c., shall follow their present respite and prosperity. Nor is there any method to escape it, but by a penitent turning to God and his people.

Ver. 1. The desert of the sea. The waters around Babylon are called sea, and the fertile plain is threatened with being turned into a desert—a threatening now literally realized during centuries. C.

Ver. 2. Elam. Elam was a son of Shem, and founder of a great nation. The country of Elam lay on the east bank of the Tigris, and bordered on the Persian Gulf. It embraced the more modern countries of Persia and Susiana; and in this passage it may be regarded as equivalent to Persia. Its capital was Susa; and one of its early monarchs was Chedorlaomer, who is mentioned in Ge. xiv. P.

Ver. 3. I was bowed down, &c. Isaiah, and not a Babylonian, is the speaker; for to Isaiah was the vision declared, ver. 2, 6. C.

Ver. 4. This cannot be the speech of a Babylonian, but of the prophet speaking of the pleasure which a body weary with toil, and a spirit weary with heavy and vexing thoughts, finds in the sleep of the night. C.

Ver. 5. Anoint the shield. This anointing has been interpreted of oiling the shields, that darts might more readily fly off. But this is an unsupported interpretation. Neither seems it proper to derive the interpretation from some obscure or imaginary custom of anointing shields, never adverted to in Scripture. Is not the shield rather the emblem of a chief chosen and appointed by the princes for the defence of his country in its imminent dangers? C.

Ver. 7. This ought rather to be translated: 'And he saw cavalry, horsemen two abreast, riders on asses, and riders on camels.' The Hebrew word rendered 'chariots' sometimes signifies 'riders,' as in 1 Sa. 8. 4: 10. 18. The Persians used both asses and camels in their armies for riding; and they were accustomed to advance in pairs, two abreast. P.

Ver. 10. O! my brethren, the sowing and harvest of the Lord, whom I have laboured to thrash out of your chaff, and winnow into cleanness: lo! I have declared unto you the whole revelation of God! C.

Ver. 11. Dumah. In the midst of the Arabian desert, about 250 miles east of Edom, is an ancient town called by Arab geographers Dumah, but by the modern Bedawin el-Jauf, 'the belly,' probably on account of its features and position. A tradition exists that it was founded by Dumah, the son of Ishmael. It stands in a circular valley, and is encompassed by a ridge of sandstone hills. It still contains about 3000 inhabitants. P.

Ver. 13. Dedanim. Two Dedans are mentioned in Scripture; one descended from Cush, Ge. 10. 7, the other from Abraham by Keturah, Ge. 25. 3. It is the descendants of the latter who are referred to here. Their chief settlements were in Arabia, near the eastern border of Idumea. They seem to have been largely engaged in transport trade, carrying wares from central and eastern Arabia and Persia to the marts of Phoenicia and Egypt, Eze. 26. 20; 38, 13. P.

Ver. 14. Temah. Tema, now called Teyma, is a small town and district east of Idumea, and not far distant from Dumah. P.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! what desolations in populous nations, what alteration in fruitful soils, does sin produce! Quickly they, who treacherously spoiled and murdered others, meet with the same fate. And often the most dreadful ruin comes upon sinners when they are most secure and self-confident. How useful and informing are God's faithful ministers! and what insight they ought to have into the mind and work of God! It is very necessary to discern the signs of the times; and to consider earthly prosperity as but a common inlet to fearful calamities; that we may improve the present hour for returning to God. Kindness to distressed neighbours is ordinarily, by Providence, rewarded with similar reliefs. But how empty is that glory which can be diminished or ruined! Let therefore the Lord alone be my everlasting light, wealth, and honour.

15 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD of hosts, Go, get thee unto this treasurer, even unto [v]Shebna, which is over the house, and say,

16 What hast thou here?[2] and whom hast thou here, that thou hast [x]hewed thee out a sepulchre here, as he[3] that heweth him out a sepulchre on high, and that graveth an habitation for himself in a rock?[4]

17 Behold, the LORD[5] will carry thee away with a mighty captivity,[6] and will [y]surely cover thee.

18 He will [z]surely violently turn and toss thee like a ball into a large country:[7] there shalt thou die, and there the chariots of thy glory shall be the shame of thy lord's house.

19 And [a]I will drive thee from thy station, and from thy state shall he pull thee down.

20 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will call my servant [b]Eliakim, the son of Hilkiah:

21 And I [c]will clothe him with thy robe, and strengthen him with thy girdle, and I will commit thy government into his hand; and he shall be a [d]father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to the house of Judah.

22 And the [e]key of the house of David will I lay upon his shoulder; so he shall open, and none shall shut; and he shall shut, and none shall open.[8]

23 And I will fasten him as [g]a nail in a sure place; and he shall be for [h]a glorious throne to his father's house.

24 And they [i]shall hang upon him all the glory of his father's house, the offspring and the issue, all vessels of small quantity, from the vessels of cups, even to all the vessels of [1]flagons.

25 In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, shall the nail[2] that is fastened in the sure place be removed,[3] and be cut down, and fall; and the burden that was upon it shall be cut off: for the LORD hath spoken it.

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE burden[1] of Tyre. Howl, ye ships of Tarshish;[2] for [a]it is laid waste,[3] so that there is no house, no entering in: from the land of Chittim[4] it is revealed to them.

2 Be [b]still, ye inhabitants of the isle;[5] thou tains, and favoured with God's revelations and ordinances. Ye inhabitants, what is become of all your former security and confidence when ye made light of God's threatenings, that ye are gone to the house-tops to view the approaching army, or to hide yourselves? There is now nothing but doleful outcries and confusion, instead of the wonted shouts of mirth. The men of war die by famine and pestilence, or by their own fears. The rulers have fled; but being overtaken, they and others are chained for prisoners. 6. The Persians and Medes served in the Assyrian and Chaldean armies. 8–14. When Sennacherib had dismantled the fortified cities of Judah, he provided armour, repaired your walls, or built new ones, pulling down part of the houses for that purpose, and conveyed all the water into the city; but ye never applied, by prayer or fasting, to God who formed your city, but instead thereof, spent the little time you had reason to expect, in profane revelling and mirth; which impudent contempt of God and his judgments shall never be forgiven you. 15–19. And you, Shebna, what property or relations have you, a foreigner here, that you should build a stately palace or tomb for yourself? Behold, God shall, in an irresistible manner, drive you into captivity, and overwhelm you with shame and contempt. In a distant country thou shalt live and die obscurely; and your stately chariots and other

3 And by great waters the seed of Sihor,[6] the harvest of the [d]river, is her revenue; and she is a[e] mart of nations.[7]

4 Be thou ashamed, O Zidon; for the sea[8] hath spoken, even the strength of the sea, saying, [g]I travail not, nor bring forth children, neither do I nourish up young men, nor bring up virgins.

5 As [h]at the report concerning Egypt, so shall they be [i]sorely pained at the report of Tyre.

6 Pass[j] ye over to Tarshish; [k]howl, ye inhabitants of the isle.

7 Is this your [l]joyous city, whose antiquity is of ancient days? her own feet[1] shall carry her afar off[2] to sojourn.

8 Who[m] hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowning city, whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honourable of the earth?

9 The LORD of hosts hath purposed it, to stain[3] the pride of all glory, and to bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth.

10 Pass through thy land as a river,[4] O daughter of Tarshish: there is no more strength.[5] marks of honour shall remain, to the reproach of king Ahaz, who preferred so worthless a wretch. 20–24. Elhakim shall be advanced into thine office, and tenderly govern the people. He shall have the supreme government of the king's court and family, and dispose of everything belonging to them. He shall be established in his office; and by his prudent carriage shall procure respect to himself and his relations: all of whom, from the highest to the lowest, shall be advanced by him, and own their dependence on him. 25. But you, Shebna, who now appear so firmly fixed in honour, shall then be disgraced and ruined, and all your dependants along with you.

11 He[o] stretched out his hand over the sea; he shook the kingdoms: the LORD hath given a commandment against the [p]merchant city,[6] to destroy the strong holds[7] thereof.

3 This verse presents many difficulties to the interpreter. Why are the Chaldeans here mentioned? What is the meaning of the second clause? What place is referred to in clause three? The following seems to be the sense:—'Behold the land of the Chaldees (the people who were the instruments employed in the destruction of Tyre); this people (the people now inhabiting the land) was not (had no existence as a nation until a recent period). The Assyrians founded it (the country) for dwellers in the desert (for the Chaldeans, who, previous to this time had led a wandering life). They set up its towers (the towers of Babylon), they reared up the palaces thereof. He (the Chaldean) brought it (Tyre) to ruin.—P.

Ver. 8. He discovered the covering of Judah. This expression has been interpreted to 'take away the veil,' an allusion not likely to be applied to Judah. Is it not rather a military allusion, signifying, 'he has passed the fortresses of the frontier,' the covering lines of defence? C.

Ver 15. Shebna. All that is known of Shebna is contained in ch. xxxvi. xxxvii.; 2 Ki. 18. 19; but from the threatenings here denounced he appears to have been a leader in the epicurean not that occupied the place of repentance towards God. C.

Ver. 23. I will fasten him, &c. In eastern houses there are many pins or pegs fastened in the walls for the suspension of vessels, &c. In reference to this custom, Eliakim is characterized by his capacity, ver. 24, of attending to the greatest amounts and the minutest details—one of the highest practical qualifications of a truly great mind: nothing too great for its capacity; nothing too little for its condescension. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How unbounded is the knowledge of God! Not a motion in our course, not a word in our tongue, not a thought in our heart, but he knows it long beforehand! How severe are God's corrections of his own professed people! Pious men, and especially faithful ministers, will be distinguished patterns of grief for public calamities, and of eyeing the hand of God therein. In times of peace many things lie quite neglected. And even in danger, many mind nothing but external means of relief, atheistically overlooking God himself. Nor can the best of rulers reform the hearts of their subjects. Luxury leads to infidelity. But how dreadful is it when professors riot in revellings and mirth, when God is calling them to uncommon humiliation for sin! Alas! such luxurious feasts and frothy songs issue in everlasting damnation! It is very rash for court favourites to pride themselves in their station, or to tyrannize over others. God may suddenly displace and debase them. Preferment is only honourable when it is obtained unsought for, and when it is wholly improved to the glory of God and the benefit of mankind. It is a great mercy for churches and nations to have men prudent, active, and faithful in the principal places of government, especially after almost everything has been mismanaged by others. And above all, infinite is the mercy of JEHOVAH, in setting up Jesus Christ a Saviour to restore what he took not away; and that he has intrusted him with the whole concerns of his own glory and of our eternal happiness!

CHAPTER XXIII. Ver. 1–5. Those concerned in the ships of Cilicia, the south parts of Spain, and other sea-ports, shall grievously bewail the extensive destruction of Tyre, as the harbours and places of entertainment and commerce there shall be all destroyed by the Chaldeans or Greeks, and part of the inhabitants carried captive; of which they shall be informed by the people with whom they trade. There shall be nothing but mournful silence and desolation in Tyre, which had been lately filled with mariners, merchants, and goods: filled with the corn and other commodities of Egypt; and resorted to by all the trading nations of the known world. Zidon, her parent and neighbouring city, shall be quite overwhelmed with confusion, because Tyre, long the mistress of the sea, instead of sending forth her colonies, shall be bereaved of her inhabitants. And the ruin of Tyre shall be no less alarming to the Egyptians and other neighbouring nations than the destruction of Egypt by Moses, or by the Ethiopians or Assyrians, &c. 6, 7. Notwithstanding her antiquity, and wonted gaiety and mirth, the inhabitants of Tyre shall, in great anguish and grief, leave their own country, and flee for shelter to Lesser Asia, Spain, or the north of Africa. 8, 9. Nor shall all their glory and wealth be able to prevent their ruin, since God has determined to pull down their pomp and magnificence as a warning to others. 10. Their fortifications and armies being ruined, the inhabitants of Tyre, long supported by their sea trade, shall be glad, in multitudes, swiftly to flee from their country never to return. 11, 12. It is God who, to the terror of the nations around, permits the Chaldeans or Greaks to destroy it; and though never conquered since it was founded by the Zidonians, it shall now be destroyed. Nor shall the inhabitants, carried captive to Chaldea or Greece, or who flee to other places, obtain there any fixed safety or quietness. 13. Nor need the Tyrians think the ruin of their city impossible. The Chaldeans, so anciently formed into a nation by Nimrod, and lately re-established by Baladan, an Assyrian prince, shall, after all their fortification of Babylon their capital, and their conquest of nations, bring them, and then be brought themselves, to ruin. 15–17. And after the Tyrians have been deprived of their trade for seventy years, answerable to the continuance of the Chaldean monarchy, they shall find again their wonted liberty; and they shall, by every engaging art, draw the nations to trade with them as formerly. 18. At last the Tyrians shall, in the apostolic age, be converted to the faith of Christ, and shall employ their power and wealth to promote his glory, and plentifully support his ministers and members.

Ver. 1. Tarshish. 'Tarshish' is a name common to Tarsus in Cilicia, some portion of India or Africa situated on the Indian Ocean, or of Spain; which last probably is the country here meant. See ver. 6. C.——Chittim. The Chittim were a people descended from Javan, Ge. 10. 4. Cyprus was probably their original seat. Its chief town was Citium, which is radically identical with Chittim. The Greeks afterwards occupied Cyprus, but seem to have been called Chittim. They established colonies far and wide throughout the Levant. From them Macedon—Ma Keti, 'the land of the Keti or Chittim'—derived its name. They also settled in Italy. P.

Ver. 3. The seed of Sihor, the harvest of the river, is her revenue. Grain from the banks of the Nile, 1 Ch. 3. 5. The river, most probably the Euphrates, as the channel of Indian commerce. C.

Ver. 5. Tyre. Ancient Tyre was situated on the eastern shore of the Mediterranean, about 25 miles south of Sidon; New Tyre, on an island, about half a mile from the land; for upwards of 300 years it was justly considered the commercial capital of the world. Yet, when at the height of prosperity, its destruction was foretold by Ezekiel, Eze. xxvi.–xxviii., as well as by Isaiah. Yet how unlikely was its ruin! It was a place of prodigious strength, so that it successfully withstood Shalmanezer, king of Assyria, during a siege of five years; and was not taken by Nebuchadnezzar till after a siege of thirteen years. The island city had walls 150 feet high; but was taken by Alexander after a siege of seven months, and reduced to a state of utter ruin. It subsequently recovered a portion of its prosperity; but has long been what Ezekiel foretold, 'as the top of a rock, a place to spread

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 The deplorable judgments of God upon the land. 13 A remnant shall joyfully praise him. 16 God in his judgments shall advance his kingdom.

BEHOLD,[a] the LORD maketh[1] the earth empty; and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down,[2] and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof.

2 And it shall be, [b]as with the people, so with the priest;[3] as[c] with the servant, so with his master; as with the maid, so with her mistress; as with the buyer, so with the seller; as with the lender, so with the borrower; as with the taker of usury, so with the giver of usury to him.

3 The[d] land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled: for the LORD hath spoken this word.

4 The earth mourneth, and fadeth away; the world languisheth, and fadeth away; the haughty people[4] of the earth do languish.

5 The earth also is [e]defiled under the inhabitants thereof, because they [g]have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant.

6 Therefore[h] hath the curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate: therefore[i] the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left.[5]

7 The[j] new wine mourneth, the vine languisheth, all the merry-hearted do sigh.

8 The mirth [k]of tabrets ceaseth, the noise of them that rejoice endeth, the joy of the harp ceaseth.

9 They shall not drink wine with a song; strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it.

10 The[l] city of confusion[6] is broken down: every house is shut up, that no man may come in.

11 There[m] is a crying for wine in the streets; [n]all joy is darkened, the mirth of the land is gone.

12 In[p] the city is left desolation, and the gate is smitten with destruction.

13 ¶ When thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people, [q]there shall be as the shaking of an olive-tree, and as the gleaning grapes[7] when the vintage is done.

14 They[r] shall lift up their voice, they shall sing[8] for the majesty of the LORD, they shall cry aloud from the sea.

15 Wherefore [s]glorify ye the LORD in the [9]fires,[1] even the name of the LORD God of Israel [t]in the isles of the sea.

16 ¶ From[u] the uttermost part[2] of the earth have we heard songs, even glory to the righteous.[3] But I said, [v]My leanness,[4] my leanness, woe unto me![5] the[w] treacherous dealers have dealt treacherously; yea, the treacherous dealers have dealt very treacherously.

17 Fear,[y] and the pit, and the snare, are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth.

18 And it shall come to pass, [z]that he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for [a]the windows from on high are open,[6] and the foundations of the earth do shake.

19 The[b] earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly.

20 The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the [c]transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again.

21 And it shall come to pass in that day, that [d]the LORD shall punish[7] the host of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth.

22 And they shall be gathered together as nets upon.' Jameh estimates the present inhabitants of New Tyre at about 4000. The ancient city is a total ruin. C.

Ver. 15. Seventy years. From the destruction of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar till its restoration as a kingdom by Darius Hystaspes, in gratitude for their naval services, was just seventy years 'according to the days of one king,' or 'one kingdom,' that of Babylon; and from the first year of Nebuchadnezzar till Babylon was taken by Cyrus, was just seventy years—the whole period allotted by Providence to the Babylonian monarchy. C.

Ver. 17. Is not the last clause of ver. 17, beginning 'and she shall turn,' &c., to be read as a parenthesis, and united to ver. 16, and the first clause of ver. 17 to be read as the preface to ver. 18? And is not the whole a promise already in part fulfilled by the early conversion of Tyre to the Christian faith; and of blessed days to come, of which the past is the emblem, and the prophecy the security? C.

REFLECTIONS.—The wealthiest on earth are quickly reduced to poverty, and the most noisy traders to silence. And earthly friends can give but little help in our distress, however deeply they be concerned on account of it. When God pursues, there is no fleeing from our misery: and the more secure we lived, the more grievous will be our fall. There is no fixed, no solid rest but in Jesus Christ and in fellowship with him!—What a mercy is it if an afflicting God do not draw out his wrath to all generations,—to eternity! And if he turn back our captivity, he can bring back our lost prosperity. But earthly wealth often seduces men's souls into spiritual whoredom. Happy therefore are they whose troubles lead them to the knowledge of God, and whose trade regained is devoted to the service of Jesus Christ! Let him be my merchant, my wealth, my strong city; and I, and all I have, be HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

CHAPTER XXIV. Ver. 13–15. Such as in faith persevere shall cordially and publicly acknowledge God's great power and goodness in their preservation, and praise him in the countries where they sojourn. And your duty is to own his power, justice, and mercy, and to trust in him, and patiently wait for deliverance in every fiery trial, and in every country, however remote. 16 may either signify that, though once the whole land of Israel was filled with shouts of praise to a righteous and promise-performing God, yet there is now nothing but desolation, murder, pillage, and captivity instead thereof; or that, though the Gentiles are in multitudes assembling to Christ and his worship, yet the Jewish nation reject him, and are rendered miserable on that account. 19, 20. The country is rendered desolate, and the inhabitants know not which way to turn themselves, and are tossed about from one place to another. 21, 22 may perhaps represent the final ruin of the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Romans, Antichristians, Turks, and other enemies of the people of God, as well as of the Jewish great men. 23. The glorious reign of Christ in his church, particularly in the apostolic, spiritual, and eternal periods, will obscure the lustre of all earthly grandeur and authority, and the greatest potentates shall stoop to him.

Ver. 1. The Lord maketh the earth empty. The earth here signifies the land of Israel, as is evident from its inhabitants being guilty of breaking the 'everlasting covenant,' &c., ver. 5. Yet the judgments that originate there extend to all the nations, ver. 4. For when 'the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God; and if it first begin there, 'what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?' 1 Pe. 4. 17. C.

Ver. 17. Fear. It is important to observe that while those who fear God, fear none but him; those who refuse to fear God are never delivered from fear. The mightiest nations, even in time of profound peace, are always afraid of one another—fear, under the name of panic, is always at intervals smiting the heart, and paralyzing the arm of commerce; and there is an undefined sense of fear, an instinctive prophesying of impending calamities, and a certain 'fearful looking for of judgment,' from which no sinner can escape so long as he neglects the 'great salvation.' C.

Ver. 22. Shall they be visited. 'They shall be found wanting' (the marginal reading), is to be preferred, as the whole process in the judgment of all nations, Mat. 25. 45, is not so much the commission of sin, as the want of grace and works of love. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What a world of sinning and suffering we live in! What a theatre of disappointments, dishonours, confusions, sorrows, and deaths! No rank, no place, nothing escapes the fearful effects of sins curse: and if men avoid one misery, they but fall into another. Nor are any more wretched than treacherous apostates from God and rejecters of his Son. Nevertheless, God in the worst of times finds a remnant who believes; and often makes the most terrible calamities an introduction to the most remarkable displays of his mercy and grace. In transcendent wisdom did God bring in the accursed Gentiles to his church, when he rejected the seed of Abraham his friend. And in true compassion will Jesus hereafter.

CHURCH OF THE COLUMN, ATHENS—ONE OF THE FIRST CITIES IN EUROPE, WHERE ST. PAUL PREACHED THE GOSPEL, AND A CITY NOW FILLED WITH CHRISTIAN CHURCHES. [ISAIAH, XXV: 6-9.]—"And in this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wine on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined. And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." Above is a picture of the Greek Church of the column in Athens, Greece. The above prophecy of Isaiah is connected with the year B. C. 704, but is thought to refer to the church of the future. Just two years before the date of this prophecy, or B. C. 714, Hippomenes rendered himself execrable in the eyes of Athenians by his cruelty in exposing his own daughter to be devoured by horses Now, through the influence of the church to which Isaiah referred in his prophecy Athens is a Christian city.

prisoners are gathered[8] in the pit,[9] and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be visited.[1]

23 Then the [e]moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the LORD of hosts shall reign[g] in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients, gloriously.[2]

CHAPTER XXV.

1 The prophet praiseth God for his past judgments, 6 for his saving benefits, 9 and for his victorious salvation.

O LORD,[a] thou art my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name: for thou hast done wonderful things; thy counsels of old are [b]faithfulness and truth.

2 For[c] thou hast made of a city an heap; of a defenced city a ruin: a palace of [d]strangers to be no city; it shall never be built.

3 Therefore[e] shall the strong people glorify thee, the city of the terrible nations shall fear thee.

4 For[g] thou hast been a strength to the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress, a refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat, when the blast of the terrible ones is as a storm against the wall.[1]

5 Thou[h] shalt bring down the noise of strangers,[2] as the heat in a dry place; even the heat with the shadow of a cloud: the branch of the terrible ones shall be brought low.

6 ¶ And[i] in this mountain[3] shall the LORD of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of [j]wines on the lees well refined.

7 And[k] he will destroy[4] in this mountain the face of [l]the covering cast[5] over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations.[6]

8 He will [m]swallow up death in victory; and the Lord GOD will [o]wipe away tears from off all faces; and the [p]rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the LORD hath spoken it.

9 And it shall be said in that day, Lo, [q]this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the LORD: [r]we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation.

10 For in this mountain [s]shall the hand of the LORD rest, and Moab[7] shall be trodden [8]down under him, even as straw is trodden down for the dunghill.[9]

11 And[t] he shall spread forth his hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim: and he shall bring down their pride together with the spoils of their hands.

12 And the fortress of the high fort of thy walls shall he bring down, lay low, and bring to the ground, even to the dust.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 A song inciting to confidence in God, 5 for his judgments, 12 and for his favour to his people. 20 An exhortation to wait on God.

IN that[a] day shall this song be [b]sung in the land of Judah: We have [c]a strong city; [d]salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks.

2 Open[e] ye the gates, that the righteous nation which [g]keepeth the truth[1] may enter in.

3 Thou wilt keep him [h]in perfect [2]peace, to the amazement of all beholders, draw both Jews and Gentiles to himself; and at last, for the eternal manifestation of his glorious perfections, translate his whole kingdom to the celestial mansions above.

CHAPTER XXV. Ver. 1–5. All the desolations which thou hast made in the cities of the heathen are the execution of thy purposes and fulfilment of thy word: and thereby shall the stoutest of thine enemies be obliged to acknowledge thy almighty power and strict justice. And as thou hast formerly protected and comforted thy people when furiously assaulted and distressed by their powerful enemies, thou shalt continue, with infinite ease, to baffle the most furious attempts of thine adversaries, and to reduce them and their posterity to ruin. 6–9. In Judea, but chiefly in the firmly-founded and wide-spread gospel church, shall the Lord exhibit, offer to, and bestow on sinful men of all nations, the spiritual and eternal blessings of his new kingdom, feast them on the flesh and blood of his Son, remove their ignorance and guilt, redeem them from death, comfort them against grief, remove the tokens of his anger, and enable them to triumph in himself and his salvation. 10–12. And while he dwells with, delights in, and protects believers, he shall everywhere, and with infinite ease, utterly destroy all those who reject Christ.

Ver. 1. I will exalt thee. Who is the speaker of these words? Isaiah, or some other? Is not the speaker 'the Lord of hosts,' 'manifest in the flesh,' 'before his ancients gloriously?' Comp. Ro. 15. 9 with Ps. 18. 49. See also ch. 26. 19, 20, where none but Messiah can be the speaker. C.

Ver. 2. Made of a city an heap. The last city mentioned by the prophet is in ch. 24. 10, 'the city of confusion,' which is Babylon. Babylon natural being long a shapeless ruin—a heap—the emblem of the ruin to which Babylon mystical is yet to be reduced.—A palace of strangers. Babylon is called 'a palace of strangers,' because of the rich and princely visitors drawn by interest or curiosity to visit and reside in it; or of its warlike enemies drawn by cupidity and ambition to invade and take possession of it. C.

Ver. 6. A feast. The gospel is frequently represented under the emblem of a feast, Mat. 8. 11; Lu. 14. 16; 22. 29, 30.—Fat things—the emblem of abundance and prosperity, Ge. 41. 26, 29. —Wines—wine, the emblem of the restorative power of the gospel promises, Is. 45. 1, 2.—On the lees—refined mechanically by rest, and chemically by mutual agency of the parts, from all turbid and feculent mixture, the emblem of a church purified from 'all false doctrine, heresy, and schism.' C.

Ver. 7. The vail that is spread over all nations. I will remove the 'vail of Moses' from the Jew, and enable him to see Christ in all the sacrifices, the only 'end of the law for righteousness;' and I will remove the vail of prejudice and antipathy through which the Gentiles have hitherto looked upon the Jews. C.

Ver. 11. 'And he,' not the Lord, but Moab, 'shall spread forth his hands in midst thereof, as the swimmer stretcheth out his hands to swim:'—that is, Moab shall struggle as a drowning man: —'but God shall bring down his pride, and the rapacity of his hands together.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Thrice blessed is that people whose God is the Lord; and who have all his persons, perfections, purposes, promises, threatenings, and works engaged in their behalf! It is wicked, mad, and self-ruinous for the mightiest powers of hell or earth to injure them, or to attempt their destruction. Why then should not their lips be filled with his praise and honour all the day, who is so much to them, has done, does, can, and will do so much for their salvation in time and eternity? What a ground of grateful praise is it, that in Judah's land, on Calvary's mount, Jesus prepared himself, and all the fulness of God in him, to be our abundant provision! He finished transgression, and made an end of sin. He, through death, destroyed death and him that had the power of it, and secured an infinite fulness of light, life, and salvation for believers. What ground of praise is it that, in the gospel, he sets before sinners of the Gentiles all the fulness of God in himself, for our present and everlasting nourishment! And why not rejoice in him for that he has pledged his infallible promise, that heathenism, Popery, and everything sinful and ruinous, shall give place to his glory filling the whole earth, and to his being in heaven our everlasting ALL and IN ALL.

CHAPTER XXVI. Ver. 1, 2. As God fortified and protected Jerusalem from Sennacherib's army, and by their destruction gave his people access to celebrate their solemn feasts, so shall he firmly found and fortify his gospel church, that no power of hell or earth shall ever prevail against her; and multitudes of persons, accepting Christ, sincere and steady in their profession, and holy in their conversation, shall be added as her members. 5, 6. Not only Nineveh, Babylon, and Rome, but heathenism, Mahometanism, and Popery, shall be extirpated, and the gospel planted instead thereof, even by weak instruments. 7. God makes the way of his people plain and clear, and he directs, judges, and approves their conduct. 8, 9. Lord, even under thy heavy chastisements, we have patiently served thee and waited for deliverance, and have earnestly desired, meditated on, and comforted ourselves in thy grace, power, and faithfulness, and the former manifestations thereof. 9–11. Adversity is an ordinary mean of stirring up men to consideration and necessary duties; but whether thou prosper or punish obstinate sinners, they blind and harden themselves under both mercies and judgments. No ordinances, patterns, nor providences can move them to duty: but they shall at length feel thy judgments, and be filled with shame for their spiteful behaviour towards thy people. 12–14. Thou who hast afflicted us, wilt render us happy and prosperous, even as thou hast already vouchsafed great mercies and deliverances to us. Many heathen powers have tyrannized over us; but by thy favour and help we will own thee alone for our God, trust in thee for and give thee the praise of all our deliverances. Thy providence hath effectually and irrecoverably destroyed all our oppressors. 15–18. Both the Jewish nation and the Christian church have been exceedingly enlarged and extended; but notwithstanding our prayers in trouble, and painful attempts, all has been hitherto useless: the wicked still continue numerous and whose mind[3] is stayed on thee: [t]because he trusteth in thee.

4 Trust[j] ye in the LORD for ever: for [k]in the LORD JEHOVAH is everlasting strength:[4]

5 ¶ For[l] he bringeth down them that dwell on high; the [m]lofty city, he layeth it low; he layeth it low, even to the ground; he bringeth it even to the dust.

6 The[n] foot shall tread it down, even the feet of the poor, and the steps of the needy.

7 The way of the just is [o]uprightness: thou, most[p] upright, dost [q]weigh the path of the just.

8 Yea, in the [r]way of thy judgments, O LORD, have we [s]waited for thee; [t]the desire of our soul is to thy name, and to the remembrance of thee.

9 With my soul [u]have I desired thee in the night; yea, with my spirit within me will I seek thee early: for [v]when thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness.

10 Let[w] favour be showed to the wicked, yet will he not learn righteousness: [x]in the land of uprightness will he deal unjustly, and will not behold the majesty of the LORD.

11 LORD, when [z]thy hand is lifted up, they will not see: [a]but they shall see, and be ashamed for their envy at the people; yea, [b]the fire of thine enemies shall devour them.[5]

12 ¶ LORD, [c]thou wilt ordain peace for us: for thou also hast [d]wrought all our works in us.[6]

13 O LORD our God, [e]other lords beside thee have had dominion over us: but [g]by thee[7] only will we make mention of thy name.[8]

14 They[h] are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise: therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish.

15 Thou[i] hast increased the nation, O LORD, thou hast increased the nation: thou art glorified: thou hast [j]removed it far unto all the ends of the earth.

16 LORD, [k]in trouble have they visited thee, they poured out a prayer[9] when thy chastening was upon them.

17 Like[l] as a woman with child, that draweth near the time of her delivery, is in pain, and crieth out in her pangs; so have we been in thy sight, O LORD.

18 We[n] have been with child, we have been in pain, we have as it were brought forth wind; we have not wrought any deliverance in the earth, neither have [o]the inhabitants of the world fallen.[1]

19 Thy[p] dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead.

20 ¶ Come, my people, [q]enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for [r]a little moment, until the indignation be overpast.

21 For, behold, the LORD [s]cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: [t]the earth also shall disclose her blood,[2] and shall no more cover her slain.

powerful. 19. The Jewish nation, seemingly dead under the Assyrian ravages, the Chaldean captivity, and present dispersion, shall again revive and flourish. The gospel church shall be restored, after her decays, by the influence of a preached gospel: and at the last day every believer, through union to Jesus Christ, shall be raised to everlasting life. 20, 21. But as terrible troubles must come for the punishment of the wicked and the manifestation of their wickedness, it is necessary that every saint, by faith, repentance, and prayer, flee to God for protection, lay hold on his promises, and depend on his perfections and providences, till that time of fearful calamities be over.

Ver. 1. A strong city. The church is the city of God, Ps. 48. 1: He. 12. 22, including the idea of compactness, Ps. 122. 3, or close fellowship and mutual dependence—rights of citizenship, Ep. 2. 19—riches of commerce—thrones of judgment, and walls of defence. C.

Ver. 2. The gates. The gate of doctrine in principle, precept, and promise—and the gate of baptism into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, Mat. 28. 19, 20. —Keepeth the truth. There is no rational characteristic of the true church but keeping the truth as it is in Jesus, in profession of doctrine and power of godliness, Ja. 1. 18. C.

Ver. 7. More literally, 'the way for the just is smoothnesses' (made even): 'smooth the highway of the just thou orderest.' C.

Ver. 9. In the night. During the dark period of national calamity. See Ps. 30. 5. C.

Ver. 10. Will not behold the majesty of the Lord. The Jews could see no majesty in Jesus, mainly because he did not assume the forms of human pride, but came 'meek and lowly.' They would not acknowledge his power even when he cast out devils; they would not believe his witness, even when he rose from the dead. C.

Ver. 12. God works all his people's working, (1) by subduing their enmity, Ro. 8. 7; (2) by giving them the will, Phi. 2. 13; (3) by furnishing the power, He. 13. 21; and (4) by prospering their undertakings, Ge. 39. 3. C.

Ver. 15. Thou hast removed [the nation], &c. This is not a prophecy of the removal of Israel from Canaan, nor their scattering among all nations, but of the final enlargement of the kingdom of the Christ, when 'the heathen shall be his inheritance, and the ends of the earth his possession.' C.

Ver. 19. Messiah, who was originally revealed as the seed of the woman, came in a body prepared, that he might do the will of his Father in the suffering of death: and so be crowned with glory and honour in the victory of the resurrection. Messiah must here be the speaker, as the prediction is true of him and not of another. Which reference of the passage to him is still farther confirmed by ver. 20, in which the speaker addresses Israel as their king, saying, 'Come, my people.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Truly blessed are they who have fled to Jesus Christ for refuge, and are encompassed by his promises and infinite perfections! No Christian character can be formed without a steadfast and exact adherence to God's truths. Truly righteous, upright, and humble saints are an inestimable blessing to nations and churches. Steady faith in God's perfections and promises produces much solid peace and composure of mind. If we trust in him firmly, we shall find ground to praise him constantly. And if we by faith put our strong enemies in his hand, he will easily bring them down. If with ardent desires we wait for him in every ordinance and providence, we shall quickly find him to our comfort. And the earlier and more earnest our supplications are, they will be the more graciously answered. Alas! how hardened are many hearts, that neither mercies can melt nor judgment awaken them! But it is good for us to draw near to God and renounce all his rivals! Whatever discouraging providences he may exercise us with for a while, confusion and ruin will overwhelm all his and our enemies at last. Let us therefore be sober, and hope to the end for his salvation. He quickens dead souls, revives dead churches, and will at last quicken our dead bodies, and make them like unto his glorious body. Under manifold troubles and injuries let us possess our souls in patience. The Judge stands at the door. Our afflictions, however sharp, will soon be over; and our protection in them, under the shadow of the Almighty, is both safe and sweet. But what awful discoveries will God make of men's sins when he rises up to punish them!

CHAPTER XXVII. Ver. 1. Tyrannical oppressors, strong, furious, crafty, and mischievous, are likened to leviathans, serpents, dragons, &c., especially if they dwelt near such animals, as the kings of Assyria, Egypt, and Babylon did. 2, 3. The reformed Jewish nation and gospel church is likened to a vineyard bringing forth the choicest vines; because, being planted, watered, and protected by God, they abounded in good works. 4. Though I was angry with them, mine anger is turned away through Christ: but if hypocrites in the church, or profane persons without it, offer to contend with me, they may expect to be quickly destroyed. 5, 6. Jews and true church members shall, as reconciled through Christ, be firmly settled, and shall increase in numbers and glory. 7–9. Nor will God afflict his own people in the same wrathful and ruinous manner as he does their heathen or antichristian eneevery moment: lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day.

4 Fury[i] is not in me: who would set [j]the briers and thorns against me in battle? I would go through[3] them, I would burn them together.

5 Or [k]let him take hold of my strength, that he may make peace with me; and he shall make peace with me.

6 He[l] shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root: Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit.

7 ¶ Hath he smitten him, as he smote those[4] that smote him? or is he slain according to the slaughter of them that are slain by him?[5]

8 In[n] measure, when it shooteth forth,[6] thou wilt [o]debate with it:[7] he[8] stayeth his rough wind in the day of the [p]east wind.

9 By[q] this, therefore, shall the iniquity of Jacob be purged; and this is all the fruit to take away his sin; when [r]he maketh all the stones of the altar as chalk stones that are beaten in sunder, the groves and images[9] shall not stand up.

10 [s]Yet[1] the defenced city shall be desolate, and the habitation forsaken, and left like a wilderness: there [t]shall the calf feed, and there shall he lie down, and consume the branches thereof.

11 When [u]the boughs thereof are withered, they shall be broken off: [v]the women come and set them on fire; for it is [z]a people of no understanding:[2] therefore he that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will show them no favour.

12 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that the LORD shall [y]beat off[3] from the channel of the river unto the stream of Egypt, and ye shall be [z]gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel.

13 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the [a]great trumpet[4] shall be blown, and they shall come which were [b]ready to perish [c]in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts in the land of Egypt, and [d]shall worship the LORD in the holy mount at Jerusalem.

Consequently in this prophecy Ephraim means the kingdom of the ten tribes; 'the drunkards of Ephraim' are the godless and dissipated population; 'the crown of pride' is the city of Samaria. The city was celebrated not merely for the beauty of its situation, but of its buildings. The panorama it commands is the richest and most picturesque in central Palestine.—P.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 The prophet threateneth Ephraim for their pride and drunkenness. 5 The residue shall be advanced in the kingdom of Christ. 7 He rebuketh their error, 9 their untowardness to learn, 14 and their carnal security. 16 Christ, the sure foundation, is promised. 18 Their security shall be tried. 23 They are incited to the consideration of God's discreet providence.

WOE to [a]the crown of pride, to the [b]drunkards of Ephraim, whose [c]glorious beauty is a fading flower, which are[1] on the head of the fat valleys of them that are overcome[2] with [3]wine!

2 Behold, the LORD hath [d]a mighty and strong one,[4] which, as a tempest of hail, and a destroying storm, as a flood of mighty waters overflowing, shall cast down to the earth with the hand.

3 The crown of pride, the drunkards of Ephraim, shall be [e]trodden under feet:[5]

4 And the glorious beauty which is on the head of the fat valley shall be [g]a fading flower, and as [h]the hasty[6] fruit before the summer; which, when he that looketh upon it seeth, while it is yet in his hand he eateth[7] it up.

5 ¶ In that day shall the LORD of hosts be [i]for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty, unto the residue[8] of his people,

6 And for [j]a spirit of judgment to him that sitteth in judgment, and for strength to them that [k]turn the battle to the gate.[9]

7 ¶ But[l] they also have erred through wine, and through strong drink are out of the way: the priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink, they are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink; they err in vision, they stumble in judgment.

8 For all tables are full of vomit and filthiness, so that there is no place clean.[1]

9 ¶ Whom[m] shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand [2]doctrine? them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts.

mies; but will so mitigate their troubles as that they may be able to bear them; and make them means of stirring them up to repentance and reformation, particularly in detesting and destroying their idolatrous altars, groves, and images. 10, 11. Nevertheless to punish the stupidity and blindness of the present generation, and their imitators in wickedness, the defenced cities shall be laid desolate, and the palaces become pastures for flocks and herds. The whole country shall be exposed to the ravage of the most weak and contemptible enemies. 12, 13. By the providence of God, and proclamation of Cyrus, the Jews shall be brought back to their own land from Chaldea and from Egypt, and shall build the temple and restore the worship of God at Jerusalem. In the latter days they shall be gathered from the east and west, north and south, and shall embrace the Christian faith, and from every quarter shall God, in the apostolic and millennial periods, gather men to the church and worship of Jesus Christ.

Ver. 1. The book of Revelation describes a period during which 'the woman,' the emblem of the persecuted church, hides herself in the wilderness, Re. 12. 6, 14, which well corresponds to the admonition, Is. 26. 20. At the same time (Re. 12. 9) the dragon, the old serpent, is cast out, which well accords with the prophecy in the text—the destruction of leviathan, 'the dragon that is in the sea.' C.

Ver. 4–6. The VINEYARD replies—'I have no wall for my defence! O that I had a defence of the thorn and the brier!' JEHOVAH speaks—'Against them should I march in battle, I should burn them up together. Ah! let her rather take hold of my protection!' The VINEYARD replies—'Let him make peace with me, peace let him make with me!' JEHOVAH speaks—'They that come of the root of Jacob shall flourish' (Lowth). C.

Ver. 9. By this fatherly chastisement shall Jacob's children be purged of their evil inclinations; and all the fruit, ver. 6, of my tending and watering shall be the removal of idolatry, the national sin that has hitherto most easily entangled them. C.

REFLECTIONS.—No enemy is too strong for God to deal with; and his remarkable deliverances tune his people's hearts to praise him. Being infinitely dear and precious to him, his church can never fail, nor any true member miss the joy of faith. He, as reconciled in Christ, delights to reconcile the world to himself, and bless men with all spiritual blessings in him: but it is infinitely hazardous to set ourselves in opposition to him. Never are our troubles on earth so sharp, but it is a mercy that they are not heavier; and when God inflicts one sore judgment he ordinarily restrains another. Whatever the saints lose in their troubles, their enemies lose more in the end. Troubles must either destroy the sin or the sinner. And if mitigated troubles be merciful, sanctified ones are much more so. How provoking to God and ruinous to men is ignorance of God under the means of knowledge and grace! But how marvellous is it that, by the most terrible outward calamities, he should pave the way to remarkable mercies, and that the ruin and scattering of nations should introduce a gathering to Jesus Christ and his worship, nay, to his heavenly mansions! And notwithstanding all the opposition of hell and earth, no faithful soul shall come short either of grace here or glory hereafter.

CHAPTER XXVIII. Ver. 1–4. The proud state and drunken nation of the Israelites shall quickly be robbed of their present transitory power and honour. The Assyrians, furiously invading their country, shall irresistibly, easily, and suddenly reduce them to debasement and misery, lay desolate their country, and seize on their wealth. 5, 6. But the kingdom of Judah shall be marvellously preserved and continued in their relation to God; their magistrates shall be endowed 11 For with [p]stammering lips,[4] and another tongue, will he speak[5] to this people.

12 To whom he said, [q]This is the rest wherewith ye may cause the weary to rest; and this is the refreshing: [r]yet they would not hear.

13 But[s] the word of the LORD was unto them precept upon precept,[6] precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little; that [t]they might go, and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken.

14 ¶ Wherefore [u]hear the word of the LORD, ye[v] scornful men, that rule this people which is in Jerusalem:

15 Because ye have said, [w]We have made a covenant with death,[7] and with hell are we at agreement; [y]when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us: for we have made [z]lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves:

16 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold,[a] I lay in Zion for a foundation [b]a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation: [c]he that believeth shall not make haste.[8]

17 ¶ Judgment[d] also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet; and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding-place.

18 And [e]your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, then ye shall be trodden down by it.[9]

19 From[g] the time that it goeth forth it shall take you: for morning by morning shall it pass over, by day and by night: and [h]it shall be a vexation only to understand the report.[1]

* The Hebrew word rendered 'bread-corn' means 'bread,' then the grain from which bread is usually made; that is wheat. The latter significa-tion it has here. The mode of threshing wheat is this:—It is spread out to the depth of two feet or more upon the circular threshing-floor. A yoke of oxen or horses is then attached to the threshing-instrument, and are driven round and round over the grain until the straw is reduced to powder. It is this process which is pressed by the Hebrew word translated 'bruised.' It does not mean that the grain is bruised, only the straw.—P.

B.C. cir. 725.
1 Or, O Ariel, that is, the lion of God, 2 Sa. 23. 20, or altar, Eze.43.15,16.
2 Zion is undoubtedly the place intended. See ver. 8. Ariel signifies 'the altar or lion of God.' It may have been named 'a lion,' in reference to the character of Judah, Ge. 49.9. But altar seems the proper idea in this place, as there is an immediate reference to sacrifice.—C.
3 Or, of the city, i.e. Jerusalem, 2 Sa. 5. 7,9.
4 That is, once the seat of true religion, victory, peace, and prosperity.—C.

21 For the LORD shall rise up as in mount [j]Perazim, he shall be wroth as in the valley of [k]Gibeon, that he may do his work, his [l]strange work; and bring to pass his act, his strange act.[2]

22 Now, therefore, [m]be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong: for I have heard from the Lord GOD of hosts [o]a consumption, even determined upon the whole earth.[3]

23 ¶ Give[p] ye ear, and hear my voice; hearken, and hear my speech.

24 Doth the plowman plow all day to sow? doth he open and break the clods of his ground?

25 When he hath made plain the face thereof, doth he not cast abroad the fitches,[4] and scatter the cummin, and cast in the principal wheat, and the appointed barley,[5] and the [6]rye, in their place?[7]

26 For his God [q]doth instruct him to discretion, and doth teach him.[8]

27 For [r]the fitches are not thrashed with a thrashing-instrument, neither is a cart-wheel turned about upon the cummin; but the fitches are beaten out with a staff, and the cummin with a rod.

28 Bread[s] corn is bruised;[9] because he will not ever be thrashing it, nor break it with the wheel of his cart, nor bruise it with his horsemen.[1]

29 This[t] also cometh forth from the LORD of hosts, which is [u]wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working.[2]

WOE to [1]Ariel,[2] to Ariel, the city[3] where David dwelt![4] add ye year to year; let them kill sacrifices.[5] with wisdom and prudence, and their armies with courage and valour to pursue the enemy. 7–13. But they too, their priests and prophets not excepted, are so stupified with drunkenness, error, and superstition, that there is no possibility of instructing them, however frequently the same things be repeated to them; therefore God shall send among them the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Romans, who shall instruct them by repeated and ruinous strokes. And since they have refused to hearken to God's promises, and the offers of his Son and salvation, as the only sure and effectual means of comfort and happiness, their refractory despising of his repeated invitations shall issue in their ruin. 14, 15. And because you, rulers of Judah, deride God's threatenings, and boast that, by confederacies and other political devices, you have secured yourselves and your nation from danger; 16. Behold God exhibits and offers to you his precious Christ, as the sole foundation of solid hope, and the only sure refuge in time of trouble, on whom whosoever believeth need take no unlawful means to escape or get out of trouble. 17–22. But such of you as reject him shall have all your vain hopes frustrated. The Assyrians shall certainly ravage the country: nor shall your confederacies and carnal politics in the least protect you from their fury. They shall quickly involve you in misery; nay, the very rumour of their approach shall fill you with consternation and anguish. None of your devices to which you have trusted will secure you, while, contrary to his usual method, God shall employ his almighty power for the destruction of a great part of his professed people; and if ye despise his threatenings, ye shall be enslaved by the Assyrians and others: for he has determined to accomplish, by sword, famine, pestilence, and captivity, the utter destruction of the Israelites, and of a great part of the kingdom of Judah. 27, 28. In the eastern countries, wheat was beaten out from the husk by drawing a kind of drag with iron wheels over it.

Ver. 1. Woe to the crown of pride. Samaria was beautifully situated on a hill, and surrounded by a rich valley: and its position and splendour naturally suggested the idea of a crown upon the head of a monarch.—Drunkards. Not merely habitual drunkards from wine, but persons intoxicated with pride and self-will beyond reasoning, and regardless of warning. C.

Ver. 2. With the hand. Not beating off a few topmost gleanings, as in ch. 27. 12, but plucking the best and ripest 'with the hand.' C.

Ver. 9. To the drunkards it is impossible to communicate instruction, it can only be communicated to them who have been 'converted and become as little children,' Mat. 18. 3. C.

Ver. 13. The word of the Lord was 'precept upon precept,' that the rejection of it being manifest, his righteousness might be manifest also in his judicial deliverance of them to their own devices, wherein they should 'fall backward, be broken, snared, and taken.' C.

Ver. 15. For we have made lies our refuge, &c. Not that they admitted, either in thought or word, that they had adopted 'lies and falsehood' as their refuge and covering, but boasted of principles and practices which, though their sophistry, self-sufficiency, and idolatrous inclinations had persuaded them to be true and right, yet God, who seeth and knoweth all things, pronounced to be 'lies and falsehood.' C.

Ver. 16. The words of the scornful men are recorded in ver. 15. They mocked at the thought of death and judgment. In ver. 16 is the Lord's solemn response—'You trust in your own delusions; I lay a sure and everlasting foundation, on which he who places his confidence can rest with perfect safety. The Foundation I lay is the Messiah.' The meaning of the last clause of the verse is often misunderstood. The Septuagint renders it 'he that believeth shall not be ashamed.' The words are quoted three times in the New Testament, 1 Pe. 2. 6; Ro. 9. 33; 10. 11; and the quotations agree with the Septuagint. There is no error or discrepancy here: the Hebrew is metaphorical; in the Greek the metaphor is resolved. The sense of the passage is:—'He that resteth on Christ shall be so confident of security under every circumstance, that he shall never fly hastily from him: he shall never be ashamed of the trust he placed in him; he shall never be confounded through the desertion or failure of his Protector.' P.

Ver. 27. When David had humbly inquired of the Lord, by his command he smote the Philistines, and he and his men burned their forsaken images there, 2 Sa. 5. 20, 21. And when the defeated Philistines mustered their forces again, after similar inquiry, and similar command from the Lord, again David defeated them at Gibeon, and pursued them to Gazer, 1 Ch. 14. 16. C.

Ver. 25. Fitches. 'Vetches.' The word ketsach, translated fitches, occurs only in this verse. Jerome and others understand by it the gith, a plant that bears a black aromatic seed in an ovary like that of the poppy: it is still much used in the East to flavour cakes.—Cummin. This is an umbelliferous plant resembling fennel. Its seeds are bitterish and aromatic, and furnish oil: it is still sown in Malta. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Pride and drunkenness render men a compound of beasts and devils; abominations to God, and plagues and monsters on earth. But whatever sinners are proud of is but fading. And nothing bids be heaviness and sorrow: and it shall be unto me as [6]Ariel.[7]

3 And[b] I will camp against thee round about, and will lay siege against thee with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee.

4 And[c] thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper[8] out of the dust.[9]

5 Moreover [d]the multitude of thy strangers[1] shall be like small dust, and the multitude of the terrible ones shall be [e]as chaff that passeth away: yea, it shall be at an instant suddenly.[2]

6 Thou shalt be visited[3] of the LORD of hosts with[g] thunder, and with earthquake, and great noise, with storm and tempest, and the flame of devouring fire.

7 And[h] the multitude of all the nations that fight against Ariel, even all that fight against her and her munition, and that distress her, shall be as a dream of a night vision.

8 It[i] shall even be as when an hungry man dreameth, and, behold, he eateth; but he awaketh, and his soul is empty: or as when a thirsty man dreameth, and, behold, he drinketh; but he awaketh, and, behold, he is faint, and his soul hath appetite: so shall the multitude of all the nations be that fight against mount Zion.[4]

9 ¶ [j]Stay[5] yourselves, and wonder; cry ye out, and cry:[6] they [k]are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink.

12 And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am [p]not learned.

13 ¶ Wherefore the Lord said, [q]Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men:

14 Therefore, [r]behold, I will proceed to [s]do a marvellous work among this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder: [s]for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.

tairer to hurl men quickly into the depths of disgrace, poverty, and damnation, than pride and drunkenness. God faithfully honours and blesses the nation which conforms to the principles of righteousness. But thrice happy are those to whom Jesus Christ, and God in him, are their glory and crown. Base corruptions often continue, even amidst the most candid and zealous attempts towards reformation. But it is shameful and ill-boding when priests and prophets are partners in their stupidity, and ringleaders in superstition and wickedness. What multitudes obstinately live in ignorance or rejection of God's truth! But if they refuse to hear his word, he will make them feel his rod: and none shall feel it more certainly than proud scorners and obstinate refusers of Jesus Christ. How rich is the grace of God, in exhibiting Jesus as a Saviour to men, when they have eminently ripened themselves for his judgment! Eternally safe are they who trust in him, when all other refuges fail, when all carnal projects and self-righteousness prove lies in their right hand.—But what sovereignty, wisdom, holiness, and equity does God manifest in forming and timing every judgment which he inflicts!

CHAPTER XXIX. Ver. 1, 2. Jerusalem is called ARIEL, from the altar of burnt-offering which devoured the offerings sacrificed upon it.—Notwithstanding all their sacrifices and pretended devotions, both city and temple shall be brought into great straits,—and filled with fire, blood, and carcasses of men, a great sacrifice. 3, 4. By the enemies whom I shall appoint against you, your present haughtiness and scoffing shall be turned into great debasement, distress, and submission. 5–8 doth perhaps not only denounce the sudden destruction of their enemies by the fearful judgments of God, but also the ruin of the Jews' auxiliaries and armies, and their own terrible distress, while their enemies were quite insatiable in devouring and destroying. 9–12. With amazement ponder and bewail your condition, and cry for deliverance; for all ranks are besotted with corrupt principles, unsteadiness, and stupidity; and neither ignorant nor learned either understand or regard the warnings of God. 13–16. Because their religious devotion is merely in outward appearance, while the most abominable wickedness reigns in their heart, and merely an observance of the commands of Hezekiah, or the traditions of the elders, I will punish them with astonishing miseries, baffle all the deep-laid projects of their politicians, and give up their doctors to amazing stupidity. All their subtle devices, for perverting the order which I have fixed, shall be as easily altered as clay by the potter, and as ineffectual to accomplish their designs as clay without a potter. 17–21. Amazing changes shall happen on fields and nations: the long-barren Gentile world being converted to Christ, and rendered fruitful in good works, while the Jews shall be rejected because of their unbelief. The unconcerned and ignorant Gentiles shall be brought to the knowledge of God in Christ; and, amidst affliction and poverty, shall rejoice in himself and his favours; while their proud and powerful enemies, who watched for opportunities of doing mischief, and who hated reproof, and persecuted the prophets and ministers of God, and for a trifling consideration perverted justice, shall be destroyed. 22-24. And notwithstanding the distresses or rejection of the Jews, the church shall be gloriously enlarged, to the great comfort of the pious Jews and honour of God; and multitudes of the most wicked and obstinate opposers shall be converted, especially in the coming period.

Ver. 10. God pours out mercy—heedless sinners disregard and pervert it. God threatens judgments, but habitual sin, acting like an opiate on the body, has drugged their consciences into insensibility: they refuse to awake: they love to slumber and dream. Wherefore God gives them over judicially to their own ways, and is so said to 'pour out the spirit of deep sleep' upon them. Yet he pours out the spirit, not to induce them to sleep; but he gives them up to it as a punishment, because they refuse to awake. C.

Ver. 14. As the point of the finger applied to the eye can exclude the sun and the world, so one single erroneous opinion can exclude the Sun of Righteousness and eternity. The single principle of self-righteousness blinded the Pharisees in the days of our Lord. The same principle, alas! continues to blind the unreformed churches: and beneath its baleful influence 'wisdom still perishes—understanding is hid.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Formal hypocrites may go on long in a round of external duties; but dreadful and debasing is the judgment of God which awaits them, and which awaits the chastisers even of his provoking people. His judgments make the stoutest hearts to bow or to break. Fearful is their condition who are drunk with the love of pleasures, honours, or wealth, or with corrupt principles and prejudices; or who are so abandoned to spiritual stupidity, that the best means can neither enlighten nor awake them. Alas! how wicked, how villanous is it to approach God in outward forms of devotion while we hate him in our heart, and worship him only from regard to the authority of men! Absurd and fruitless is every scheme which is carried on independent of and in opposition to God. But thrice happy is it to have external calamities balanced with subsequent spiritual blessings; and that the casting away of the Jews has issued in the reconciling of the Gentile world to him;—and in some future period, how much more shall their fulness!

CHAPTER XXX. Ver. 1–5. Dreadful ruin shall overtake those Israelites and Jews who, without regarding my counsel, increase their wickedness, by taking unwarrantable methods for their own protection and deliverance. 6, 7. They send whole loads of presents upon asses and camels southward into Egypt, which will but hurt instead of helping them, and will soon be as miserable as themselves. But their only way to secure themselves is to stay at home, and trust in and words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness.

19 The[z] meek also shall increase[3] their joy in the LORD, and [a]the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.

20 For [b]the terrible one is brought to nought, and the scorner is consumed, and [c]all that watch for iniquity are cut off:

21 That [d]make a man an offender for a word,[4] and lay a snare for him that [e]reproveth in the gate, [g]and turn aside the just for a thing of nought.

22 Therefore thus saith the LORD, who [h]redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob, [i]Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale.

23 But when he seeth [j]his children, the work of mine hands, in the midst of him, they shall sanctify[k] my name, and sanctify the Holy One of Jacob, and shall fear the God of Israel.

24 They[l] also that erred in spirit shall come to understanding,[5] and they that murmured[6] shall learn doctrine.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 The prophet threateneth the people for their confidence in Egypt, 8 and contempt of God's word. 18 God's mercies toward his church. 27 God's wrath, and the people's joy, in the destruction of Assyria.

WOE to[a] the rebellious children, saith the LORD, that [b]take counsel, but not of me; and that [c]cover[1] with a covering, but not of my spirit, that they may [d]add sin to sin:[2]

2 That[e] walk to go down into Egypt, and have not asked at my mouth; to strengthen themselves in the strength of Pharaoh, and to trust in the shadow of Egypt!

3 Therefore[g] shall the strength of Pharaoh be your shame, and the trust in the shadow of Egypt your confusion.

4 For his[3] princes [h]were at Zoan,[4] and his ambassadors came to Hanes.[5]

5 They[i] were all ashamed[6] of a people that could not profit them, nor be an help nor profit, but a shame, and also a reproach.

6 The burden of the beasts of the south: into the land of trouble and anguish,[7] from whence come the young and old lion, the viper and fiery flying serpent, they [j]will carry their riches upon the shoulders of young asses, and their treasures upon the bunches of camels, to a people that [k]shall not profit them.

7 For the Egyptians shall help in vain, and to no purpose: therefore have I cried concerning this,[8] Their[l] strength is to sit still.

8 ¶ Now go, [m]write it before them in a table, and note it in a book, that it may be for the time to come[9] for ever and ever:

9 That [o]this is a rebellious people, lying children, children that will not hear the law of the LORD:

10 Which say to the [p]seers, [q]See not: and to the prophets, Prophesy not unto us right things: [r]speak unto us smooth things, prophesy deceits:

11 Get[s] you out of the way, turn aside out of the path, cause the Holy One of Israel to cease from before us.

12 Wherefore thus saith the Holy One of Israel, Because ye despise [t]this word, and trust in oppression[1] and perverseness, and stay thereon:

13 Therefore this iniquity shall be to you [u]as a breach ready to fall, swelling out in a high wall,[2] whose breaking cometh suddenly at an instant.

14 And he shall break it as the breaking of the potter's vessel[3] that is broken in pieces; he shall not spare: so that there shall not be found in the bursting of it a sherd to take fire from the hearth, or to take water withal out of the pit.

15 For thus saith the Lord GOD, the Holy One of Israel, [v]In returning[4] and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength; and [z]ye would not.

16 But ye said, No; for we will flee upon horses; therefore [y]shall ye flee: and, we will ride upon the swift; [z]therefore shall they that pursue you be swift.

wait upon God for his help. See ver. 15. 9–17. And since this rebellious and hypocritical people will disregard my admonitions, and require my prophets to forbear delivering my messages, unless they flatter their humours and lusts, they shall quickly find themselves, and their carnal confidences, all shattered to pieces. And since they refuse to stay at home, and turn to and trust in me, but will trust to their Egyptian allies, the Assyrians shall pursue and scatter them till only a few stragglers be left. 18–26. Nevertheless the Lord will wait for a fit season to deliver you, and will, in infinite wisdom, glorify his own perfections in working graciously for you. Notwithstanding Sennacherib's attempts, and the attempts of all your other enemies, ye shall safely dwell in Jerusalem; ye shall return thither from your Chaldean captivity; and in the latter days shall, to your inexpressible comfort and happiness, be converted to Christ and his church. And whatever adversities you may quickly suffer, you shall then have plenty of public ordinances and teachers, and be remarkably directed in all your ways. Ye shall, with the utmost detestation, relinquish your idolatries, and destroy every monument thereof. While your fields and hills produce plentiful crops of corn, grass, vines, &c., your nation shall bring forth multitudes of converts, and fruits of righteousness, to the glory of God. And while your proud enemies, Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, Antichristians, and Turks, are brought down, great and amazing shall be your refreshment, knowledge, comfort, and vigour. 27–33. For, behold, to your sudden and inexpressible joy, the Lord, in the execution of his purposes and predictions, will with great ease, but in a most terrible and sudden manner, destroy the Assyrian army in the valley of Hinnom, before Jerusalem, as a prelude of similar ruin to the rest of your adversaries.

Ver. 6. This verse should either begin a new chapter or paragraph, for there can be no reason for understanding the word burden in any sense but that of a heavy judgment denounced, as in ch. 13.1, &c.—Beasts of the south. Not the beasts that carry southward, but the men of whom the ravenous lion and venomous reptile are the emblems. C.

Ver. 7. Their strength is to sit still. Not to sit still in idleness; but to sit still in the land of promised blessing, waiting in faith, hope, and prayer for the salvation of God. C.

Ver. 10, 11. The prophet does not mean that they used the very words of ver. 10, 11; but that their words, when rightly interpreted, had the meaning he assigns. C.

Ver. 14. Not be found . . . a sherd to take fire from the hearth. The culinary vessels in most Asiatic countries are generally of earthenware. Should the fire be extinguished, a potsherd carries a little borrowed fire: the want of even a potsherd is an emblem of the deepest poverty. C.

Ver. 18. And therefore. Yet 'notwithstanding' all your self-will and neglect of his counsel, 'the Lord will wait,' &c. C.

Ver. 19. Thou shalt weep no more. This refers to a time not yet arrived, and synchronizes with the blessed period foretold, Re. 21.4, when 'God shall wipe away all tears,' and 'there shall be neither sorrow nor crying.' C.

Ver. 21. Shall hear a word behind thee, &c. If ye 'turn to the right or the left to do evil,' and go for a moment astray, you will hear the voice of your teachers, who lately stood 'before your eyes,' ver. 20, now calling from 'behind you,' saying, 'Turn ye, turn ye,' 'this is the way, walk ye in it.' C.

Ver. 24. Some ancient paintings exhibit the Egyptian method of winnowing grain, either by lifting it and letting it fall through the air in front of the winnower or throwing it over his shoulder, as is still practised in some of the northern parts of Europe. In these paintings, each winnower is attended by an assistant, with a short shovel or scoop, to lift the grain into the fan, one species of which seems a light and broad tray with a short handle.—Note. Though this prophecy may be considered literal—for godliness is profitable unto all things—yet it is chiefly to be regarded as emblematic of gospel tillage, gospel pasture, gospel labours, and abundance of grace, mercy, and peace. C.

Ver. 33. Tophet signifies a drum; which name is supposed to have been given on account of drums being used to drown the cries of the children that were there offered to Molech. It was considered a striking emblem of the place of 'everlasting punishment.' The commencement of this prophecy lies in the destruction of the army of Sennacherib; its conclusion in the destruction of the 'man of sin'—'antichrist'—'the wilful king'—'whom the one; at the rebuke of five shall ye flee; till ye be left as a beacon[5] upon the top of a mountain, and as an ensign on an hill.

BARRACKS AT THE CITADEL, CAIRO—THE MOST INFLUENTIAL CITY OF EGYPT, AND SUPPOSED TO STAND IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD WHERE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL LIVED IN EGYPT. [ISAIAH, XXX: 1-3]—"Woe to the rebellious children, saith the Lord, that take counsel, but not of me; and that cover with a covering, but not of my spirit, that they may add sin to sin: that walk to go down into Egypt, and have not asked at my mouth; to strengthen themselves in the strength of Pharaoh, and to trust in the shadow of Egypt! Therefore shall the strength of Pharaoh be your shame, and the trust in the shadow of Egypt your confusion." We give a picture of the barracks at the citadel in Cairo. Standing upon this hill overlooking the most interesting city in Egypt, it is easy to see how true were the words of Isaiah quoted above. The strength of Egypt has always been its shame and the shame of all who have looked to her for help. The enormous wealth which from age to age has been extracted from the fertile soil of this ancient land has been used to corrupt and degrade the ruling class, and to oppress and make unendurable the lives of the laboring classes.

18 ¶ And therefore[6] will the LORD [b]wait, that he may be gracious unto you, and therefore will he be [c]exalted, that he may have mercy upon you: for the LORD is a God of [d]judgment: blessed[e] are all they that wait for him.

19 For the people shall [g]dwell in Zion at Jerusalem; [h]thou shalt weep no more: he will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; [i]when he shall hear it, he will answer thee.

20 And though the Lord give you [j]the bread of adversity, and the water of affliction,[7] yet shall[k] not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers:

21 And [l]thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This is [m]the way, walk ye in it, when ye [n]turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left.

22 Ye[o] shall defile also the covering of thy graven images of silver,[8] and the ornament of thy molten images of gold: thou shalt cast[9] them away as a menstruous cloth; thou shalt say unto it, Get thee hence.

23 Then[q] shall he give the rain of thy seed, that thou shalt sow the ground withal; and bread of the increase of the earth, and it shall be fat and plenteous: in that [r]day shall thy cattle feed in large pastures.

24 The oxen likewise, and the young asses that ear the ground,[1] shall eat [2]clean[3] provender, which hath been winnowed with the shovel and with the fan.

25 And [t]there shall be upon every high mountain, and upon every high[4] hill, rivers and streams of waters in the day of the [t]great slaughter, when the towers fall.[5]

26 Moreover, [u]the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days, in the day that [v]the LORD bindeth up the breach of his people, and healeth the stroke of their wound.

27 ¶ Behold, [z]the name[6] of the LORD cometh from far, burning with his anger, and the burden thereof[7] is heavy,[8] his lips are full of indignation, and [y]his tongue as a devouring fire:

28 And[z] his breath, as an overflowing stream, shall reach to the midst of the neck, [a]to sift the nations with the sieve of vanity:[9] and there shall be [b]a bridle[1] in the jaws of the people, causing them to err.

29 Ye[c] shall have a song, as in the [2]night when a holy solemnity is kept: and gladness of heart, as when one goeth with a pipe to come into the mountain of the LORD, to the Mighty One[3] of Israel.

30 And the LORD shall cause his glorious voice[4] to be heard, and shall show the lighting down of his arm, with the indignation of his anger, and with the flame of a devouring fire, with scattering, and tempest, and hailstones.

31 For through the voice of the LORD shall the Assyrian be beaten down, which [d]smote with a rod.

32 And in every place where the grounded staff[5] shall pass,[6] which the LORD shall [7]lay upon him,[8] it[e] shall be with tabrets and harps: and [g]in battles of shaking will he fight [9]with it.[1]

33 For [h]Tophet is ordained of old,[2] yea, for the king it is prepared: he hath made it deep, and large; the pile thereof is fire and [i]much wood: [j]the breath of the LORD, like a stream of brimstone, doth kindle it.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 The prophet showeth the cursed folly of trusting in Egypt, and forsaking of God. 6 He exhorteth to conversion. 8 He showeth the fall of Assyria.

WOE to[a] them that go down to Egypt for help; and stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because they are many; and in horsemen, because they are very strong: [b]but they look not unto the Holy One of Israel, neither seek the LORD!

2 Yet [c]he also is wise, and will bring evil, and will not call back[1] his words: but will [d]arise against the house of the evil-doers, and against [e]the help of them that work iniquity.

3 Now the Egyptians are [g]men, and not God; and their horses flesh, and not spirit. When the LORD [h]shall stretch out his hand, [i]both he Lord will consume by the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy by the brightness of his coming,' 2 Th. 2. 8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Men are too fond of trusting to human help in their distress, and too careless of that which is divine. But what is got without the Lord's leave cannot be of any real service, but hurt. The notorious wickedness of professors justifies God's severest judgments against them!—It is infinitely criminal and hazardous for men to tempt God's ministers to unfaithfulness in delivering his messages. God frequently gives them up to delusion who incline to it; and punishes such as scoff at his admonitions with fearful, certain, and unavoidable ruin. There is no way of escaping his judgments but by a believing and penitent turning to himself. And if, notwithstanding thousands of provocations and judgments, he still waits to be gracious, earnestly ought we to wait and cry for his favours. Persevering faith and prayer always issue in substantial and lasting comforts. Great is the mercy to have an open access to Jesus Christ's ministers and ordinances, and to be directed in every step by God's teaching Spirit and a tender conscience. Detestable to exercised saints are their formerly beloved lusts, and precious are spiritual blessings. The relief of God's people, and the fall of the wicked, are marvellously connected. In his anger he blasts, overflows, sifts, bridles, beats, and burns up his most proud and powerful opposers with the greatest ease! Having therefore received a kingdom that cannot be moved, let me have grace, wherewith I may serve him acceptably with reverence and godly fear; for our God is a consuming fire.

CHAPTER XXXI. Ver. 2, 3. As wise as you think yourselves, God will countermine all your subtle contrivances, and bring effectual ruin upon both you and your Egyptian helpers. 4, 5. Undismayed by all the noise, boasting, and blasphemy of the Assyrians, God shall, with almighty force, furiously encounter and devour them; but tenderly defend Jerusalem, as a bird doth its nest, or as the angel did the Israelites when he destroyed the Egyptians. 8, 9. By the immediate judgment of God shall the Assyrian army be generally destroyed; and Sennacherib himself, with the poor remains, terrified by the visible tokens of God's wrath, shall flee home to Nineveh his capital.—God had his sanctuary and altar in Jerusalem, and there he appeared, like a fire, to defend his people, and consume his enemies.

Ver. 1. Woe to them that go down to Egypt for help. To go to Egypt for help was a direct and wilful breach of the divine law, De. 28 68; but the prophecy virtually denounces every unlawful means of seeking deliverance from danger—especially seeking the assistance of wicked men, upon the ground of any adoption of their principles or countenance of their practices. C.

Ver. 5. 'As the mother-birds fluttering over their brood, so shall JEHOVAH of hosts defend Jerusalem, protecting and delivering—springing over to her rescue.' And whoever has actually witnessed the courage of a mother-bird, whether domestic or wild, when called to the defence of her young, will not fail to admire the beauty and power of the image. C.

Ver. 9. The Lord, whose fire is in Zion, &c. Whose fire of the Spirit is in Zion, the seat of ordinances—and whose furnace of judgment is in Jerusalem, the seat of government. C.

that helpeth shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall down, and they all shall fail together.

4 For thus hath the LORD spoken unto me, Like[j] as the lion and the young lion roaring on his prey, when a multitude of shepherds is called forth against him, he will not be afraid of their voice, nor abase himself for the noise[2] of them: so shall the LORD of hosts come down to fight for mount Zion, and for the hill thereof.

5 As[k] birds flying, so will the LORD of hosts defend Jerusalem; defending also he will deliver it, and passing over he will preserve it.

6 ¶ Turn[l] ye unto him from whom the children of Israel have [m]deeply revolted.[3]

7 For in that day[4] every man shall [o]cast away his idols of silver, and his idols of gold,[5] which your own hands have made unto you for a sin.

8 ¶ Then[p] shall the Assyrian fall with the sword, not of a mighty man; and the sword, not of a mean man, shall devour him: but he shall flee from[6] the sword, and his young men shall be [7]discomfited.[8]

9 And he shall pass over to his stronghold[9] for fear,[1] and his princes shall be afraid of the ensign, saith the LORD, whose [q]fire is in Zion, and his furnace in Jerusalem.[2]

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 The blessings of Christ's kingdom. 9 Desolation is foreshown. 15 Restoration is promised to succeed.

BEHOLD, a[a] king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment.

2 And [b]a man shall be as an hiding-place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place; as the shadow of a great[1] rock in a weary land.[2]

3 And[c] the eyes of them that see shall not be dim: and the ears of them that hear shall hearken.

4 The heart also of the rash[3] shall understand knowledge, and the tongue of the stammerers shall be ready to speak plainly.[4]

5 The[d] vile person shall be no more called liberal, nor the churl said to be bountiful.

6 For[e] the vile person will speak villany, and his heart will work iniquity, to practise hypocrisy, and to utter error against the LORD, to make empty the soul of the hungry, and he will cause the drink of the thirsty to fail.

7 The[g] instruments also of the churl are evil: he deviseth wicked devices to destroy the poor with lying words, even when the needy speaketh right.[5]

8 But[h] the liberal deviseth liberal things; and by liberal things shall he stand.[6]

9 ¶ Rise up, [i]ye women that are at ease; hear my voice, ye careless daughters; give ear unto my speech.

10 Many days and years[7] shall ye [j]be troubled, ye careless women: for the vintage shall fail, the gathering shall not come.

11 Tremble,[k] ye women that are at ease; be troubled, ye careless ones: strip you, and make you bare, and gird sackcloth upon your loins.

12 They shall lament for [l]the teats, for the pleasant fields,[8] for the fruitful vine.

13 Upon[n] the land of my people shall come up thorns and briers, yea,[9] upon all the houses of joy in the [o]joyous city:

14 Because[p] the palaces shall be forsaken; the multitude of the city shall be left; the [1]forts and towers shall be for dens for ever, a joy of wild asses, a pasture of flocks;

15 ¶ Until [q]the Spirit be poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field, and [r]the fruitful field be counted for a forest.

16 Then[s] judgment shall dwell in the wilderness, and righteousness remain in the fruitful field.

17 And[t] the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance for ever.

REFLECTIONS.—Many wickedly go far for human help, and to no purpose, when they might have help from God at hand to infinite advantage. But the more we know of men we shall trust them the less; and the more we know of God we shall trust him the more. It is an atheistical disbelief of his all-sufficiency that ever makes us depart from him to depend on a creature: and when we do so, we may expect to have it ruined along with ourselves. But happy are believers whom God defends with infinite compassion and almighty power. His promises are an infallible ground of faith; his goodness ought to lead the greatest rebels against him to a kindly repentance; and every remarkable deliverance should be attended with remarkable reformation. But great is the ruin and the terror which await his implacable foes!

CHAPTER XXXII. Ver. 1–8. Hezekiah and his princes and officers shall govern in equity and wisdom; shall protect the oppressed, promote the instruction of the subjects in the laws of God, and treat every one according to his real character, bad or good.—Jesus shall erect and govern his church in the most righteous manner, and his apostles and ministers shall wisely dispense his ordinances. He shall protect, refresh, quicken, and comfort his people in all their tribulations. Such as have spiritual knowledge shall have it greatly increased; and even the inconsiderate shall be made to know, and the weak to declare, the things of God with great distinctness. Worthless, hypocritical, and mischievous oppressors shall be detected and debarred from offices or honours, while they who are liberal and upright shall be visibly blessed and prosper. 9–14. Terrible shall be the distress and anguish of those cities and wanton women, who, by their pride and vanity, provoked God to wrath; when, through the ravage of the enemy, neither milk, nor corn, nor wine shall be found, but the whole land be turned into, and for many years or ages continued, a desolate wilderness. 15–20. But when God shall pour forth his Spirit, mighty changes shall ensue, and great revivals in souls, in churches, and nations shall be wrought. The gospel shall be received, and righteous judgments executed everywhere. Great shall be the peace and real prosperity of true believers, even while the unbelieving Jews, or others, shall be fearfully destroyed. And great shall be the success of ministers in the conversion of multitudes to Christ.

Ver. 1. Of no king, except Messiah, could it ever be absolutely said that 'he reigned in righteousness;' this is therefore a prophecy of his accession and government.—Princes. The apostles of our Lord, who, during their lives, ruled the churches in holy judgment, as may be seen Ac. 15. 28, 29, and who, by their doctrines, decisions, and institutions, still continue to rule in word and discipline. C.

Ver. 2. The shadow of a great rock in a weary land. Not merely a shadow to protect from the heat, but the shadow of a great rock to defend from enemies. C.

Ver. 6. This description corresponds with the picture which our Lord draws of the scribes and Pharisees, Mat. 23. 14, 23. C.

Ver. 8. The liberal deviseth liberal things. This was accurately fulfilled in our Saviour's charge to his apostles, Mat. 10. 8, 'Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give.' C.

Ver. 9. Women and daughters might, no doubt, be understood as emblematic titles for cities and villages; but the words may well be understood literally. In this view the warning seems specially directed to women, seeking to recall them to thoughtfulness and repentance; because society can never be meliorated and reformed, so long as mothers are sunk in indolence, infatuated by gaiety, careless of the instruction of their children, and indifferent to the welfare of the church. C.

Ver. 11, 12. 'Upon your loins, upon your breasts, mourn ye for the pleasant field, for the fruitful vine' (Lowth). C.

Ver. 13. This prophecy may be seen awfully verified in the wretched condition of houses and fields in the Holy Land. C.

Ver. 14. For ever. Not 'for ever' in its unlimited sense: but 'for ever' 'until (ver. 15) the Spirit be poured from on high.' C.

Ver. 17. There is no righteousness but what arises from the finished work of Christ. This 'work' was 'peace,' because Christ is our peace; 'the effect' is 'quietness' of conscience, Ro. 5. 1: and 'assurance of acceptance with God,' Ep. 1. 6, because it is certain that Christ the righteous, our Advocate, 1 Jn. 2. 1, and Head, Ep. 1. 21, 22, is not only always heard, Jn. 11. 42, but already accepted, He. 9. 14. C.

Ver. 19. Hail is the emblem of judgments, ch. 30. 30; forest, the emblem of the church renovated by the outpouring of the Spirit, ver. 15; the city, Ariel, ch. 29. 1, of which it is said, ch. 29. 3, 'Thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground,' &c. But after these disasters of 'hail,' and 'bringing low,' the people shall dwell in a peaceable habitation, and in quiet resting-places.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Greatly beneficial are virtuous

18 And my people shall dwell in [u]a peaceable habitation, and in sure dwellings, and in quiet resting-places,

19 When it [v]shall hail, coming down on the forest; and the city shall be low in a low place.[2]

20 Blessed[x] are ye that sow beside all waters, that send forth thither the feet of the ox and the ass.[3]

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 God's judgments against the enemies of Zion. 13 The privileges of the godly.

WOE to [a]thee that spoilest, and thou wast not spoiled; and dealest treacherously,[1] and they dealt not treacherously with thee! when[b] thou shalt cease to spoil, thou shalt be spoiled; and, when thou shalt make an end to deal treacherously, they shall deal treacherously with thee.

2 O LORD, [c]be gracious unto us; we have waited for thee: [d]be thou their arm every morning, our salvation also in the time of trouble.

3 At[e] the noise of the tumult the people fled; at the lifting up of thyself the nations were scattered.

4 And [g]your spoil shall be gathered like the gathering of the caterpillar: as the running to and fro of locusts shall he run upon them.

5 The[h] LORD is exalted; for he dwelleth on high: he hath [i]filled Zion with judgment and righteousness.

6 And [j]wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times,[2] and strength of salvation: [k]the fear of the LORD is his treasure.[4]

7 Behold, their valiant ones[5] shall cry without; the ambassadors of peace shall weep bitterly.

8 The[l] highways lie waste, the wayfaring man ceaseth: he hath broken the covenant, he hath despised the cities, he regardeth no man.

9 The[m] earth mourneth and languisheth; Lebanon is ashamed and hewn down;[6] Sharon is like a wilderness; and Bashan and Carmel shake off their fruits.

17 Thine eyes shall see[4] the king in his beauty:[5] they shall behold the land that is very far off.[6]

18 Thine heart shall meditate [7]terror. [v]Where is the scribe?[8] where is the [9]receiver?[1] where is he that counted the towers?[2]

19 Thou[x] shalt not see a fierce people; a people [y]of a deeper speech than thou canst perceive; of a stammering[3] tongue, that thou canst not understand.

20 Look[z] upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken.

21 But [a]there the glorious LORD will be unto us a place of broad rivers and streams;[4] wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ship pass thereby.

magistrates: but much more a gracious, a divine Saviour. Safely may the most guilty rest under his all-covering propitiation; and the most weak and oppressed under his powerful protection. Hopeful is the case when those who are ignorant are willing to be taught, and when everything is called by its own proper name; when persons are held in esteem, according to their real deserts; when they who are active in plotting or practising wickedness are disgraced; and they who are active in contriving or performing what is good are high in repute. But rarely any remarkable reformation happens, but some fearful judgment on the despisers and opposers thereof attends it. And how alarming at last to the sons and daughters of unconcern, gaiety, and mirth, are the terrible, the desolating, and the awful judgments of God! O what remarkable reformation God's Spirit, by the preaching of the gospel, can make among nations, and in ages the most corrupted! Great are the advantages, the solid satisfaction, and substantial comforts which are to be had in real fellowship with and likeness to God! And great is the honour of faithfully preaching the gospel, and abounding in works of charity.

CHAPTER XXXIII. Ver. 1, 3, 4. When God has punished the nations around by the Assyrians, all their ravage, oppression, and treachery shall be revenged on themselves. The destruction of their camp by the angel shall make the remainder to flee home with great precipitation; and the inhabitants of Jerusalem shall, in multitudes, gather up the spoil. 5, 6. While God shall thus exalt himself in the destruction of his enemies and deliverance of his people, he will bless Jerusalem with true religion and righteousness: and by the abounding of real piety, and by the wise and prudent administration of government, shall the nation be preserved, and even rendered wealthy, during Hezekiah's reign? 7–9. The Jewish soldiers shall be quite dispirited and vexed: their ambassadors, sent to supplicate terms of peace, shall return weeping on account of their unsuccessfulness. None shall dare to travel the country. Sennacherib shall disregard his treaty with the Jews; he shall scorn their strength, and reject their entreaties for peace. The country, even the most fertile and populous places, shall be rendered utterly desolate. 10–12. But when all hopes of deliverance to the Jews seem gone. I will exert my almighty power. I will render all the Assyrians' plots fruitless; and their rage against my people shall be revenged in their own sudden and fearful destruction. 13, 14. All around them shall be alarmed; and even the hypocritical Jews terrified, lest like judgments, or damnation in hell, should seize on themselves. 15–24. The righteous, who labour to avoid every evil, however gainful or pleasant, shall be safely preserved and abundantly supplied. They shall behold Hezekiah in health, prosperity, and glory, and freely travel through the whole of Canaan. Nay, they shall, by faith, behold Jesus in his glory and the heavenly felicities. They shall, with solemn awe, wonder how suddenly the Assyrian army is destroyed or fled, and how safe Jerusalem is; and how marvellously the Lord has protected his people, answerably to his relations to them; and how, while the Assyrian army is irrecoverably shattered to pieces, and their spoil gathered by the feeble Jews, Hezekiah and his subjects are delivered from their sickness and distress, and have the tokens of the Lord's favour restored to them.—N.B. It is easy to apply the above explication to the deliverance from the Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, Romans, or Antichristians.

22 For the LORD is our [b]judge, the LORD is our[c] lawgiver,[5] the LORD is [d]our king; he will save us.

23 Thy tacklings are loosed;[6] they could not well strengthen their mast; they could not spread the sail: then [e]is the prey of a great spoil divided; the lame take the prey.

24 And[g] the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 The judgments wherewith God revengeth his church. 11 The desolation of her enemies. 16 The certainty of the prophecy.

COME near,[a] ye nations, to hear; and hearken, ye people; let the earth hear, and all that is therein:[1] the world, and all things that come forth of it.

2 For[b] the indignation of the LORD is upon all nations, and his fury upon all their armies: he hath utterly destroyed[2] them, he hath delivered them to the slaughter.

3 Their[c] slain also shall be cast out, and their stink shall come up out of their carcases, and the[d] mountains shall be melted with their blood.

4 And [e]all the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll: and all their host shall fall down, as the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a falling fig from the fig-tree.

5 For [g]my sword shall be bathed in heaven:[3] behold, it shall come down [h]upon Idumea, and upon the people of my curse, to judgment.

6 The[i] sword of the LORD is filled with blood; it is made fat with fatness, and with the blood of lambs and goats, with the fat of the kidneys of rams: for the LORD hath a sacrifice in Bozrah,[4] and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea.

It is only at the risk of life any traveller can pass through it. Its transit trade is gone, and can never be renewed. Its rock-hewn temples and palaces are all desolate; its cities are waste without inhabitant. In this respect the words of the prophet have been fulfilled.—P.

7 And [j]the unicorns[5] shall come down with them, and the bullocks with the bulls; and their land shall be soaked[6] with blood, and their dust made fat with fatness.

8 For it is [k]the day of the LORD's vengeance, and the year of recompenses for the controversy of Zion.

9 And [l]the streams thereof shall be turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone, and the land thereof shall become burning pitch.

10 It[n] shall not be quenched night nor day; the smoke thereof shall go up for ever: from generation to generation it shall lie waste; none shall pass through it for ever and ever:[7]

11 But[o] the cormorant[8] and the bittern shall possess it; the owl also and the raven shall dwell in it: and he [p]shall stretch out upon it the line of confusion,[9] and the stones of [1]emptiness.

16 ¶ Seek ye out of [s]the book of the LORD, and read; [t]no one of these shall fail, none shall want her mate:[7] for [u]my mouth it hath commanded, and his spirit it hath gathered them.

Ver. 1. This is not an address to Sennacherib, Antiochus Epiphanes, the Romans, or Gog and Magog: but to every unprovoked spoiler of God's people. It is a mirror, not a picture—and in it, successively, every spoiler beholds his own image; and though he may 'go his way, and forget what manner of man he is,' the woe will fall wherever the guilt has been incurred. C.

Ver. 2. This is a prayer of the church, alarmed for her safety, but trusting in her Redeemer as 'mighty to save.'—Their arm. Whose arm? The arm, the strength and defence of those 'who sow beside all waters,' ch. 32. 20; for whom, as 'labouring in the word and doctrine,' the other members of the church thus fervently intercede. C.

Ver. 4. Your spoil. The address is to the unprovoked spoiler, ver. 1, whom the prophet compares to the caterpillar, the most ravenous and destructive of all living creatures, devouring many times its own bulk and weight of food in a day. Yet as that ravenous caterpillar devours the leaf, so shall a new spoiler, more destructive than his predecessor, spoil the spoiler of the people of God.—Shall he run. That is, the new spoiler, like locust bands, shall assail his predecessors. C.

Ver. 7. Their valiant ones. Ver. 5, 6 being taken as a parenthesis, the 'valiant ones' are the former spoilers upon whom the new spoiler, ver. 4, makes his tumultuous assault.—Ambassadors of peace. The messengers of the first spoiler attempting peace with the second. C.

Ver. 8. He hath broken the covenant. The new spoiler who had made a false peace with the messengers. C.

Ver. 17. They shall behold the land that is very far off. They shall see by faith, and seek in holiness, a country far off—'that is, an heavenly,' He. 11. 13–16. C.

Ver. 20. This address is to the Lord entreating a favourable regard: the reply is from God to his church. C.

Ver. 23. The address is to the ship, ver. 21, the emblem of an invading enemy, multitudinous as waters. C.

Ver. 24. The inhabitant of Zion, ver. 20, shall no more be sick, Re. 21. 4. The great Physician has healed all their souls, Mat. 9. 12. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Wicked men never hesitate at falsehood, fraud, or violence to accomplish their own ends. But the less men provoke them to do evil, the more they provoke God in doing it. And whenever they have filled up the measure of their iniquities, God will awake to punish them. There is no fear of a church or nation while a spirit of prayer continues in it. They who wait on God shall never be forsaken by him. Nay, he often in his kindness exceeds their expectations, and always exalts himself by the judgments which he executes. And where he reigns in the heart, real safety and wealth attend him! True knowledge of his grace is the great stability of the soul; and the fear of God is the Christian's best treasure. They who contemn God are often imperious and abusive to men. But the more hardened and prosperous they are, the nearer is their terrible destruction. The most secure sinners shall be alarmed at last, and made to see God's hand in his judgments. Eternal despair shall at last appear dreadful to the most scornful! But great is the mercy if God's judgments in Zion should awaken her hypocritical professors to flee from the wrath to come to the almighty, the all-saving Jesus Christ! Great piety and comfort, safety and peace, order, health, and forgiveness attend his gracious deliverances! And thrice happy they who have him for their ALL IN ALL.

CHAPTER XXXIV. Ver. 3–6. The mountains shall run down with large streams of the blood of slain persons. Dreadful shall be the confusion, desolation, and consternation everywhere; for my purposed judgments shall be executed upon the wicked who have given themselves to sin and persons of all ranks shall fall a sacrifice to their own sin. 11, 12. God finds the abominably wicked as with a line and plummet; and none shall be able to govern or help them. 16, 17. In the exact fulfilment of this prophecy shall the Spirit, power, and providence of God collect together, and preserve a succession of these doleful creatures, in these perpetually desolate habitations of wickedness.

Ver. 1. This prophecy is addressed to 'the kingdoms of this world,' and predicts a fearful political revolution, in which 'all rule and authority,' that stands opposed to 'God and his Christ,' shall be utterly, and for ever, subverted. It corresponds with the vision in Re. 19. 13–21. C.

Ver. 4. This dissolving and falling of the 'host of heaven' does not refer to the visible heavens and the end of the world (as will appear from the state that is to follow, ch. 36. 5–10), but to the dissolving and falling of all the political and ecclesiastical powers usurped by 'the beast and the false prophet,' Re. 19. 20. C.

Ver. 5. My sword . . . shall come down upon Idumea. It shall come upon Idumea as a commencement of the prophecy—a specimen and notice of the judgments to come. Nor is there any land, except that of Babylon, whose destruction seems so complete, or whose renovation seems so hopeless. Like judgments were foretold against both, and alike terrible to the nations that forget God should be their fulfilment. C.

Ver. 9. Emblems of an overthrow as complete as that of Sodom and Gomorrah: while it is not improbable that the description may have been literally realized in volcanic eruptions. C.

Ver. 10. Irby and Mangles, after the greatest difficulties, got a sight of the ancient capital, but were not able to pass through the land.—See Keith on Prophecy. C.

Ver. 17. They shall possess it. That is, the wild beasts and birds of prey and solitude shall possess the forests, rivers, and ruined cities. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is proper that sinners should listen to God's threatenings, as he can quickly make them

GENERAL VIEW OF RAMLEH—NEAR THE PLAINS OF SHARON. [ISAIAH, XXXV : 2.]—"It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon." From the top of the tower of Ramleh there may be had a magnificent view of the whole plain of Sharon, from the mountains of Judea and Samaria to the sea, and from the foot of Carmel to the sandy deserts of Philistia. It must have been from some such a point of view as this that Solomon had of the plain of Sharon when he sang of the roses of Sharon. Ramleh is three hours' ride from Joppa, on the great commercial thoroughfare from Egypt to Damascus. Ramleh is surrounded by fruitful gardens of the finest oranges. Here is the largest Latin convent in Palestine, founded in 1420 by Philip of Burgundy. It is used as a home for Franciscan pilgrims.

17 And[v] he hath cast the lot for them, and his hand hath divided it unto them by line: they[w] shall possess it for ever, from generation to generation shall they dwell therein.

CHAPTER XXXV.

1 The joyful and flourishing state of Christ's kingdom. 3 The weak are encouraged with a view of the blessings of the gospel.

THE wilderness,[a] and the solitary place, shall be glad for them; and the desert [b]shall rejoice, and [c]blossom as the rose.

2 It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing; [d]the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon; they[1] shall see the glory of the LORD, and the excellency of our God.

3 ¶ Strengthen[e] ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees.

4 Say to them that are of a fearful[2] heart, Be[g] strong, fear not; behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; he will come and save you.

5 Then the [h]eyes of the blind shall be opened, and [i]the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped.

6 Then shall the [j]lame man leap as an hart, and the [k]tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall [l]waters break out, and streams in the desert.

7 And [m]the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water: in the habitation of dragons where each lay, shall be grass,[3] with reeds and rushes.

8 And [n]an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called, The way of holiness; [p]the unclean shall not pass over it; [q]but it shall be for those:[5] the [r]wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein.

9 No[r] lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there: but the redeemed shall walk there.

10 And the [s]ransomed of the LORD shall return, and [t]come to Zion with songs, and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

5 This is said in derision. It is a taunt, and a cutting one. The Jews thought they would be able to defend themselves, and by the aid of Egypt to drive off the Assyrians. Now they are told by the enemy at their very gate, that if two thousand horses were furnished to them, they could not place two thousand warriors upon them. The main strength of the Assyrian army was in its cavalry; they therefore looked with contempt upon the Jews, who could not furnish even a small troop.—P.

6 Rabshakeh had, most probably, heard of some of God's warnings to the land, and as his manner was (ver. 7) to state his subject and reason upon it, inaccurately or sophistically, he here converts a warning to Judah into a warrant to Syria.—C.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

1 Sennacherib invadeth Judah. 4 Rabshakeh, sent by Sennacherib, by blasphemous persuasions solliciteth the people to revolt. 22 His words are told to Hezekiah.

NOW it[a] came to pass in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah, that Sennacherib king of Assyria [b]came up against all the defenced cities of Judah, and took them.

2 ¶ And [c]the king of Assyria sent Rabshakeh from [d]Lachish to Jerusalem, unto king Hezekiah, with a great army: and he stood by the [e]conduit of the upper pool, in the highway of the fuller's field.

3 Then came forth unto him [g]Eliakim, Hilkiah's son, which was over the house, and [h]Shebna the scribe,[1] and Joah, Asaph's son, the recorder.

4 And Rabshakeh said unto them, Say ye now to Hezekiah, [i]Thus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, What [j]confidence is this wherein thou trustest?

5 I say, sayest thou, (but they are but vain words,)[2] I have counsel and strength for [3]war: now, on whom dost thou trust, that thou rebellest [k]against me?

6 Lo, thou trustest in the [l]staff of this broken reed, on Egypt; whereon if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh king of Egypt to all that trust in him.

7 But if thou say to me, [n]We trust in the LORD our God: is it not he whose high places and whose altars Hezekiah [o]hath taken away, and said to Judah and to Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar?

8 Now, therefore, give pledges,[4] I pray thee, to my master the king of Assyria, and [p]I will give thee two thousand horses, if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them.[5]

9 How then wilt thou turn away the face of [q]one captain of the least of my master's servants, and [r]put thy trust on Egypt for chariots and for horsemen?

10 And am I now come up without the LORD against this land to destroy it? [s]the LORD said unto me,[6] Go up against this land, and destroy it.

feel what they are averse to hear. Terrible, but righteous, are the judgments which he inflicts, especially upon them who injure his people. And he can easily unite the curses of Sodom and Babylon upon such as refuse to take warning by their fate. It is madness to fix our hearts on earthly things when their end may quickly be so miserable. And let us here seriously consider how dreadful sin must be, the cause of all judgments—and hell, the perfection of them.

CHAPTER XXXV. Ver. 1-4. These fearful judgments shall issue in the great comfort of the church. Multitudes of barren, destitute, bewildered, and ungodly sinners shall be converted to Christ; and by beholding his glories revealed in the gospel shall abound in comfort, holiness, and virtue. The most weak and timorous shall be strengthened and encouraged by the views of their incarnate God and all-conquering and saving Redeemer. 5-7. While multitudes of benevolent miracles on the bodies of men are wrought by Jesus Christ and his apostles, multitudes of sinners shall be savingly enlightened, healed, strengthened, and comforted; and by the influence of the preached gospel, and the Spirit of God poured forth upon them, shall vast numbers of saints, and of good works, be found in places which had been the most noted habitations of wickedness and devils. 8-10. Jesus Christ, as the divinely appointed mean of salvation and holiness, and of all our access to God, shall be exhibited in the gospel; in whom as their way, not the unclean and obstinate sinners, but justified and regenerated men, however weak, shall walk, without erring from it. None can walk therein while under the reign of their unruly and mischievous lusts; nor can earth or hell hurt those believing ones who walk in it: but in attending Christ's ordinances, they shall at last arrive at the complete and everlasting happiness of the heavenly state.

Ver. 1. Wilderness. The emblem of the church. Re. 12. 14.—Shall be glad for them. For whom? Not for the creatures enumerated in the foregoing chapter, but for the 'weak hands, the feeble knees, the fearful hearts, the blind, and the lame, and the dumb,' described ver. 3-6. C.

Ver. 7. The parched ground. 'The glowing sand,' on which, by a peculiar action of the sun's rays, lakes of water are often so vividly represented as to tantalize the traveller with a vain hope, which the prophet declares will yet be spiritually realized. See Shaw's Travels.—All the curses pronounced upon Idumea, and realized upon it, as the commencement and specimen of the prophetic judgments, shall be reversed and replaced by the contrary mercies and blessings. C.

Ver. 8. A highway. Free access and passage denied in ch. 34. 10, the emblems of that spiritual intercourse and communion which God will yet promote amongst all churches and nations. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God can quickly make the most amazing changes on countries and nations, either in mercy or in judgment. Glorious things are said of our New Testament church, especially in her apostolical and millennial periods. And her extent, comfort, light, life, holiness, and safety inconceivably exceeds that of the old. Believing truly in Jesus Christ's person and fulness effectually quicken, fructify, and comfort the heart. And an assured faith of his approach is sufficient to silence every fear and doubt. How wise are God's bestowals of his Word and Spirit! and how effectual for the illumination, quickening, encouragement, strengthening, and sanctification of men! The grace of the gospel teaches men to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts; and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in his present world. Unspeakable is the joy and transcendent the happiness of ransomed men. Certainly and quickly that holiness, which is now

11 Then said Eliakim, and Shebna, and Joah, unto Rabshakeh, Speak, I pray thee, unto thy servants in the [t]Syrian language; for we understand it: and speak not to us in the [u]Jews' language, in the ears of the people that are on the wall.

12 But Rabshakeh said, [v]Hath my master sent me to thy master and to thee to speak these words? hath he not sent me to the men that sit upon the wall, that [z]they may eat their own dung and drink their own piss[7] with you?[8]

13 ¶ Then Rabshakeh stood, and [y]cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language, and said, Hear ye the words of the [z]great king,[9] the king of Assyria:

14 Thus saith the king, [a]Let not Hezekiah deceive you; [b]for he shall not be able to deliver you.

15 Neither let Hezekiah make you trust in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us: this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

16 Hearken not to Hezekiah; for thus saith the king of Assyria, Make an agreement with me by a present,[1] and come out to me: and eat ye [c]every one of his vine, and every one of his fig-tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his own cistern;

17 Until [d]I come and take you away to a land like your own land, [e]a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards.

18 Beware[2] lest Hezekiah persuade you, saying, The LORD will deliver us. [h]Hath any of the gods of the nations delivered his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

19 Where are the gods of [i]Hamath[3] and Arphad?[3] where are the gods of Sepharvaim?[4] and have they delivered Samaria out of my hand?

20 Who [j]are they among all the gods of these lands that have delivered their land out of my hand, [k]that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of my hand?

21 But [l]they held their peace, and answered him not a word: for the king's commandment was, saying, Answer him not.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

1 Hezekiah mourning, sendeth to Isaiah to pray for them. 6 Isaiah comforteth them. 8 Sennacherib, going to encounter Tirhakah, sendeth a blasphemous letter to Hezekiah. 14 Hezekiah's prayer. 21 Isaiah's prophecy of the pride and destruction of Sennacherib, and the good of Zion. 36 An angel slayeth the Assyrians. 37 Sennacherib is slain at Nineveh by his own sons.

AND it[a] came to pass, when king Hezekiah heard it, that he rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, and [b]went into the house of the LORD.

2 And he sent [c]Eliakim, who was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests covered with sackcloth, [d]unto Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz.

3 And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day is [e]a day of trouble, and of [f]rebuke,[1] and of blasphemy:[2] for[h] the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth.[3]

5 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

6 ¶ And Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say unto your master, Thus saith the LORD, [l]Be not afraid of the words that thou hast heard, wherewith the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

CHAPTER XXXVI. Ver. 1. Most part of this narrative will be found in the contemporary portion of the book of 2 Ki. xviii. and 2 Ch. xxxii. It is here repeated to show how history and prophecy reflect mutual light upon each other. C.

Ver. 2. Lachish. A city of Judah about 30 miles south-west of Jerusalem. On account of its idolatry, it was threatened with divine judgments, Mi. 1. 13, which fell upon it first during the invasion of Sennacherib, and more fully during that of Nebuchadnezzar, 2 Ki. 18. 17: Je. 34. 7. It continued a city till at least the fourth century of the Christian era: but since the occupation of Palestine by the Arabs, even its ruins have almost totally disappeared. C.

Ver. 6. Broken reed. The marshes of the river Nile abounding in reeds, 'the reed' became an apt emblem of Egypt. But, as the 'broken reed' is represented as 'piercing' the hand that leans on it, 'broken' must refer, not to a fracture in the reed itself, but to a fracture from the stem on which it grew. There is therefore some covert allusion to a change of dynasty, that rendered dependence upon Egypt more precarious than usual. C.

Ver. 7. Is it not he, &c. This is one of those accusations that malicious ignorance so readily prefers upon partial evidence. Hezekiah had certainly pulled down altars. Ignorant malice, without examination, pronounces them 'altars of Jehovah;' truth would have described them 'altars of devils.'—Note, It was thus the Reformers were accused of rending the 'seamless garment of Christ.' Now, that they did rend 'the synagogue of Satan' is unquestionable; but that they, in part and in commencement, delivered the 'church of Christ,' is certain. C.

Ver. 17. It is evident that the Israelites were about this time seized with a spirit of emigration, either with a view to a safer country, or, as the world calls it, to 'better their condition,' see ch. 30. 2; 31. 1; and that Rabshakeh takes advantage of this prevailing disposition to persuade them by flattering promises to an ignominious submission to a heathen power.—Note, It is thus by prospect of deliverance from a present danger, or by promise of a future advantage, that sinners continue to tempt the people of God to reject truth and embrace error, to forsake Christ and follow the world. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How quickly Providence fulfils some awful predictions! And people may meet with great distress in the way of their duty, in order that their faith may be exercised, their graces brightened, and their glory increased. Let us then always look out and prepare for it, and not wonder if our most impious and treacherous enemies for a time prevail against us, and both with threats and derision tempt us to faint in, or desert, the good ways of the Lord. Let us never marvel if pride intoxicate sinners, and make them talk big of themselves, their works, and wealth; or if they should pretend power equal to God, or a commission from him. If we maintain our confidence in God, and continue in his service, we need not fear the want of his protection. It is base to make appeals to the people while the affair is but debated between princes; or to take occasion from soft speeches to banter the more outrageously; or to talk of bettering men's condition when their ruin is really intended. How horridly insolent is it to compare JEHOVAH to an idol! or to imagine ourselves a match for his power! And though it be not always prudent to answer the blasphemy of railers, yet we ought always to be deeply affected with it.

CHAPTER XXXVII. Ver. 2. The doctrine of intercessory prayer runs through the whole Word of God. It was exemplified when Abraham prayed for the cities of the plain; when Aaron war with thee: and, when he heard it, he sent messengers to Hezekiah, saying,

10 Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, [q]Let not thy God in whom thou trustest[r] deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be given into the hand of the king of Assyria.

11 Behold,[s] thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly; and shalt thou be delivered?

12 Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed, as [t]Gozan,[7] and [u]Haran,[8] and Rezeph,[9] and the children of [v]Eden which were in Telassar?[1]

13 Where is the king of [w]Hamath, and the king of Arphad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim,[y] Hena, and Ivah?

14 ¶ And Hezekiah received the letter from the hand of the messengers, and read it: and Hezekiah [z]went up unto the house of the LORD, and spread it before the LORD.

15 And Hezekiah [a]prayed unto the LORD, saying,

16 O LORD of hosts, God of Israel, that dwellest[b] between the cherubims, [c]thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; [d]thou hast made heaven and earth.

17 Incline[e] thine ear, O LORD, and hear; open[g] thine eyes, O LORD, and see; and hear all the words of Sennacherib, which hath sent to reproach the living God.

18 Of a truth, LORD, [h]the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations,[2] and their countries, 19 And have cast[3] their gods into the fire: for[4] they were no gods, but the work of men's hands, wood and stone; therefore they have destroyed them.

20 Now therefore, [j]O LORD our God, save us from his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth [k]may know that thou art the LORD, even thou only.

21 ¶ Then Isaiah, the son of Amoz, sent unto Hezekiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [l]Whereas thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib king of Assyria:

22 This is the word which the LORD hath spoken concerning him; The [m]virgin, the daughter of Zion, hath despised thee, and [o]laughed thee to scorn; the daughter of Jerusalem hath shaken her head at thee.

23 Whom[p] hast thou reproached and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? even against the [q]Holy One of Israel.

ran with the censer between the people and the plague; when Job sacrificed for his children, and was directed to pray for his friends; when Paul prayed for the churches, and entreated them in turn to pray for him; and when James directs the sick to send for the elders of the church to pray over him both for health and forgiveness. It does not supersede private and personal prayer, as the case of Hezekiah shows, see ver. 15–20. Yet does it present (1) a more public testimony for God and his providence than secret prayer can furnish; (2) it excites him who is called to pray to godly sympathy with his brethren in distress; and (3) it reminds the believer of his only surety of salvation, the righteousness and intercession of Jesus his Redeemer and Advocate. C.

Ver. 7. I will cause him to fall by the sword. God did not command the sons of Sennacherib to assassinate their father; then would God have been the author of sin, which it is blasphemy to assert, but God judicially gave up his wicked sons to their own evil passions and devices, and to the will of Satan, whom they serve. C.

Ver. 9. Tirhakah king of Ethiopia. There can be no doubt that the name of Ethiopia was, in the days of Isaiah, given to Upper Egypt and the adjoining districts, see 2 Ch. 12. 2, 3; and it appears that Ethiopia at this period under Tirhakah, by profane historians called Taracus and Tearcon, had attained the supremacy. C.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

1 Hezekiah, having received a message of death, 4 by prayer hath his life lengthened. 8 The sun goeth ten degrees backward, for a sign of that promise. 9 His psalm of thanksgiving.

IN those[a] days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, came unto him, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Set thine house in order:[1] for thou shalt die, and not live.[2]

2 Then Hezekiah [b]turned his face toward the wall, and prayed unto the LORD,

3 And said, [c]Remember now, O LORD, I beseech thee, how [d]I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect[3] heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight: and Hezekiah wept sore.[4]

4 ¶ Then[e] came the word of the LORD to Isaiah, saying,

5 Go, and say to Hezekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the [g]God of David thy father, [h]I have heard thy prayer, [i]I have seen thy tears: behold, I will [j]add unto thy days fifteen years.[5]

6 And [k]I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria: and I will defend this city.

7 And this shall be [l]a sign unto thee from the LORD, that the LORD will do this thing that he hath spoken;

8 Behold, [n]I will bring again the shadow of the degrees, which is gone down in the sun-dial of Ahaz, ten degrees backward.[6] So the sun returned ten degrees, by which degrees it was gone down.

9 ¶ The[o] writing of Hezekiah king of Judah, when he had been sick, and was recovered of his sickness:[7]

10 I said, [p]in the cutting off of my days, I shall go [q]to the gates of the grave: I am deprived of the residue of my years.

11 I said, [r]I shall not see the LORD,[8] even the LORD, in the land of the living: I shall [s]behold man no more with the inhabitants of the world.

12 Mine[t] age is departed, and is removed from me as a shepherd's tent: I have cut off like a weaver my life; [u]he will cut me off with pining sickness:[9] from day even to night wilt thou make an end of me.

13 I reckoned till morning, that, [v]as a lion, so will he break all my bones: from day even to night wilt thou make an end of me.[1]

14 Like[w] a crane, or a swallow, so did I chatter; I did mourn as a dove: [y]mine eyes fail with looking upward: O LORD, [z]I am oppressed; undertake for me.

15 What[a] shall I say? he hath both [2]spoken unto me, and himself hath done it: [b]I shall go softly all my years in the bitterness of my soul.[3]

16 O Lord, [c]by these things men live, and in all these things is the life of my spirit: so wilt thou recover me, and make me to [4]live.[5]

17 Behold, for peace I had great [6]bitterness; but thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit[7] of corruption: for [d]thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back.[8]

18 For [e]the grave cannot praise thee; death can not celebrate thee: they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth.

19 The[g] living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day: [h]the father to the children shall make known thy truth.

Ver. 21. Thou hast prayed against Sennacherib. The duty of praying for enemies by no means forbids praying against them, that is, against their evil designs. Had Hezekiah been bound to pray for Sennacherib without this limitation, he would, by necessary consequence, have been praying for the ruin of his kingdom, the captivity of his people, the overthrow of religion, and the establishment of idolatry; for all these designs were openly avowed by Rabshakeh. C.

Ver. 30. Some have supposed the first to have been the sabbatical, and the second the jubilee year. But that the sabbatical year and the jubilee coincided, seems probable, according to the computation of the Universal History. See Jenning's Jewish Antiquities, p. 398. Is it not likely that from the spring of the first year till the spring of the second, the Assyrian invaders had interrupted agriculture, and that God gives as a sign or evidence of his protection the unexampled fruitfulness of these two years, confirmed by his foretelling the precise period at which peace and prosperity were again to return? C.

REFLECTIONS.—The best way to baffle the malicious designs of enemies is to be driven to God and our duty by them. And the greatest ought to engage the prayers of Christ's ministers and saints in their favour. The more pinching our distresses, the more earnest ought to be our supplications. The weakest hopes of mercy should encourage, and the fearful reduction of God's people should excite, us to that duty. When we are ready to despair, God can eminently magnify his power and grace in our deliverance. God's proud enemies may hiss against his people, but they cannot hurt them. And they who attempt to terrify them from their holy profession will soon be made a terror to themselves. Those who delight in war shall have enough of it at last; and their terrors do but presage their ruin. Success ordinarily hardens men in their evil ways, and renders them more and more deliberate in blasphemy. Earnestness and liberty in prayer is of infinite importance in a time of danger. And believing views of God's leading characters powerfully encourage distressed minds. If he give us inward satisfaction in his promise, we may bear with every possible abuse from men. All our fears of great destroyers ought to drive us to the great God our Saviour: and while we plead his glory in our own behalf, he will quickly answer our prayers, and manifest that he takes all the injury done to us as done to himself. He will show himself at once a kind benefactor and almighty protector, who takes notice of all the motions, projects, and speeches of our enemies. And such as magnify themselves against him and his people do but render themselves contemptible. They will find that there is no standing before his judgments, when they come with his commission to destroy.

CHAPTER XXXVIII. Ver. 1. In those days. It appears from ver. 6, that Hezekiah's sickness was during the invasion, and before the miraculous discomfiture of the Assyrians. This event occurred in the fourteenth year of Hezekiah's reign, as he lived fifteen years after: and reigned, in all, twenty-nine years. C.

Ver. 3. And Hezekiah wept sore. The melancholy prospects of his family, of his country, and of religion, and not any mere dread of dying, must be looked to as the causes of Hezekiah's grief. Such godly sorrow is by no means inconsistent with the most decided resignation. Even Jesus wept at the sorrows he meant to relieve—he wept over Jerusalem in the prospect of its ruin; and, 'in the days of his flesh, he offered up prayers and supplications, with strong crying and tears,' He. 5. 7. C.

Ver. 8. The sun returned ten degrees. The sun, by an ordinary and necessary abbreviation of speech, here stands for the sunbeams. It is of no use to show how a certain condensation of the atmosphere might inflect the sun's rays backward. The whole was a miracle; and God alone can tell how it was effected. C.

Ver. 12. Mine age . . . is removed from me as a shepherd's tent. The shepherds of Palestine and the adjoining countries move their tents frequently from place to place in search of pasture and water—an apt emblem of the unsettled condition of man, who should always feel that here he has no continuing city, and therefore seek a 'city that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.'—From day even to night wilt thou make an end of me. 'In the course of the day thou wilt finish my web' (Louth). There are no phrases more common, or more expressive, than the thread or web of life. C.

Ver. 13. As a lion, so will he break all my bones. They must have felt the agony of certain forms of fever racking the bones, who would judge of the expressive and terrible accuracy of this description. C.

Ver. 14. I am oppressed with sorrow for my family, my country, and the church—overwhelmed with a feeling of my own unworthiness and incalculable mercies of my gracious God. C.

Ver. 18. They that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth. 'They cannot hope for' any more discoveries of 'thy light and truth,' Ps. 43. 3, as the subject of consoling thought, Ps. 51. 6, and godly conversation, ver. 19. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Death being the common fate of mankind, every one ought seriously to prepare for it.

MOSQUE OF OMAR—STANDING ON THE SITE OF THE TEMPLE OF SOLOMON. [ISAIAH, xl : 9.]—"O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God." The Mosque of Omar stands upon the site of the Holy Temple that constituted the center of Jewish life and history and worship. It was in the temple that the Jews were taught the knowledge of one God, and by means of the rites and ceremonies and symbols of the temple they were trained into their conception of God and man's duty to obey him, that made them a peculiar people. It is a sad reflection that upon this historic place should now stand a place of worship dedicated to one God, it is true, but where there is no longer taught that man is under obligation to love as himself his brother man.

20 The[i] LORD was ready to save me: therefore we will sing my songs[9] to the stringed instruments, all the days of our life in the house of the LORD.

21 For Isaiah had said, [j]Let them take a lump of figs, and lay it for a plaister upon the boil, and he shall recover.

22 Hezekiah also had said, What is the [k]sign that I shall [l]go up to the house of the LORD?

CHAPTER XXXIX.

1 Merodach-baladan, sending to visit Hezekiah because of the wonder, hath notice of his treasures. 3 Isaiah, hearing thereof, foretelleth the Babylonian captivity.

AT that[a] time Merodach-baladan,[1] the son of Baladan, king of Babylon, sent letters and a present to Hezekiah: for he had heard that he had been sick, and was recovered.

2 And Hezekiah was [b]glad of them,[2] and showed them the house of his [c]precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his [3]armour,[4] and all that was found in his treasures: there was [d]nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah showed them not.

3 ¶ Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, [e]What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, They are come from [g]a far country unto me, even from Babylon.

4 Then said he, What have they seen in thine house? And Hezekiah answered, [h]All that is in mine house have they seen: there is nothing among my treasures that I have not showed them.

5 Then said Isaiah to Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD of hosts:

6 Behold, the days come, 'that all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store until this day, shall be carried to Babylon: nothing shall be left, saith the LORD.

7 And [j]of thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

8 Then said Hezekiah to Isaiah, [k]Good[5] is the word of the LORD which thou hast spoken. He said moreover, For there shall be [l]peace and truth in my days.[6]

CHAPTER XL.

1 The promulgation of the gospel. 3 The preaching of John Baptist. 9 The preaching of the apostles. 12 The prophet, by the omnipotency of God, 18 and his incomparableness, 26 comforteth the people.

COMFORT ye,[a] comfort ye my people, [b]saith your God.

2 Speak ye comfortably[1] to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare[2] is accomplished, [c]that her iniquity is pardoned: for she hath received of the LORD's hand [g]double for all her sins.

3 ¶ The[h] voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, [i]Prepare ye the way of the LORD, make straight in the desert a highway for our God.

4 Every[j] valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and [k]the crooked shall be made straight,[3] and the rough places plain.[4]

5 And[l] the glory of the LORD shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: [m]for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.

6 The voice said, Cry. And he said, What shall I cry? [o]All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field:

7 The[p] grass withereth, the flower fadeth:

2 That Hezekiah was somehow in fault, the language of Isaiah (ver. 3, 4) seems decidedly to testify. It is not easy, however, to determine precisely wherein his fault lay. But, most probably the error lay in his good-natured desire to please the Babylonians, rather than to instruct the heathens; and in his greater alacrity to exhibit the temporal, rather than the spiritual, riches of his kingdom.—C.

And nothing can be more seasonable than fervent prayer in a time of great trouble; nor anything more pleasant than the testimony of a good conscience, washed in Jesus' blood. It is a relief to a distressed heart to unbosom itself to God, whose ears are open to its cry. Nor can pious souls take much pleasure in life or personal comforts, unless God's church be revived and comforted along with them.—God takes pleasure in showing his people the immutability of his counsels, that they may have strong consolation. And if one miracle served to confirm Hezekiah's faith, why do not thousands confirm ours in the glorious Redeemer? And why are we so careless of keeping memorials of our afflictions and deliverances, and of the working of our hearts under them, for the benefit of ourselves and others?—It is hard to keep the heart from despondency under sore and complicated troubles. God's providences indeed ought to affect our spirits with humility and constant fear; and in him alone should we hope for support and deliverance. Great is the kindness, the full forgiveness, that he manifests in delivering from the utmost extremity of trouble. And the opportunity of living to his glory ought to be our principal reason for esteeming or desiring life. Blessed are those parents whose great care is to inform their children concerning Jesus and his truths! No means of relief ought to be used without dependence on the power and kindness of God. And we ought as eagerly to thank him for our deliverances as ever we prayed for them.

CHAPTER XXXIX. REFLECTIONS.—It highly becomes us to rejoice with them that rejoice, and weep with them that weep; and to honour them whom God delights to honour. They are often courted in prosperity who were contemned in adversity. Even men who hate God will caress his people on secular accounts; but often their kisses are deceitful. It is hard to be duly humble amidst great providential advancements. But to be fond of carnal respect marks very great weakness. And an intimacy or connection with the wicked usually proves a fearful plague in the issue. In showing to our friends what we are or have, pride is ready to start up, and we forget God the giver.—Ministers ought always to be plain, impartial, and faithful in their rebukes. And if God love us, he will find means to pull down our proud spirits, if not to take from us the things of which we are proud. Let me then never be fond of that which in the end may turn out vanity and vexation of spirit! Let me evidence the truth of my repentance by a cordial reception of faithful reproof, and a kindly submission to the chastisements of Providence. Let me reckon every moment's reprieve from hell or trouble a great mercy; and especially if God avert the storms of his judgment till I be entered into my eternal rest.

CHAPTER XL. Ver. 2. God punished the Jews in Babylon enough to answer the purposes of his glory, and more than he did many of the heathens; and in Christ he received the most abundant satisfaction to his justice; and bestows great and manifold blessings instead of punishments. 3–8. By the providence of God and proclamation of Cyrus everything shall tend to promote the return of the Jews from Babylon; and no human power shall, in the least, be able to hinder the fulfilment of his promises. And by the preaching of John Baptist shall the Jewish nation be prepared for the manifestation of the Messiah in his sufferings and glory; and all attempts of men to hinder the erection of his kingdom shall quickly be frustrated. 9–11. Let the Jews loudly triumph in God's powerful and tenderly-careful deliverance of them from Babylon, and conducting them back to their own country. And especially let the gospel church rejoice in the incarnation and mighty works of the great God our Saviour: his erection, nourishment, preservation, and government of her, and every one of her members, however weak and distressed. 21, 22. Do not even ye Gentiles know, by the light of nature, and by information derived from your ancestors, that JEHOVAH, the Creator and Governor of the world, is of such infinite perfection, that no image can represent him. 23, 24. He, with infinite ease, destroys the most powerful princes, and bereaves them of their power. 27, 28. Since God is so infinitely powerful, wise, and good, why should his own people ever distrust him, as if he disregarded their afflictions, or could not find out a way for their deliverance, or as if he neglected to redress their grievances? Know they not that he never becomes unable to help or take care of his people, and that there is no finding out the reasons of his dispensations? 30, 31. Whatever may become of persons of the greatest natural abilities, they who depend on the Lord for his assistance, and the performance of his promises, shall grow stronger in grace, and easily overcome every difficulty in the way of their duty.

Ver. 1. The second great division of the Book of Isaiah begins with this chapter. It is supposed to have been written towards the close of the prophet's life. It constitutes by far the most important part of his writings, and in some respects the most important part of the Old Testament. Its style is sublime; its subject the highest and holiest on which the human mind can dwell; its delineation of the work and character of the Messiah clear and full almost as the gospel narrative. It is this part of his writings which gives Isaiah a just title to the name 'evangelical prophet.' Professor Alexander has given the following clear summary of because the spirit[5] of the LORD bloweth upon it: surely [q]the people is grass.

8 The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: [r]but the word of our God shall stand for ever.

9 ¶ O Zion, that [s]bringest good tidings,[6] get thee [t]up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings,[7] lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, [u]be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, [v]Behold your God!

10 Behold, the Lord GOD will come [w]with[8] strong[9] hand, and his arm[1] shall rule for him; [x]behold, [y]his reward is with him, and his work before him.[2]

11 He shall [z]feed his flock like a shepherd, he shall [a]gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and shall [b]gently lead those [3]that are with young.[4]

12 ¶ Who[c] hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with the span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure,[5] and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance?

13 Who[d] hath directed the Spirit of the LORD, or being his counsellor[6] hath taught him?

14 With whom took he counsel, and who instructed him,[7] and taught him in the path of judgment, and taught him knowledge, and showed to him the way of understanding?[8]

15 Behold, [e]the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance: behold, he taketh up the isles[9] as a very little thing.

16 And Lebanon is not sufficient to burn, nor[g] the beasts thereof sufficient for a burnt-offering.

17 All nations before him are as [h]nothing; and they are counted to him less than nothing, and vanity.

18 ¶ To whom then will ye [i]liken God? or what likeness will ye compare unto him?

19 The[j] workman melteth a graven image, and the goldsmith spreadeth it over with gold, and casteth silver chains.

20 He that is so impoverished, that he [1]hath no oblation,[2] chooseth a tree that will not rot; he seeketh unto him a cunning workman to prepare a graven image, that [k]shall not be moved.

21 Have[l] ye not known? have ye not heard? hath it not been told you from the beginning? have ye not understood from the foundations of the earth?

22 It is he that sitteth[3] upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are [m]as grasshoppers; that [n]stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in;

23 That[o] bringeth the princes to nothing: he maketh the judges of the earth as vanity.

24 Yea, [q]they shall not be planted; yea, they shall not be sown; yea, their stock shall not take root in the earth: and he shall also [r]blow upon them, and they shall wither, and the whirlwind shall take them away as stubble.

25 To[s] whom then will ye liken me, or shall I be equal? saith [t]the Holy One.

26 ¶ Lift[u] up your eyes on high, and behold who hath created these things, that bringeth out their host by number: he calleth them all by names: by the greatness of his might, for that he is strong in power; not one faileth.[4]

27 Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel,[5] My[v] way is hid from the LORD, and my judgment is passed over from my God?

28 Hast[x] thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the LORD, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, the leading points embraced in this division. A preliminary examination of them will help to prepare the reader for a full understanding of the various parts:—'1. The carnal Israel, the Jewish nation, in its proud self-reliance and its gross corruption, whether idolatrous or only hypocritical and formal. 2. The spiritual Israel, the true church, the remnant according to the election of grace, considered as the object of Jehovah's favour and protection, but at the same time as weak in faith and apprehensive of destruction. 3. The Babylonish exile and the restoration from it, as the most important intermediate point between the date of the prediction and the advent of the Messiah, and as an earnest or a sample of Jehovah's future dealings with his people both in wrath and mercy. 4. The advent itself, with the person and character of Him who was to come for the deliverance of his people not only from eternal ruin, but from temporal bondage, and their introduction into glorious liberty. 5. The character of this new condition of the church or of the Christian dispensation, not considered in its elements, but as a whole; not in the way of chronological succession, but at one view; not so much in itself, as in contrast with the temporary system which preceded it.' P.——Comfort ye my people. The parties exhorted to give comfort are such as hear 'the voice in the wilderness,' ver. 3, and in faith of his coming, 'prepare in the desert a highway for their God.'—Note, It is thus the duty of believers to comfort one another, 1 Th. 4. 18. C.

Ver. 2. She hath received . . . double. Not double chastisement, for that is simply impossible, but the blessings of 'grace, mercy, and peace'—the double of all the miseries sin had brought upon her. C.

Ver. 4. The fulfilment of this prophecy began in the days of John the Baptist, and will, like the formation of a highway amidst forests, morasses, rugged mountains, and deep valleys, progressively advance to completion in God's good time. C.

Ver. 6. The voice said, Cry. That is, the voice of the Lord who had spoken, ver. 5. 'And he said,' that is, he that 'cried in the wilderness' said, 'What shall I cry?' C.

Ver. 7. This verse is liable to be misunderstood in its present form. The spirit of the Lord is not the Holy Spirit. Such an interpretation does not suit the passage. The literal rendering would be 'the breath of Jehovah;' and the figure is that of a person breathing upon the tender grass and delicate flower, and thus causing them to droop and die. The whole verse may be translated as follows:—'The grass is dried; the flower is faded; for the breath of Jehovah has blown upon it.—Surely the people is grass.' P.

Ver. 9. 'Ascend, O virgin daughter, into the high mountain, thou that bringest good tidings to Zion: exalt thy voice with strength, thou that bringest good tidings to Jerusalem.'—Note, The title 'virgin daughter,' ch. 37. 22, is inserted to express the feminine form of the Hebrew: and is in strict accordance with the custom of the Jewish women in celebrating victories. See Ex. 15. 20, 21; Ju. 11. 34; 1 Sa. 18. 6, 7.—Behold your God! It is not possible to imagine any stronger evidence that Jesus was 'God manifest in the flesh,' 'seen of angels,' and seen also of men. C.

Ver. 12. The object of the voice is twofold: (1) comfort to Jerusalem, (2) the preparation of the way of the Lord; and to remove all doubt that the Lord can bring comfort by his Spirit, and prepare the way for his people, see ver. 13, 26–31, the prophet here describes at length the almighty power.—Measured the waters. There is no fact more demonstrable than the perfect exactness of the proportion of water to dry land for all the uses of vegetables and animals. See Whewell's Bridgewater Treatise.—Meted out heaven. So exact is the measurement of the heavens, that astronomers have calculated where an undiscovered planet should be, and have thus been enabled to find it. See Herschel's Astronomy.—Comprehended the dust . . . in a measure. This fact follows from the relative extent of land and water, as already stated.—Weighed the mountains. Every planet takes its place and orbit in exact proportion to its weight: the earth is depressed at the poles and elevated at the equator in virtue of its weight and rotation; and, so far as known to man, every object on earth and in the heavens is literally 'weighed in a balance.' C.

Ver. 17. How can anything be less than nothing? The rhetoricians call it a hyperbole: but such a mode of speech seems unbecoming the Spirit of God. The Hebrew word signifies 'a defect.' The nations are worse than what is merely defective: besides being defective in righteousness, they are positively wicked. C.

Ver. 20. A graven image that shall not be moved. The smaller metallic images were carried about; the wooden images were nailed immovably to the walls, ch. 41. 7. C.

Ver. 24. How awfully has this truth been verified in the fall of every empire of antiquity, and the many revolutions of modern times! O that kings would be wise to acknowledge Jesus as their King and Lord! Ps. ii. C.

Ver. 31. They that wait. Who wait in faith, in patience, in watchfulness, in cheerfulness, in love—who wait as subjects bound, as servants bought, as friends invited, as children beloved. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's abundant consolations graciously follow his messages of terror and conviction; and he takes pleasure in the comfort and prosperity of his servants. How delightful is the real preaching of the gospel of Christ! It proclaims that forgiveness of sins, without which it is impossible to obtain any true comfort. God easily removes every bar out of his way in coming to us. And it is necessary that we lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, in our approaches to him. It is a happy token of deliverance when our hearts are levelled by his grace, and made to behold his glory! Human power is little to be feared when against us, or trusted to when on our side! But infinite is the power, the faithfulness, the duration of the truths of Christ. Happy tidings are those which relate to him and his salvation! and happy is the period when he comes and performs all in all in and for his church; when he manifests his activity, care, and tenderness in gathering sinners to himself, and in bearing and nourishing them up to eternal life! What empty nothings are all creatures in comparison of him! Why then should we not trust him in every difficulty, cleave to him under every discouragement, and revere him in the receipt of every favour! What image can ever truly represent the infinite JEHOVAH! What idol can deserve a comparison with the Almighty Maker of heaven and earth! It is weak and sinful to suspect that he has or can cast neither is weary? [y]there is no searching of his understanding.

29 He[z] giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength.

30 Even[a] the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall:

31 But [b]they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall [c]mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary, and [d]they shall walk, and not faint.

CHAPTER XLI.

1 God expostulateth with his people, about his mercies to the church, 10 about his promises, 21 and about the vanity of idols.

KEEP silence[a] before me, O [b]islands;[1] and let[c] the people renew their strength:[2] let them come near, then let them speak; let us come near together to judgment.

2 Who [d]raised up the righteous[3] man from the east, called him to his foot, gave the nations before him, and made him rule over kings?[4] he gave them as the dust to his sword, and as driven stubble to his bow.[5]

3 He pursued them, and passed safely;[6] even by the way that he had not gone with his feet.

4 Who hath wrought and done it, [e]calling the generations[7] from the beginning? I the LORD, the [g]first, and with the last; I am he.

5 The[h] isles saw it, and feared; the ends of the earth were afraid, drew near, and came.

6 They [i]helped every one his neighbour; and every one said to his brother, Be of good courage.[8]

7 So[j] the carpenter encouraged the goldsmith,[9] and he that smootheth with the hammer him that smote[1] the anvil, saying, It is ready for the sodering:[2] and he fastened it with nails, that it should not be moved.

8 But thou, Israel, [k]art my servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham my friend.[l]

9 Thou [m]whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, and called thee from the chief men thereof, and said unto thee, Thou art [o]my servant; I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away.

10 ¶ Fear[p] thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: [q]I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness.

11 Behold, [r]all they that were incensed against thee shall be ashamed and confounded: they shall be as nothing; and they that strive with thee[3] shall perish.

[*] This remarkable passage has been variously interpreted. Some think the righteous one refers to the Messiah; others think Cyrus is intended; others suppose it must mean Abraham. Gesenius and some later German writers translate the passage in another way altogether. They maintain that the Hebrew word rendered 'righteous man,' or 'righteous one' cannot be so translated; that it can only mean 'righteousness;' and that it is not the object of the verb in the first clause, but the subject of the verb in the second.—'Who hath raised up from the east? Righteousness shall call him to its foot; it shall give nations before him, and cause him to tread upon kings.'—P.

12 Thou[s] shalt seek them, and shalt not find them, even them that contended with [4]thee: they that war against thee[5] shall be [t]as nothing, and as a thing of nought.

13 For I the LORD thy God will [u]hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee.

14 Fear[v] not, thou [x]worm Jacob, and ye [6]men of Israel; I will help thee, saith the LORD, and thy [y]Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel.

15 Behold, I will make thee a new sharp [z]thrashing-instrument having teeth:[7] thou [a]shalt thrash the mountains, and beat them small, and shalt make the hills as chaff.[8]

16 Thou shalt [b]fan them, and the wind shall carry them away, and the whirlwind shall scatter them: and thou [c]shalt rejoice in the LORD, and shalt glory in the Holy One of Israel.

17 When [d]the poor and needy seek [e]water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst, I the LORD [g]will hear them, I the God of Israel [h]will not forsake them.

18 I will open [i]rivers in high places, and fountains in the midst of the valleys: I will make the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water.

19 I[j] will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the shittah-tree, and the myrtle, and the oil-tree; I will set in the desert the fir-tree, and the pine, and the box-tree together;

20 That[k] they may see, and know, and consider, and understand together, that the hand of the LORD hath done this, and the Holy One of Israel hath created it.

21 ¶ Produce[9] your cause, saith the LORD: bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob.

22 Let them bring them forth, and [l]show us what shall happen: let them show the former things what they be, that we may consider [1]them, and know the latter end of them: or declare us things for to come.

23 Show the things that are to come hereafter, [m]that we may know that ye are gods: yea, [o]do good, or do evil, that we may be dismayed, and behold it together.

CHAPTER XLI. Ver. 1, 2. Attentively hear my challenges, ye heathens; muster up all the arguments you can in your own defence. Who but myself called Abraham to his travels from his native country, enabled him to conquer the eastern kings, and his seed to conquer the Canaanites? Who besides me disposed and enabled Cyrus to execute my righteous judgments on the Chaldeans, and to grant deliverance to my people? Who raised up the all-conquering Immanuel, or enabled Saul the persecutor and other apostles irresistibly to conquer the nations to Christ by the preaching of the gospel? 4, 5. Who hath disposed of all the generations of mankind? Have not I, the eternal God? Observing with dread my wonderful works, the heathens have consulted together how to preserve themselves and their idols. 8–16. Ye Jews, being mine by special covenant, whom I originally brought from among your neighbours in Chaldea to Canaan, and notwithstanding your repeated rebellions, have never rejected, ye must not worship idols. Indulge 26 Who[r] hath declared from the beginning, that we may know? and beforetime, that we may say, He is righteous? yea, there is none that showeth; yea, there is none that declareth; yea, there is none that heareth your words.

27 The first shall say[s] to Zion, Behold, behold them:[5] and I will give to Jerusalem [s]one that bringeth good tidings.

28 For I beheld, and [t]there was no man; even among them, and there was no counsellor, that, when I asked of them, could answer[6] a word.

29 Behold,[u] they are all vanity; their works are nothing: their molten images are wind and confusion.

CHAPTER XLII.

1 The mission of Christ, graced with meekness and constancy. 5 God's promise to him. 10 An exhortation to praise God for his goapel. 18 He reproveth the people of incredulity.

BEHOLD my[a] servant, whom I [b]uphold, mine[c] elect, in whom my soul [d]delighteth: I[e] have put my spirit upon him; he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles.

2 He[g] shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street.[1]

3 A[h] bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking[2] flax shall he not quench:[3] he [i]shall bring forth judgment unto truth.

4 He [j]shall not fail nor be discouraged,[4] till he have set judgment in the earth: and [k]the isles shall wait for his law.

5 ¶ Thus saith God the LORD, [l]he that created the heavens, and stretched them out; he that spread forth the earth, and that which cometh out of it; he that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein;

6 I the LORD [m]have called thee in righteousness, and will [o]hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give [p]thee for a covenant of the people,[5] for [q]a light of the Gentiles;

7 To [r]open the blind eyes, to [s]bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison-house.

8 I am[t] the LORD; that is my name: and my glory[u] will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images.

no slavish or desponding fears, for I am your infinite ALL IN ALL; and I will strengthen, help, and uphold you by my almighty power, manifested in the righteous destruction of mine adversaries and deliverance of my people. All your enemies shall quickly be overwhelmed with confusion and ruin; for I will guide, strengthen, and keep you from falling. And however weak, despised, and oppressed you may be, I will enable you to subdue your most lofty, proud, and powerful adversaries, and make you to rejoice in and glorify me, as the author of all your privileges. 17–20. When poor indigent sinners are reduced to the most wretched condition, I will grant them comfort and relief; and will spread the gospel, and plant the ordinances thereof, and persons eminent for gifts and graces, among both Jews and Gentiles, in such a manner as will manifest my infinite power and holiness to every observer. 25–27. I foretell that Cyrus the Medo-Persian shall subdue the Chaldean and other empires. But which of your idols can manifest their true divinity by foretelling anything? It is only I, the eternal God, who can represent things future as if they were present, and enable prophets to foretell temporal or spiritual deliverances to my church.

Ver. 2. The righteous man. Abraham, who 'believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness,' Ro. 4. 3. C.

Ver. 5. The isles. The original word does not necessarily signify places surrounded by water, but places bordering on the sea.—Saw it. They saw God's power and judgment in the deliverance of his people, and judgment of idolatrous nations, as in the case of Abraham (see note on ver. 2), the exodus and possession of Canaan, &c.—The ends of the earth were afraid. They were not moved to 'the fear of the Lord,' but to the fear of the Jews, and the overthrow of their beloved idolatry. C.

Ver. 6. They helped every one his neighbour. The nations associated against the truth, and in support of idolatry. See Ps. 83. 2–8, 12. C.

Ver. 9. Thou whom I have taken, &c. The address is here to Israel, as the 'seed of Abraham—taken from the ends of the earth—chosen, and not cast away;' consequently it is prophetic of an event yet to come, not descriptive of an event that is past. That event to come is the restoration of the Jews to the possession of their land, ver. 9, political power, ver. 11, 15, and the knowledge of Jesus the Holy One of Israel, ver. 16. C.

Ver. 11. That the destruction of their Babylonian and Syro-Grecian oppressors is the commencement of a series of events by which this prophecy will be accomplished, there can be no doubt —but the series does not conclude until the time of the national conversion of Israel to 'the truth as it is in Jesus,' ver. 16. C.

Ver. 15. The 'mountains and hills' are the prophetic emblems of those empires and kingdoms by which the Jews have been, or shall be, persecuted and oppressed, and which are doomed to fall, as a punishment for their infidelity, cruelty, and pride. C.

Ver. 17. The poor, are the 'poor in spirit,' Mat. 5. 3: the water, is the word of truth, 'springing up into everlasting life,' Jn. 4. 14. C.

Ver. 19. In the garden of Eden God himself planted 'every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food: and put Adam into that garden 'to dress it, and to keep it.' And since that hour, wherever the Spirit of God renews the heart of man, that same Spirit renews the face of nature. So evident is this fact, that in several parts of Europe the progress of the Reformation can be traced by the progress of improvement in dwellings, plantings, and cultivation. C.

Ver. 21. Produce your cause. This is addressed to the confederate idolaters, ver. 6–8, and the nations by whom Israel was persecuted and oppressed, ver. 11, 12; and their gods are challenged to establish their claims to worship by any word of prophecy or any act of power, ver. 22–24. C.

Ver. 25. I have raised up one from the north. This has been interpreted as descriptive of Cyrus coming from Media, which lay north from Babylon. But is it not rather spoken of Messiah, who came with glad tidings to Jerusalem, ver. 27, from Nazareth in Galilee, in the north of the Holy Land? And is it not prophetic

SITE OF JOSEPH'S WORKSHOP—WHERE CHRIST IS SUPPOSED TO HAVE WORKED AS A CARPENTER. [ISAIAH, xlii: 1-4.]—"Behold my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom my soul delighteth; I have put my Spirit upon him: he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street. A bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench: he shall bring forth judgment unto truth. He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till he have set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for his law." Joseph's workshop is pointed out in Nazareth as standing upon the site of the ancient shop where our Savior labored as a carpenter. Through the Christian ages Nazareth has been growing in interest and importance. Antoninus Martyr visited Nazareth in A. D. 600, and speaks of the reverence in which the place was held at that time, and compares it to a paradise on earth.

REFLECTIONS.—The enemies of Jesus and the gospel may do their worst, it will but issue in their own confusion. The truths of the Bible will bear the strictest scrutiny. And since it is God who founds and protects the church, and assists her helpers, it is in vain for idolaters to unite in their efforts against her. But what fightings without, and fears within, have the people of God to encounter! Nothing but almighty power and grace can enable to conquer them, or can afford comfort under them. And seasonably does Jesus relieve his people in their extremity, and plant ordinances and true converts where he pleases. Be still then, my soul, and consider the insignificancy of every idol which thou hast put in JEHOVAH's room. How late is their existence! how short-lived and uncertain their continuance! how limited their knowledge! how small their power, and unimportant their work! God forbid I should make that my god which did not make me out of nothing; and which cannot warn me of every danger, protect me from every enemy, and through eternity be my all-sufficient portion.—But let Jesus, and JEHOVAH in him, be my ALL IN ALL: my Friend to love me at all times; my Companion to guide me to glory; my Helper to assist me in every work; my Captain of salvation to slay my foes, and make me in all things more than a conqueror; my Supplier and my Provision; my Comforter and my Consolation.—What have I to do any more with idols? Let me cast them to the moles and to the bats—cast them away as a menstruous cloth—as vanity and confusion.

CHAPTER XLII. Ver. 1–4. With wonder and love contemplate and believe on Jesus Christ, my eternal Son, whom I have appointed my Servant, as Mediator for the salvation of sinful men; whom I will assist in his work, and furnish with all gifts and graces without measure, that, in consequence of his finishing the undertaking, he may effectually spread the gospel tidings of his redemption among the Gentiles, and render them his peculiar people. Not with carnal contention or pompous ostentation, but in a meek, humble, and peaceful manner, shall he make his personal appearance, and erect his kingdom on earth. He shall not discourage the broken-hearted, nor cast off such as have but very weak grace, but shall encourage, strengthen, and deal kindly with them: and while he renders his word effectual, he shall judge every person uprightly and impartially. No difficulty shall in the least discourage him, nor hinder his finishing his work, or his spreading the gospel of men's salvation, erecting his spiritual kingdom among them, and subduing the opposers thereof. And all nations, particularly those along the coast of the Mediterranean and in the islands, shall readily embrace his truths, and become his obedient subjects.—5–9. I, the eternal JEHOVAH and almighty Creator, have called him to his work for the manifestation of my righteousness and faithfulness, and will conduct, assist, and preserve him in it. I set him forth as the Mediator, Surety, and Administrator of the promise of grace to men, that he may endue with saving knowledge, and may conduct to everlasting happiness, poor ignorant sinners of mankind, and deliver them from their spiritual thraldom to Satan and their lusts.—As I am being itself, and do give being to every creature, and fulfil every promise, I will, by him, through the gospel, abolish idolatry out of the world. I have already fulfilled multitudes of my promises; and now give you new promises of release from Babylon, and of redemption from sin, that, when they are accomplished, you may believe that I am the only true God.—13–17. After long forbearing to take judgment, I will, in the most sudden and certain manner, destroy the Chaldeans and other enemies of my church, and remove every hindrance of my glory and my people's salvation; and will enlighten, renew, and direct them as their need requires. 18–20. Attend ye careless, ignorant, and obstinate sinners: for none are so blind and obstinate as you my professed people, who reckon yourselves the only enlightened and righteous persons. Notwithstanding all my revelations given to you, and the wonderful works which I have wrought for you, ye never duly consider any. Notwithstanding all your pretences to hearken, ye never regard what is said. 21. While I, in the honourable fulfilment of my promises, have continued my favours to you, or will magnify my word in accomplishing my threatenings upon you, Jesus shall, by his complete righteousness, fulfill divine justice, and restore with advantage to the holy law whatever honour it had lost by men's sin. 22. For the obstinate disobedience of most of you, ye shall be rendered inexpressibly miserable by the Romans and others, and yet shall be so stupified as never to search out, or repent, of the sinful causes of your trouble.

Ver. 1. Judgment. The true interpretation of the divine law, whose typical sacrifices are all realized in Christ, so that the Gentiles are admitted as fellow-heirs with the Jews, and set free from any yoke of bondage to the rites of the ceremonial law, Ac. 15. 1, 12–29; Ep. 2. 11–19; Ga. 5. 1–6. C.

Ver. 3. The heart that, by reason of sorrow for sin, is as 'a bruised reed,' he will bind up and heal. The purpose of repentance that is ready to expire, like the 'smoking flax' in the lamp, he will not, in judgment, quench because of its smoke and offensiveness, but gently guard, till it kindles into a flame of love. C.

Ver. 4. 'The isles,' i.e. distant nations—nations which lie on the shores of the sea, and beyond the sea. They shall wait for and long for the blessings and civilizing influences of his law. The prophecy was fulfilled in the spread of Christ's gospel over the world. The fulfilment will reach away forward still into the distant future. P.

Ver. 7. Most probably an allusion to the cruel custom of putting out the eyes of prisoners, as illustrative of the cruelty of 'the god of this world,' blinding the mind of them who believe not, 2 Co. 4. 4. C.

Ver. 10. A new song. It is new, because it is the dictation of a new spirit, Eze. 11. 19, the outpouring of a new heart, Eze 18. 31. C.

Ver. 11. 'The wilderness,' or midbar, is a pastoral, as contradistinguished from an agricultural country. Arabia is chiefly referred to. Though most of its inhabitants were nomads, roaming about in tents from pasture to pasture, yet it had always a considerable number of towns; it has them still in the very heart of the so-called desert. To these towns reference is here made. P.——Kedar. Arabians dwelling in movable tents, Ps. 120. 5; and these are contrasted with 'the inhabitants of the rock'—the people of Petra, who had the most permanent habitations cut in the sides of the mountains. And in these places was the blessed gospel preached by Paul, Ga. 1. 17. C.——The word translated 'rock' is Sela, which is the ancient name of the 'rock city' of Petra, the capital of Idumea. It is probable that the word is here used as a proper name; and if so, the concluding clause of the verse is very expressive. Petra is situated in the very heart of the mountains; and some of its rock-hewn temples and houses are high up on the sides of the wild cliffs. P.

Ver. 14. At once the Lord overwhelmed the world by a flood; at once he destroyed Sodom; at once he smote the first-born in Egypt; at once he gave up Jerusalem to plunder, the temple to fire, and the remnant of the nation to death or exile; and at once he will smite Gog and Magog, and lay spiritual Babylon in ruins. C.

Ver. 15. The meaning is, that the mountain and hill sides, now covered with terraced vineyards and orchards, would be left desolate; that the streams, whose abundant waters irrigated and fortilized vast tracts of country, would be left completely dry; that the pools or cisterns, in which water was collected during the rainy season for the wants of man and beast, would be entirely exhausted. P.

Ver. 19. Who is blind but my servant? Who is this servant? Is he the servant upheld, even Christ? ver. 1; or is he Jacob, Israel personified? ch. 43. 22, comp. with ver. 10. Jacob is expressly called the chosen servant of the Lord, 1 Ch. 16. 13; see also Is. 44. 1, 2; 45. 4; 48. 20. Wherefore, considering how difficult, if not impossible, it is to apply blind and deaf to Messiah; and how easy, natural, and consistent with fact is their application to Jacob, it follows that of Jacob the passage is to be interpreted. C.

Ver. 20. Thou observest not. Observest them not—as evidences of the being, perfections, grace, and judgment of God.—Opening the ears. Opening the outward ears of others by the preaching of the law, but shutting his own inward ear against the love and the power of it. C.

Ver. 25. Knew not—considered not the real origin of his calamities; ascribed them to secondary causes and agents, and forgot to trace them to the righteous judgments of God. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Infinite is the excellency of Jesus Christ! How dear to his Father and useful to men! How glorious the nature and end of his mediation! And with tenderness, fidelity, courage, and success, he executes it. Grand and irreversible is his commission; and his character is answerable to our infinite needs. What ground of gladness is this to sinners, the wildest Arabs and most distant islanders not excepted! And infinitely offensive to JEHOVAH, and ruinous to men, must be the rejection of him. By the most fearful shaking of nations does Jesus often introduce his 9 Let[p] all the nations be gathered together, and let the people be assembled: who among them can declare this, and show us former things? let them bring forth their witnesses, that they may be justified: or [q]let them hear, and say, It is truth.

16 Thus saith the LORD, which [e]maketh a way in the sea, and a path in the mighty waters;

17 Which[g] bringeth forth the chariot and horse, the army and the power; they shall lie down together, they shall not rise; they are extinct, they are quenched as tow.

18 ¶ Remember ye not [h]the former things, neither consider the things of old.

19 Behold, I will do a [i]new thing: now it shall spring forth; shall ye not know it? I [j]will even make a way in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert.

20 The[k] beast of the field shall honour me, the dragons and the [9]owls:[1] because [l]I give waters in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert, to give drink to my people, my chosen.

21 This[m] people have I formed for myself; they shall show forth my praise.

22 ¶ But[o] thou hast not called upon me, O Jacob; but thou hast been weary of me, O Israel.

23 Thou[p] hast not brought me the [2]small cattle of thy burnt-offerings; neither hast thou honoured me with thy sacrifices: [q]I have not caused thee to serve with an offering, nor wearied thee with incense.

24 Thou hast bought me no [r]sweet cane[3] with money, neither hast thou filled[4] me with the fat of thy sacrifices; but thou [s]hast made me to serve[5] with thy sins, thou hast wearied me with thine iniquities.

25 I, even I, am he that [t]blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins.

kindest favours. And with earnestness, power, and grace he convicts and calls sinners to himself. But, alas! how dreadful is it to have the god of this world blinding our minds and hardening our hearts, that the light of the gospel may not shine into them, nor the love of it captivate them to the obedience of faith! And fearful will be the issue when they who have the best means of grace, have them least blessed and profit the least by them.

CHAPTER XLIII. Ver. 1. God formed the Israelites into a church and state, redeemed them from their Egyptian and other enemies, and made them his peculiar people. 2. Whatever great troubles churches or saints endure, they are not hurt nor destroyed by them. 3, 4. God destroyed the Egyptians and others to advance the glory and happiness of the Israelites; and has and will destroy nations for the preservation of his gospel church. 5–7. God gathered the captive Jews from the different places of the Chaldean empire, and brought them to Canaan as his people; and, in like manner gathers believing sinners from all nations to Christ. 8–13. Let either the heathen idols or their votaries, who are almost as stupid and senseless, produce proofs of their foretelling such events, or else own me to be the only true God.—The several events, which I have foretold concerning you Jews and my Servant the Messiah, and which, by mighty power, I have performed, or will accomplish, are demonstrative evidences that I am the only true God. 14–17. In order to your deliverance from Babylon, I will send the Medes and Persians to destroy the Chaldean empire, and will remove all hindrances of your return. 19–21. Nay, the division of the Red Sea, and drowning of Pharaoh and his army in it, and other things which I have done for you, shall not be comparable to what I will do, in safely conducting you from Babylon, and re-establishing you into a glorious church for myself; and especially in spreading the gospel and the gospel church, and convicting multitudes of the most stupid and mischievous sinners by Christ for the manifestation of my glory. 22–24. But though I never required of you any services that were really burdensome, ye have neglected and been weary of my true worship; ye have not offered me sacrifices in obedience to my commands, or for my glory, but for some selfish respects; and have even grudged the expense of them, while ye were liberal in the service of idols; ye have abused my revelations, ordinances, and bounties of providence, to encourage you in wickedness, till I can no longer bear with you. 25. Nevertheless, merely for my own name's sake, I still offer you a full and free forgiveness of all your iniquities through the blood of my Son. 26. Let this my gracious pardon and promise be pleaded by you; or, if you think you have a righteousness of your own to plead upon, which I have not observed, point it out if you can. 27, 28. Ye cannot plead the merits of your ancestors or rulers in church or state, as all of them have been sinners, and most of them notorious transgressors. Yea, on that very account have I exposed your chief priests to contempt and ruin, and your whole nation to dreadful misery and ignominy.

Ver. 1. The fulfilment of this prophecy, in part at least, has been referred to the time of Shalmaneser, Sennacherib, or Cyrus; and it is possible the series of events included may have commenced at any of these periods, or even earlier, at the exodus; but it is evident from ver. 6, 7, that the great purpose of the prediction is still future—even the wondrous and (ver. 7) complete restoration of the Jews to their own land. C.——'The main object of this chapter,' says Alexander, 'is the true relation of Israel to Jehovah, and its application in the way both of warning and encouragement. The doctrine taught is, that their segregation from the rest of men, as a peculiar people, was an act of sovereignty, independent of all merit in themselves, and not even intended for their benefit exclusively, but for the accomplishment of God's gracious purposes respecting men in general. The inferences drawn from this fact are, that Israel should certainly escape the dangers which environed him, however imminent, and, on the other hand, that he must suffer for his unfaithfulness to God.' The last clause of the verse embodies a glorious and cheering truth. God claims Israel—Israel after the flesh as a type of the spiritual Israel, the church—he claims them as his own. He has redeemed them: they are therefore his by right of purchase. He has given them his name; he has adopted them; they are therefore his by right of sonship. P.

Ver. 10. Ye are my witnesses. Since the calling of Abraham the Jews have been the most prominent witnesses for God, and that partly by doctrine, partly by ritual worship, but chiefly by their being the principal exemplification of prophecy. And if there be any that can read the prophecies peculiar to the Jews in the Bible, and the completion of them in history, and still remain an infidel—'neither would he believe, though one rose from the dead.' C.

Ver. 14. Babylon proud of her walls, the Chaldeans 'boasting in their ships'—proud of their naval power and commercial wealth. —Note, Though not a prophecy concerning Britain, how much doth she need this record as a warning. How ready hath she been to boast of her 'wooden walls,' and the inexhaustible extent of her 'national resources!' And may the Lord defend her from her enemies, and increase her riches a thousand fold. But may the Lord preserve her from pride and self-confidence, and trusting in uncertain riches, to the forgetting of the living God. C.

Ver. 19. Is not the wilderness, with its inhabitants, the adverse and uncultivated Gentile world, whom, by conversion to Jesus, the Lord will render favourable to the restoration of his people? And it is a fact undoubted, that, just in proportion as the love of Jesus is revived in a church, in the same proportion is anxiety for the conversion of the Jews revived. C.

Ver. 25. For mine own sake. Every sinner hates God, Ro. 8. 7, and is therefore, as such, hateful to him, Ps. 5. 5. 'It follows that the salvation of a sinner cannot originate from any quality in the sinner himself; but in the mercy, compassion, love, and undeserved grace of God, Jn. 3. 16; Ro. 5. 8, 10; Ep. 2. 8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—O how grace much more abounds where guilt and ignominy had abounded! Thrice happy are those troubles which occasion the peculiar presence, supports, and comforts of a reconciled God! How important that relation which is the source and foundation of such divine favours! Happy are they whom God has chosen for himself! Neither opposition, guilt, nor distance shall be able to prevent their access to and enjoyment of him. But unhappy are they who stand in the way of their mercy. Incomparably better is JEHOVAH than any of his rivals, both enemies and friends being judges. And great and glorious things his people ought to attest concerning him in their profession and practice; for mighty are the things which he hath showed or done, or will do, for them! Marvellous is the change which his grace in the gospel 27 Thy[v] first father[6] hath sinned, and thy teachers[7] have transgressed against me.

28 Therefore I have [z]profaned the princes of the sanctuary,[8] and have given Jacob to the curse, and Israel to reproaches.

CHAPTER XLIV.

1 God again comforteth his church with gracious promises. 9 The vanity of idols, and folly of idol-makers. 21 God exhorteth Israel to trust in his mercy, and promiseth restoration by Cyrus.

YET now hear, [a]O Jacob my servant; and Israel, whom I have chosen:

2 Thus saith the LORD that [b]made thee, and formed thee from the womb, which will help thee; [c]Fear not, O Jacob my servant; and thou, Jesurun, [d]whom I have chosen.

3 For I will [e]pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground; I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring;

4 And they shall [g]spring up as among the grass, as willows by the water-courses.

5 One[h] shall say, I am the LORD's; and another shall call himself by the name of Jacob; and another shall subscribe with his hand unto the LORD, and surname himself by the name of Israel.[1]

6 Thus saith the [i]LORD, the King of Israel, and his Redeemer the LORD of hosts; [j]I am the first, and I am the last; and [k]beside me there is no God.

7 And [l]who, as I, shall call, and shall declare it, and set it in order for me, since [m]I appointed the ancient people? and the things that are coming, and shall come, let them show unto them.

8 Fear[o] ye not, neither be afraid: [p]have not I told thee from that time, and have declared it? ye are even [q]my witnesses. Is there a God beside me? yea, [r]there is no God;[2] I know not any.

9 ¶ They[s] that make a graven image are all of them vanity; and their delectable[3] things shall not profit: and they are their own witnesses; [t]they see not, nor know; that they may be ashamed.

10 Who hath formed a god, or molten a graven image that is profitable for nothing?

11 Behold, all his fellows shall be [u]ashamed; and the workmen, they are of men: let them all be gathered together, let them stand up; yet they shall fear, and they shall be ashamed together.

12 The[v] smith with the tongs[4] both worketh in the coals, and fashioneth it with hammers, and worketh it with the strength of his arms: yea, [x]he is hungry, and his strength faileth; he drinketh no water, and is faint.

13 The carpenter stretcheth out his rule, he marketh it out with a line, he fitteth it with planes, and he marketh it out with the compass, and maketh it after the figure of a man, according to the beauty of a man; that it [y]may remain in the house.

14 He [z]heweth him down cedars, and taketh the cypress and the oak, which he strengtheneth[5] for himself among the trees of the [6]forest: he planteth an ash, and the rain doth nourish it.

6 The meaning of this obscure clause appears to be that the manufacturer of idols is not only careful in selecting the best wood for his purpose, but by careful culture, and constant attention he rears (strengtheneth for himself) forest-trees better fitted for his work than could be obtained from mere natural growth. The last clause of the verse is a farther development of the same idea.—P.

makes on hearts and nations. And every mercy received is but a pledge of another. Surely then we should, with the most ardent affections, show forth his praise! But, alas! by what fearful sins of omission and commission many professors provoke him, to their own and their neighbours' destruction! Yet transcendently tender are his gracious pardons. And hopeful is the case if, under a deep sense of our own and our fathers' iniquities, we supplicate for and receive them.

CHAPTER XLIV. Ver. 2. God formed the Jews into rational creatures, and into a church for himself: and forms believers, and renders them members of Christ's mystical body and gospel church. 3–5. I will publish my gospel, and pour out my Spirit in an abundant manner upon corners and persons destitute of them; that, being rooted and grounded in Christ, they may quickly grow in grace and good works, and may be determined solemnly to devote themselves to the faith, profession, and obedience of Christ, and the fellowship of his church. 7, 8. Which of the heathen idols can foretell, and in order accomplish, events as I have done, since the creation, or the taking of Israel into covenant with me? And why then do you fear that any of them should hinder me from fulfilling my present promises, when they have never been able hitherto to hinder the predicted events which have befallen you? 21–28. Consider, my people—whom I have chosen, because of faith, and will never forsake—the vanity of idols, and madness of their votaries, and the judicial blindness to which they are given up; and return to me, your Redeemer, by faith and repentance, in the view of my having graciously pardoned all your great and numerous transgressions. And let all the inhabitants of heaven and earth, and particularly the Gentiles, praise God for the deliverance of the Jews from Babylon, and the redemption by Jesus typified thereby. The God who hath promised is he who made and governs all things, who can easily frustrate the predictions of the Chaldean soothsayers, and blast all the political designs of their statesmen; and who takes pleasure to fulfil that which he has foretold by his prophets concerning the rebuilding of the Jewish cities, and the removal of impediments out of his way, and drying up the Euphrates, that Babylon may be taken by Cyrus the Persian, whom he has appointed for releasing his people, and causing them to rebuild his temple at Jerusalem.

Ver. 2. Jesurun signifies upright—the proper characteristic of a renewed spirit, having 'a conscience sprinkled from dead works,' 'void of offence towards God and towards man,' and therefore enabled by grace to look up towards God, and stand upright, and not downcast or 'ashamed before him at his coming,' He. 9. 14; Ac. 24. 16; 1 Jn. 2. 28. C.

Ver. 4. And they shall spring up, &c. 'As grass among the waters'—an image forcibly impressive in the Arabian or African deserts, where the traveller may journey many weeks, and never see grass except where he occasionally discovers a spring of living water. C.

Ver. 7. The meaning may be thus expressed:—'Who shall call events into existence as I, the Lord, have done, and announce them beforehand, and set them in order before me,—since the time when I set apart this ancient people, Israel? Who will declare the things which are now approaching, or which shall take place hereafter?' The power, the wisdom, and the omniscience of God are here contrasted with the weakness and ignorance of man. P.——Ancient people. The history of nations, rightly read, is the history of divine providence—the development of the government and character of God. Therefore an 'ancient people' becomes to the pious and contemplative mind more interesting than a modern people, not merely as deeper studies of curiosity, but as clearer, because more varied, illustrations either of divine mercy or judgment. C.

Ver. 9. Their own witnesses. The idolater knows that he can make or destroy his idol, and is therefore a witness to himself that the idol has no power, and so cannot be God. C.

Ver. 12. If the workman who forms the idol become faint by the toil of making it, and must borrow strength from water, how weak must be the dead idol that cannot do what water can! The Rev. J. Williams states, that when the South Sea Islanders were engaged in making an idol, they strictly abstained from food and water, though the work sometimes continued three days. It is not improbable that a similar practice may have prevailed amongst the Jews during the period of their idolatry; and if so, it well explains the difficulty in this passage. C.

Ver. 13. The carpenter. The introduction of both the smith and carpenter presents, what is still common amongst heathens, a wooden idol covered with metallic plates. The whole description manifests an advanced state of the arts of metallurgy and carpentry, sadly contrasting with that spiritual stupidity into which idolatry had reduced a refined and civilized people. C.

Ver. 17. A man prostrate before an idol, and praying to it for aid and deliverance, is a melancholy evidence of human degradation. No doubt idolaters generally deny that they pray to the idol; but affirm that they use it as 'an aid to devotion,' and pray to the god it represents. But God rejects all such subterfuges, and detests the idol, as he condemns the idolater. C.

Ver. 18. He hath shut their eyes. Not by leading or inducing them to become idolaters—for then had he been the author of their sin—but by judicially giving them over to their own delusions, as a righteous punishment for their forgetfulness of his mercies. C.

Ver. 20. He feedeth on ashes. A diseased state of the stomach often produces such depravity of appetite as leads to eating of ashes, or even clay; by which destructive regimen, and self-chosen substitute for medicine, the disease is constantly rendered worse. And such is the condition of a heart deceived by false doctrine, led by youthful lusts, or chained by aged habits, labouring for that which is not bread, eagerly swallowing the lies of Satan, and rejecting Jesus the only Physician. C.

Ver. 24. It is surely impossible to read this verse, and compare it with Jn. 1. 3; Col. 1. 6; He. 1. 2, and fail to see that the JEHOVAH of the Old Testament is JESUS in the New; and it is impossible to search both Old and New Testaments, without perceiving that JEHOVAH is the living and the true God. C.

Ver. 27. The drying up of a great river is one of the most improbable events. Yet, by cutting a new channel for the Euphrates, and draining off its waters, Cyrus was enabled to enter Babylon, and transfer the Chaldean power to the Medes and Persians. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Thrice happy are the people saved by the Lord in their manifold relations to him, and blessings received from him! Happy are they who are, both themselves and their seed, interested in the new kingdom! Infinite is the fulness of the Holy Ghost; and liberally God bestows upon him destitute, withered, and wretched men, His influences invite them truly to God, and render holiness, and the most solemn dedication of themselves to God, as a Saviour, Husband, and Governor, their delight! What madness is it to forsake JEHOVAH, the fountain of living waters, whose unbounded excellencies are unnumbered, and to choose or form an idol in his room! When men are given up to their own hearts' lusts they soon become sottish and diligent in sin! And unpardoned iniquities greatly interrupt our fellowship with God. But it is pleasant to return to him in the view of his full forgiveness and effectual redemption, and with thankful joys to contemplate what he is to us, and has 15 Then shall it be for a man to burn: for he will take thereof and warm himself; yea, he kindleth it, and baketh bread; yea, [a]he maketh a god, and worshippeth it: he maketh it a graven image, and falleth down thereto.

16 He burneth part thereof in the fire: with part thereof he eateth flesh; he roasteth roast, and is satisfied; yea, he warmeth himself, and saith, Aha, I am warm, I have seen the fire:

22 I[i] have blotted out, [j]as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and, as a cloud, thy sins: [k]return unto me; for I have redeemed thee.

23 Sing,[l] O ye heavens; for the LORD hath done it: shout, ye lower parts of the earth: break forth into singing, ye mountains, O forest, and every tree therein: for the LORD hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himself in Israel.

24 Thus[n] saith the LORD, thy Redeemer, and [o]he that formed thee from the womb, I am the LORD that maketh all things; that stretcheth forth the heavens alone; that spreadeth abroad the earth by myself;

25 That[p] frustrateth the tokens of the liars, and maketh diviners mad; that [q]turneth wise men backward, and maketh their knowledge foolish;[2]

27 That[u] saith to the deep, Be dry, and I will dry up thy rivers;

28 That saith of Cyrus, [v]He is my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure: even saying to Jerusalem, [w]Thou shalt be built; and to the temple, Thy foundation shall be laid.[4]

CHAPTER XLV.

1 God calleth Cyrus for his church's sake. 5 By his omnipotency he challengeth obedience. 20 He convinceth the idols of vanity by his saving power.

THUS saith the LORD to his [a]anointed, to Cyrus,[1] whose right hand I have [2]holden, [b]to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two-leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut:

4 It was under the rule and by express orders of Cyrus that Jerusalem was rebuilt after the captivity, and the second temple founded. It is here expressly stated that God's purpose in raising up Cyrus was to accomplish this great work of restoration and reconstruction. We are informed by Josephus that Cyrus was made acquainted with this remarkable prophecy which had been written two centuries previously; and there can be no question that it operated powerfully upon his mind, and was, in the providence of God, the means of leading him to release and aid the Jewish captives.—P.

done, and will do for us! And even angels rejoice at the conversion of men. What pleasure God takes to disgrace false teachers, and to honour his ministers of truth! Easily he can retrieve the most forlorn condition, and find proper instruments for his work. And it is an honour for the greatest of men to be his agents in doing good to his people.

CHAPTER XLV. Ver. 1–3. I, the Lord, will assist Cyrus, and enable him to overthrow far greater armies than his own. I will dispirit and weaken his opposers; procure him entrance into Babylon and other fortified cities; remove all obstructions out of his way; and give him the wealth of the Lydians, Chaldeans, &c. 5, 6. I will make him strong and active, and will fit and dispose him for these great undertakings. 7. Comfort and calamity, prosperity and adversity, are overruled, in all their circumstances, by my power and wisdom. 8. I will bestow such plenty of favours upon you, through the righteousness of my Son, and in equity of procedure, as if they rained from heaven, or burst forth in floods, or grew in crops out of the earth. 9–11. Instead of presumptuously quarrelling with my procedure, humbly ask of me whatever information or blessings you or my church need, and you shall have your request granted. 13. I have qualified Cyrus to manifest my righteousness, truth, and goodness in the punishment of the Chaldeans, and the gratuitous deliverance of the Jews. 14. Part of the wealth of the Egyptians, Ethiopians, Arabians, &c., shall be bestowed upon the temple at Jerusalem; and multitudes of them shall humbly join themselves to the gospel church. 19. Not in the manner of the heathen oracles or idols, but in the most public and plain manner, and for your real advantage, I have promised what is true, and commanded what is just and good. 20–25. Ye who have escaped in the devastation of countries, inflicted to punish their abominable idolatries, and who can produce nothing to support the cause of your idols, know that I, the alone God and Saviour, have foretold these things. Renounce all your idols; believe in and acknowledge me as your only, almighty, and effectual Saviour; thus shall ye be graciously delivered from sin, and all the miseries which it entails, and advanced to everlasting happiness.—I have sworn, and will most faithfully perform my promise, to manifest myself the true God, and lead men of all nations to accept gladly my worship: and they shall, each one for himself, heartily receive, and solemnly acknowledge, that all their righteousness, for justification, was performed by me, and all their strength, for the performance of duties, is conveyed from me. Even to me shall all sinful ones come; and all the finally impenitent shall be overwhelmed with misery and ignominy. In a state of union to my person and through my righteousness, shall all who accept Jesus Christ have their sins pardoned and their persons accepted; and in me shall they rejoice and boast.

Ver. 1. The entry of Cyrus into Babylon arose, first, from the neglect of closing the river-gates on a night of festival; and secondly, from the opening of the palace-gates to inquire into the cause of the tumult, whereupon the Persian soldiers rushed in and slew the emperor, Da. 5. 30. C.

Ver. 8. 'Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above;' and as 'righteousness' is eminently the work and gift of God, through Jesus Christ, its heavenly origin and commission to the earth, as the only seed of salvation, are here beautifully described.—Note, Every dispensation of Providence, whether it come in light or in darkness, has but one end—the manifestation of the righteousness of God, which ever was of old, as it now is, and ever will be, through faith of Jesus Christ, unto all and upon all them that believe—even upon all that believe the testimony of God, and rest upon his faithfulness, mercy, and power. C.

Ver. 11. Command ye me. How can the creature command his Maker? Observe, he is first to ask the Holy One, consequently by the Holy Spirit, Ro. 8. 26: and concerning sins, consequently by addressing a Father: and thus, not striving against his Maker, but bowing to his Redeemer, the march of providential events moves onward at the prayerful command of the believer. C.

Ver. 13. Who is this? It has been applied to Cyrus—but he was not 'raised up in righteousness;' and though overruled to fulfil God's purposes, God could not be said to 'direct all his ways:' neither did he build the city of Jerusalem, but aided merely to the laying of the foundations of the temple. Is not the whole rather a description of Messiah, the Adam of the foregoing verse, who, when sent forth upon earth, made of a woman, was manifested in creature-condition and servant-form—truly raised in righteousness, Spirit-led in 'all his ways,' the builder of the 'New Jerusalem,' and the free-grace deliverer of 'the captives' of sin and death? Ep. 4. 8. C.

Ver. 15. God is essentially invisible, manifest only in providence, but hid as it were behind second causes;—manifest in his silent word, but hid from the wise and prudent;—'manifest in the flesh,' but hid behind 'the form of a servant:' or 'seen of angels' in glory, but hid from all but the eye of faith and hope. C.

Ver. 20. This summons refers to a time still future, when 'in the Lord shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory,' ver. 25. By the word escaped, it indicates that the return of the Jews will be as much against the will of oppressing nations as was the exodus from Egypt; and by the reference to 'graven images,' that idolatry will still be prevalent amongst an ignorant people 'perishing for lack of knowledge.' C.

Ver. 23. When this verse is compared with Ro. 14. 8–12, the reader finds (ver. 8) that we live or die unto the Lord: he also finds (ver. 9) that this Lord is Jesus—we all then find ourselves 'at the judgment-seat of Christ;' and thus (ver. 11, identical with Is. 45. 23) we find ourselves before that tribunal, fulfilling this prophecy and bowing to JEHOVAH, confessing to God. And surely it is impossible to weigh these things and continue to deny that JESUS is 'God manifest in the flesh.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—God, for the welfare of his church, often casts down the great and mighty, and raises up the weak and obscure. Uncertain are all the enjoyments of this world: it is therefore proper that they all be used for the glory of God and in kindness to his people. But let me never forget Jesus, who hath ascended up on high and led captivity captive, and hath received gifts for men, even the rebellious, that God the Lord may dwell among them. Let him order all my crosses and my comforts as he pleases. And while I look up for his abundant blessings, let me never 2 These verses refer directly to Babylon. In the preceding chapters the prophet had shown what Cyrus would do for the Jews; he now turns to those who had so long held the Jews in captivity, and pronounces judgment upon them. Bel, or Belus, was the supreme deity of the Babylonians. His fall is a symbol of the overthrow of the royal power in Babylon. Nebo was the tutelary deity of the Chaldeans, and corresponded to the Greek Mercury. His fall was symbolic of the complete subjection of the inhabitants of Babylonia to the great Persian conqueror Cyrus.—P.

20 ¶ Assemble yourselves and come; draw near together, ye that are [o]escaped of the nations: they [p]have no knowledge that set up the wood of their graven image, and pray unto a god that cannot save.

21 Tell ye, and [q]bring them near; yea, let them take counsel together: who [r]hath declared this from ancient time? who hath told it from that time? have not I the LORD? and [s]there is no God else beside me; a just God and a Saviour; there is none beside me.

22 Look[t] unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else.

23 I[u] have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth in righteousness, and shall not return, That unto me every [v]knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear.

24 Surely, shall one say, [x]In the LORD have I righteousness[9] and strength:[1] even to him shall men come: and [y]all that are incensed against him shall be ashamed.

25 In[z] the LORD shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall [a]glory.

CHAPTER XLVI.

1 The idols of Babylon could not save themselves from captivity. 3 God saveth his people to the end. 5 Idols are not comparable to God for power. 12 His salvation is near at hand.

BEL boweth[a] down, Nebo stoopeth; their idols were upon the beasts, and upon the cattle: your carriages were heavy loaden; they are a burden to the weary beast.

2 They stoop, they bow down together; they could not deliver the burden, but [1]themselves are gone into captivity.[2]

3 ¶ Hearken[b] unto me, O house of Jacob, and all the remnant of the house of Israel, which are [c]borne by me from the belly, which are carried from the womb:

4 And [d]even to your old age I am he: and even to hoar hairs will I carry you: I have made, and I will bear; even I will carry, and will deliver you.

5 ¶ To[e] whom will ye liken me, and make me equal, and compare me, that we may be like?

strive with him. Who hath hardened himself against God his Maker and prospered? Let me be careful for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, make my requests known unto God. Depending upon his infinite mercy, power, and faithfulness, let me expect whatever liberty, provision, honour, victory, or salvation he has promised. In the firm faith of the gospel, published to all the ends of the earth, let me, let thousands, with holy boasting, avow

6 They[g] lavish gold out of the bag, and weigh silver in the balance, and hire a goldsmith; and he maketh it a god: they [h]fall down; yea, they worship.

7 They bear him upon the shoulder, they carry him, and set him in his place, and he standeth; from his place shall he not remove: yea, [i]one shall cry unto him, yet can he not answer, nor save him out of his trouble.

8 Remember[j] this, and show yourselves men:[3] bring it again to mind, O ye transgressors.

9 Remember[k] the former things of old: for I[l] am God, and there is none else: I am God, and there is none like me,

10 Declaring[m] the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, [n]My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure:

11 Calling[o] a ravenous bird[4] from the east, the man that executeth my counsel[5] from a far country: yea, [p]I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it.

12 ¶ Hearken unto me, ye [q]stout-hearted, that are far from righteousness:

13 I[r] bring near my righteousness; it shall not be far off, and my salvation shall not tarry: and I will place salvation in Zion for Israel [s]my glory.

CHAPTER XLVII.

1 God's judgment upon Babylon and Chaldea, 6 for their unmercifulness, 7 pride, 10 and over-boldness, 11 shall be unresistible.

COME down,[a] and sit in the dust, O virgin daughter[1] of Babylon; sit on the ground: there is no throne, O daughter of the Chaldeans: for thou shalt no more be called tender and delicate.

2 Take[b] the millstones, and grind meal:[2] uncover[c] thy locks, make bare the leg, uncover the thigh, pass over the [3]rivers.[4]

3 Thy nakedness shall be uncovered, yea, thy shame shall be seen: [d]I will take vengeance, and I will not meet thee as a man.[5]

4 As[e] for our Redeemer, the LORD of hosts is his name, the Holy One of Israel.

5 Sit[f] thou silent, and get thee into darkness, O daughter of the Chaldeans: for thou shalt no more be called, The lady of kingdoms.

6 ¶ I[h] was wroth with my people; I have polluted mine inheritance, and given them into thine hand: [t]thou didst show them no mercy; upon the ancient hast thou very heavily laid thy yoke.

7 And thou saidst, I shall be [j]a lady for ever: so that thou didst not lay these things to thy heart, neither didst remember the latter end of it.

8 Therefore hear now this, [k]thou that art given to pleasures, that dwellest carelessly; that sayest in thine heart, [l]I am, and none else beside me; I shall not sit as a widow, neither shall I know the loss of children:

9 But[n] these two things shall come to thee in a moment in one day, the loss of children, and widowhood: they shall come upon thee in their perfection for [o]the multitude of thy sorceries, and for the great abundance of thine enchantments.

10 For thou hast [p]trusted in thy wickedness: thou [q]hast said, None seeth me. Thy wisdom and thy knowledge it hath perverted thee:[6] and thou hast said in thine heart, I am, and none else beside me.

11 Therefore [r]shall evil come upon thee; thou shalt not know from whence it [7]riseth: and mischief shall fall upon thee; thou shalt not be able to put it off:[8] and desolation shall come upon thee suddenly, which thou shalt not know.

'Raise thy long flowing vail; lift up thy flowing robes; uncover thy legs, and thus a poor, helpless, weary captive, wade through the streams into the land of thy captivity.' Babylon had conquered, oppressed, and enslaved Israel, now a like fate awaited herself. The contrast is drawn with great graphic power between the oppressor and the oppressed. Babylon the oppressor, sitting for a time in queenly state, with Israel in chains at her feet; then Israel freed and re-established in her own land, under the rule of her heavenly King, while Babylon, humbled and degraded, is driven into captivity.—P.

that in Jesus, the man who is JEHOVAH'S fellow, we have righteousness and strength. But God forbid that we should incur the guilt, the shame, the ruin of such as are incensed against a divine Saviour!

CHAPTER XLVI. Ver. 1. The idols were carried away, either on account of their value as precious metals, or works of art, or trophies of victory—or with the superstitious view of transferring their tutelary favour and protection from Babylon to Persia. C.

Ver. 7. They bear him upon the shoulder. Alluding to the manner in which in heathen—and, alas! that it must be told, to the manner in which, in countries called Christian—images are borne upon men's shoulders in public processions. C.

Ver. 11. Calling a ravenous beast from the east. A golden eagle was the emblematic standard of Cyrus, under which name he is called from Persia, which lay eastward of Jerusalem where the prophecy was delivered. C.

Ver. 13. I bring near my righteousness—not by the deliverance granted by Cyrus, but as 'declaring the end from the beginning,' by the final deliverance to be effected by Messiah. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Desolating strokes clearly manifest the vanity of idols. In every period of the Jewish church and nation God was their protector, supporter, and deliverer: in every period of life he is such to every particular saint; and his former kindness ought to make us hope for further favours. It is only necessary to make use of our reason to observe the absurdity of idol worship; and it becomes us to ponder how wickedly we have acted, if we have joined in it. It is absurd to doubt of God's existence, or to neglect reverencing his almighty power and Godhead, which are so manifest. Firmly fixed are his purposes, and exactly fulfilled in every dispensation of providence; the tumultuous capture of cities and overthrow of nations not excepted. But infinitely great is the mercy, that not the worst of plagues or wickedness can debar us from Jesus Christ and his offered salvation!

CHAPTER XLVII. Ver. 1–5. Glorious and unconquered kingdom of Babylon, bewail thy approaching calamities: thou shalt be reduced very low: thy dignity and authority taken from thee; thy luxury and delicacy shall be exchanged for afflicting straits and oppressing miseries; thy wretched inhabitants shall be reduced to grind at the mills, or to perform other pieces of the basest drudgery, or driven in herds of captives before their cruel conquerors; they shall be exposed to scorn and disgrace in every form. I, the Almighty God and Redeemer of Israel, by the irresistible effects of my just judgment, will render your city and country desolate and miserable. 6–8. Because ye have cruelly murdered and oppressed the Jews, and presumptuously boasted that your empire could never fall, never be equalled in power and wealth, and never want a king and people to defend it. 14, 15. No comfort shall be left you;—and your merchants and hired troops shall flee away to their respective countries.

Ver. 5. The lady of kingdoms. There is a great tendency in all nations to be proud of their capitals, and to bestow upon them great swelling titles: 'lady of kingdoms,' indicating beauty and delicacy! What a name for a heap of rubbish, the habitation of serpents and wild beasts! 'The eternal city,' the fond title of imperial Rome, indicating a certainty of unchangeable splendour! what a name for the ruins that encumber her seven hills, and typify the judgments that are ready to sweep her away! C.

Ver. 9. In a moment in one day. Babylon was of such prodigious strength, and possessed of such resources, both of provisions and men, that Belshazzar and the city and army were engaged in the revelry of a festival: in 'a moment,' and without a blow struck in self-defence, the city was taken, and the kingdom overthrown, about 540 years before the Christian era.—The loss of children. The Babylonians afterwards rebelled against the Persians, and Darius Hystaspes besieged them. For the purpose of prolonging their means of defence, they resolved that all who were incapable of aiding in the defence, including their wives and children, should be put to death. Thus fulfilling, by their own decree and hand, the terrible doom of loss of children which God had denounced against them. C.

Ver. 12. Babylon, during all its history, was the fruitful parent of idolatry, lewdness, and debauchery. These were accompanied with high pretensions to the knowledge of occult sciences, called 'sorceries and enchantments,' Da. 2. 2, by which ignorant and superstitious minds were kept in mental and bodily subjection to a wicked priesthood and tyrannical government. C.

Ver. 13. Astrologers. Judicial astrology, or the pretence of foretelling the future fortunes of children from the position of the planets at the hour of their birth, still holds its place in India; and was at one period very prevalent in Europe, from some parts of which it is scarcely yet completely banished. Such, alas! has been, and continues to be, the folly and the presumption of men! C.

REFLECTIONS.—God delights to abase the proud, and to deal justly with the unmerciful. And, thou shalt be able to profit, if so be thou mayest prevail.

13 Thou[t] art wearied in the multitude of thy counsels. Let now the astrologers,[9] the star-gazers, the monthly prognosticators,[1] stand up and save thee from these things that shall come upon thee.

14 Behold, [u]they shall be as stubble; the fire shall burn them; they shall not deliver themselves[2] from the power of the flame: [v]there shall not be a coal to warm at, nor fire to sit before it.

15 Thus shall they be unto thee with whom thou hast laboured, even [x]thy merchants,[3] from thy youth: [y]they shall wander every one to his quarter; none shall save thee.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

1 God, to convince the people of their foreknown obstinacy, revealed his prophecies. 9 He saveth them for his own sake. 12 He exhorteth them to obedience, because of his power and providence. 16 He lamenteth their disobedience. 20 He sendeth his people out of Babylon.

HEAR ye this, O house of Jacob, which are called[a] by the name of Israel, and [b]are come forth out of the waters of [1]Judah; [c]which swear by the name of the LORD, and make mention of the God of Israel, but [d]not in truth, nor in righteousness.[2]

2 For [e]they call themselves of the [g]holy city, and stay themselves upon the God of Israel; the LORD of hosts is his name.

3 I[h] have declared the former things from the beginning; and they went forth out of my mouth, and I showed them; I did them suddenly, and they came to pass.

4 Because I knew that [i]thou art obstinate,[3] and thy neck is an iron sinew, and thy brow brass;

5 I[j] have even from the beginning declared it to thee; before it came to pass I showed it thee: lest thou shouldest say, Mine idol hath done them; and my graven image, and my molten image, hath commanded them.

6 Thou hast heard, see all this; and [k]will not ye declare[4] it?[5] I have showed thee new things from this time, even [l]hidden things, and thou didst not know them.

7 They are created now, and not from the beginning; even before the day when thou heardest them not;[6] lest thou shouldest say, Behold, I knew them.

8 Yea,[m] thou heardest not; yea, thou knewest not; yea, from that time that thine ear was not opened: for I knew that thou wouldest [o]deal very treacherously, and wast called [p]a transgressor from the womb.

9 ¶ For[q] my name's sake will I defer mine anger, and for my praise will I refrain for thee, that I cut thee not off.

10 Behold,[r] I have refined thee, but not with silver;[7] I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction.

11 For[s] mine own sake, even for mine own sake, will I do it: for how should my name be polluted? and [t]I will not give my glory unto another.

12 ¶ Hearken unto me, O Jacob and Israel, [u]my called: I am he: [v]I am the first, I also am the last.

13 Mine[x] hand also hath laid the foundation of the earth, and my right hand hath [8]spanned the heavens: [y]when I call unto them, they stand up together.

14 All[z] ye, assemble yourselves, and hear; which among them hath declared these things? the LORD hath loved [a]him; he will do his pleasure on Babylon, and his arm shall be on the Chaldeans.

15 I, even I, have spoken; yea, I have called him; [b]I have brought him, and he shall make his way prosperous.

16 ¶ Come ye near unto me, hear ye this; [c]I have not spoken in secret from the beginning; from the time that it was, there am I: and now the Lord GOD and his Spirit [d]hath sent me.[9]

17 Thus saith the LORD, [e]thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; I am the LORD thy God which teacheth thee [g]to profit, [h]which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go.

18 O[i] that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! then had thy peace been as a [1]river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the [2]sea:

19 Thy[j] seed also had been as the sand, and the offspring of thy bowels like the gravel thereof; his [k]name[3] should not have been cut off nor destroyed from before me.

20 ¶ Go[l] ye forth of Babylon, flee ye from the Chaldeans, with a voice of singing declare ye, tell this, utter it even to the end of the earth; say ye, [m]The LORD hath redeemed his servant Jacob.

21 And[o] they thirsted not when he led them

alas! the mightiest nations soon sink under the hand of an angry but righteous God, and the weight of their manifold sins. The very sins in which they had gloried or laboured, or by which they had hoped to save themselves, become the principal causes of their ruin. Yea, the mischiefs which sinners least dreaded often come fatally upon them. And false teachers, who are the instruments in deceiving others, shall themselves feel the heaviest stroke of judgment.

CHAPTER XLVIII. Ver. 1, 2. Hear ye, who boast that you are descendants of Jacob and Judah his most honourable son, and are citizens of Jerusalem, and profess much, though feigned, confidence and dependence on God. 3–8. By foretelling and accomplishing events, I have given you the most undeniable proofs of my true Godhead, because I knew you were so stubborn and untractable. I have even so timed my predictions, as to leave you no ground to pretend that either you or your idols then foresaw the events; for I knew you were so long hardened in perverseness, that you would choose to ascribe your information to any other than to me. 9–11. From regard to the honour of my own perfections, covenant, and promises, I will not utterly destroy you. Nevertheless, in order to purge you from your sins, particularly your gross idolatries, I must try you in a furnace of moderate affliction in Chaldea, and there renew my choice of you for my peculiar people. 14, 15. God manifested his love to Cyrus by employing him in such honourable services, and giving him such prosperous success in destroying the Chaldeans. 16. From the very beginning I have plainly and publicly foretold future events, and have been always ready to fulfil my predictions. And now I am appointed of God to foretell, and in due time to execute, things relative to Cyrus and Babylon, and the redemption prefigured by it. 17–19. I am your divine instructor and leader in what conduces to your peace and prosperity; and if ye had but hearkened to my commandments, your peace, and the prosperity flowing from your piety and virtue, had been abundant and lasting; your children should have been greatly increased; nor should they have been carried captive out of my land. 20, 21. Ye shall certainly be delivered from Babylon, and shall be provided for in your return, ENTRANCE TO THE GARDEN OF THE KNIGHTS OF MALTA—A GLIMPSE OF THE MOST SPLENDID EDIFICE EVER RAISED BY FAITH IN THE CAUSE OF RELIGION. [ISAIAH, xlix:6.]—"And he said, It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel; I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the ends of the earth." Through an open vista made of a tangled labyrinth of trees and flowering shrubs in the garden of the Knights of Malta we have a glimpse of St. Peter's Church at Rome. This structure, conceived in the genius of Michael Angelo, is the most splendid edifice ever lifted by faith in the cause of religion—it is an evidence of the truth of Isaiah's prophecy, and is an expression of the declaration that Christ was to be a light to the Gentiles and to be salvation to the people unto the ends of the earth. This garden stands upon the Aventine Hill, the highest of the seven in Rome.

through the deserts: he caused the waters to flow out of the rock for them; he clave the rock also, and the waters gushed out.

CHAPTER XLIX.

1 Christ, being sent to the Jews, complaineth of them. 5 He is sent to the Gentiles with gracious promises. 13 God's love is perpetual to his church. 18 The ample restoration of the church. 24 The certainty of its deliverance out of captivity.

LISTEN,[a] O isles,[1] unto me; and hearken, ye people, from far; The LORD hath [b]called me from the womb; from the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name.

2 And he [c]hath made my mouth like a sharp sword;[2] in the shadow of his hand hath he [d]hid me, and made me [e]a polished shaft: in his quiver hath he hid me;

3 And said unto me, Thou art [g]my servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified.

4 Then I said, [h]I have laboured in vain, I have spent my strength for nought, and in vain; [i]yet surely my judgment is with the LORD, and my work[3] with my God.

5 ¶ And now, saith the LORD that formed me from the womb to be his servant, [j]to bring Jacob again to him, [k]Though[4] Israel be not gathered, yet [l]shall I be glorious in the eyes of the LORD, and my God shall be my strength.

6 And he said, [5]It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved[6] of Israel; I will also give thee for a [m]light to the Gentiles,[7] that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth.

7 Thus saith the LORD, the Redeemer of Israel, and his Holy One, to him whom man despiseth,[8] to[n] him whom the nation abhorreth, to a servant of rulers, [o]Kings shall see and arise, princes also shall worship, because of the LORD that is faithful, and the Holy One of Israel, and he shall choose thee.

8 Thus saith the LORD, [p]In an acceptable time have I heard thee, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee: and I [q]will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, to establish[9] the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages;

11 And[v] I will make all my mountains a way, and my highways shall be exalted.

12 Behold,[w] these shall come from far; and, lo, these from the north and from the west; and these from the land of Sinim.[1]

13 ¶ Sing,[y] O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; and break forth into singing, O mountains; for the LORD hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted.

14 But Zion said, [z]The LORD hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me.

as well as your fathers were in their departure from Egypt.

Ver. 2. They call themselves of the holy city. And so deceive themselves by taking a name for a reality, external citizenship for internal holiness. Even so, at this day, thousands call Rome 'Holy Mother Church,' and flatter themselves with safety because they assume her name. C.

Ver. 8. A transgressor from the womb. From the day that God called Israel out of Egypt he was a murmurer against God, and speedily forgat his works, and made him a calf in the wilderness, saying, 'These be thy gods, O Israel, who have brought thee out of the land of Egypt.' C.

Ver. 10. I have refined thee, but not with silver. I have refined thee, but tenderly, and but in part; for had I employed all the fire requisite to refine thee 'as silver,' and thoroughly to 'purge away all thy tin,' I must have 'cut thee off' altogether; but 'I have refrained from thee,' that my mercy may be glorified. C.

Ver. 13. When I called unto the heavenly lights at creation, they all took their several places: when I call unto the angels in heaven, they all, and at once, attend as my servants. C.

Ver. 14. The Lord hath loved him. Whom hath he loved? That one who had 'declared these things,' ver. 14, the great Prophet of his church—the Messiah, who, as 'head over all things to the church,' hath done his will on Babylon natural, and shall yet do all his will on Babylon mystical.—Note, This application of the word 'him' will be more fully confirmed in the next chapter. C.

Ver. 20. This prediction relates to the final restoration of Israel, and the separation of the remnants of his church from mystical Babylon, and corresponds to Re. 18. 4. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Of how small avail are all possible connections or appearances in religion, if there be not a work of real grace in the heart! God knows our hearts; and his word is intended to show us our sinful and miserable condition by nature. No providences, whether smiling or severe, can make obstinate sinners practise their duty. But what care God takes to prevent his people's apostasy, and to leave them inexcusable therein; great things will he do either in mercy or judgment for his name's sake. With care and pity he refines his people in the furnace of trouble; and restrains the remainder of his wrath, which would not tend to his praise! His perfections and promises are a sure foundation of deliverance, even when we deserve destruction. Tender and powerful are the instructions of Jesus Christ: and we lose multitudes of blessings by our disobedience to them. It is comfortable and safe to be under his care and protection: but infinitely dangerous to remain obstinate in wickedness amidst all the means of his grace.

CHAPTER XLIX. Ver. 1–6. Let all the Gentile nations know and believe, that God has, from eternity, appointed me, his eternal Son, to be the Saviour of men; and, from my incarnation, has manifested me under that character. By the unmeasured endowment of his Spirit, he has qualified me to speak for the conviction and conversion of men. He has protected and preserved me, and declared me the living head of all the faithful, in whose great and exalted sér-

CHAPTER L.

1 The dereliction of the Jews to be imputed to their own sins, and not to God's inability to save. 4 Christ's commission to speak comfort to the weary: 5 his patient suffering of indignities, 7 and confidence in God's help. 10 An exhortation to trust in God, and not in human resources.

THUS saith the LORD, [a]Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement, whom I have put away? or which of my creditors is it to whom [b]I have sold you? Behold, for your iniquities have [c]ye sold yourselves, and for your transgressions is your mother put away.

2 Wherefore, when I [d]came, was there [e]no man? when I called, was there none to answer? [f]Is my hand shortened at all, that it cannot redeem? or have I no power to deliver? behold, at my rebuke I [h]dry up the sea, I make the rivers a wilderness: their fish stinketh, because there is no water, and dieth for thirst.

3 I [i]clothe the heavens with blackness, and I make sackcloth their covering.

vices he will glorify all his perfections to the highest. And though my ministrations have little success in the conversion of the Jewish nation, God will honourably reward my faithful service, and give me for an Instructor and Saviour to the Gentile world. 7–13. In consequence of my great sacrifice and trouble among the Jews, JEHOVAH will highly exalt me, seasonably grant whatever assistance and protection I need for myself or members, and grant me a living body through the whole world, saved from all their misery and bondage, and richly supplied with the precious and comfortable oracles, ordinances, and blessings of the new kingdom, while both angels and men shall rejoice in their happiness. 14–23. Nor shall the Jews in Babylon, or in their long dispersion, nor the church under Antichrist, have any just reason to doubt of God's continued kindness to and care for them. Delivered from their enemies, and returned to their own country, the Jews shall greatly increase in numbers and abound in prosperity. During their infidelity and dispersion, the vast numbers of Gentiles who enter the church shall more than balance their loss: and at last both Jews and Gentiles shall, in countless multitudes all over the world, be converted to the Lord. 24–26. Nor shall the mightiest devils or persecutors be able to keep them from accepting Christ, since God, as their redeemer, will exert his almighty power in their behalf, and the tremendous overthrow of the wicked.

Ver. 2. This highly figurative passage was designed to be descriptive of the Messiah. His mouth was like a sharp sword, able to give utterance to words of convincing and powerful eloquence, which would penetrate the heart. The figure is carried on into the second member of the verse. The shadow of God's hand is there represented as covering or concealing the sword. It is preserved by divine power, hidden from the eye of the enemy, until the moment comes for action; then it is suddenly drawn forth, and wielded with skill and power. The last clause sets forth the same idea under another figure: an arrow preserved in the quiver until the moment for shooting it arrives. P.

Ver. 3. Israel signifies 'Prevailer with God'—and here is easily, and with certainty, seen to be a specific title of Messiah, and not the national designation of the Jews. The distinction lies in ver. 4: Messiah-Israel had his 'judgment and work' with God: but Israel, the people, were ever a 'stiff-necked and rebellious generation.' C.

Ver. 5. To bring (home again) Jacob, who went out an exile.—Though Israel (a name given on returning) be not gathered; that is, though during a long time Israel shall remain dispersed, 'yet shall I be glorious' in the judgment of their excision for a time, till the Gentiles be 'graffed in'—and finally, 'all Israel shall be saved.' C.

Ver. 7. To him whom man despiseth, &c. To Messiah, 'despised and rejected of men;' and so abhorred of the Jewish nation, that they preferred Barabbas, a robber, and cried out, 'Away with him, away with him: crucify him, crucify him!'—To a servant of rulers. To one led before the tribunal, and condemned by the pusillanimous injustice, not of a native prince, but a foreign ruler. C.

Ver. 8. In an acceptable time, &c. This passage is quoted in 2 Co. 6. 2. Its general meaning is, that in the days of God's power, in a day appointed by him, he would be ready and willing to extend his salvation to mankind through his Son. In the time of the gospel dispensation, under the ministry of Christ's apostles, the Lord would extend his grace and mercy to Jews and Gentiles alike. P.——A covenant. 'A purifier, or a covenant sacrifice.' Purifier seems most agreeable to the scope of the passage.—To establish the earth. Rather, 'to restore the land' to its rightful owners in the 'acceptable time' of the gospel jubilee. C.

Ver. 10. They shall not hunger nor thirst. 'The hunger and thirst' of the Lord's captives is always 'after righteousness,' Mat. 5. 6, for nothing short of 'everlasting righteousness' can satisfy the cravings or sustain the strength of the soul. But now they 'hunger and thirst' no more, for the word of life is in them 'a well of water,' Jn. 4. 14, and their food 'the living bread which came down from heaven,' Jn. 6. 51. C.

Ver. 12. Sinim is said to have been the name of a strong city in Egypt: and may thus represent every city in which Israel had been imprisoned as Joseph, or enslaved as his descendants: the Vulgate translates it 'South Country,' probably in reference to Mat. 8. 11. C.

Ver. 17. 'They that ruined thee shall speedily become thy builders; and they that wasted thy substance shall (by conversion) become thy children.' C.

Ver. 23. While, like all spiritual promises to the Jews, this prophecy is fulfilled to the Christian Gentile church; yet it is obvious from the entire context, that its first application is to the Jews. And little during their long pilgrimage has been to them the 'nursing' of kings and queens. But let not the infidel deride, let not the Christian forget, and let not the Jew despair, the word is spoken, and it will be accomplished. C.

Ver. 26. The restoration of the Jews will take place in the midst of terrible intestine commotions, not necessarily in all Gentile nations, but in all that shall oppress them, as Egypt did, and oppose their return, either from motives of jealousy or self-interest. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What important truths are notified to men by the gospel of Christ! And great is the mercy that the Gentiles have so deep concern in it, and such abundant access to know and receive it. Enlarged gifts and grace are necessary to qualify men for the ministry. And exalted ought to be their ends, earnest their care, and assiduous their labour in winning souls to Christ. Glorious and certain shall be the reward of their faithful service, even though it should not have the wished success with men. But infinite is the mercy of God, in calling his own Son to his mediatorial office, and qualifying him for it;—in freely giving him for us as a Ransom, and to us as an effectual Saviour! By it JEHOVAH's declarative glory, and the everlasting happiness of men, are wonderfully advanced. Alas! that ever he should be rejected, and his grace received in vain;—that his salvation, so extensive and suitable, should be so undervalued and refused!—In accordance with his love, God enlightens the mind, looses the bonds, supplies the wants, protects the persons, comforts the hearts, and makes plain the paths of the people. His work of redemption, his saving of men, demands our highest praise: and the assurances of his constant and everlasting kindness, and his promises to remove everything hurtful, give ground of encouragement to the most despondent. Thrice pleasant is it to behold the church extending her limits, and mightily increasing her members; and to discern how almighty power and grace protects and blesses it, notwithstanding all opposition!

CHAPTER L. Ver. 1. In reply to the objection that the casting off of the Israelites was a proof of want of faithfulness or caprice on the part of Jehovah, the true cause of it is here alleged. The Israelites were rejected and punished because of gross sin and open rebellion. God had dealt with them in mercy, he had spared them long, he had saved them by wondrous interpositions of supernatural power; but they had manifested the greatest ingratitude. P.——Where is the bill, &c. God's covenant with his church is often represented as a marriage-contract, see particularly Ho. 2. 2, 19, 20; and the progress of grace, together with the final glory of the church, as a marriage, Mat. 22. 1–14; Re. 21. 9.—Sold. The persons and liberties of their children were, according to the divine law, answerable for the debts of their fathers, 2 Ki. 4. 1; Mat. 19. 7. C.

Ver. 2. When I came. The Lord here speaks in continuation of the former verse—even the WORD that was with God, and was God. And he speaks of that time when, being 'made flesh, he dwelt among us;' when he 'came unto his own, and his own received him not,' Jn. 1. 11. C.

Ver. 4. The Lord God hath given me, &c. 'The LORD GOD' (Adonai Jehovah), The FATHER, hath given me (his co-eternal WORD, his SON, 'God manifest in the flesh'), 'the tongue of the learned,' the 'learned' in the 'deep things of God,' his nature, his eternal purpose of grace, according to 'the counsel of his own will,' his work of redemption by substitution and sacrifice, and his victory over death by resurrection to glory. C.

Ver. 7. Set my face like a flint. As the flint endures the stroke of the steel, and yields its best service (fire) to him that smites it—even so did Messiah endure, unshrinking, the strokes of those that hated him, and yielded but tears of compassion and intercessory prayers in return for the ingratitude that cried 'Away with him!' the injustice that condemned him, and the cruelty that crucified him. C.

Ver. 10. That walketh in darkness. The only real darkness lies in ignorance of one point, 'What must I do to be saved?' Within the name of Jesus lies the only answer; from it emanates the only light, Jn. 1. 12; Ac. 16. 31. C.

Ver. 11. Walk in the light of your fire. This is neither an advice nor a permission, but a judicial sentence, and with this warning, instead of joy, 'ye shall lie down in sorrow.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—How common is it, but as absurd, for self-ruined, and even obstinate sinners, to lay the blame of their misery on God; who is infinitely able and ready to save!—Yea, infinite is the fitness of Jesus Christ to instruct, quicken, and comfort our souls. Great was the cheerfulness and boldness with which he endured the suffering, and performed the obedience, necessary in the work of our redemption. Wonderful was the pleasure of JEHOVAH in assisting, supporting, and honouring him in it: and infinite is his tenderness towards distressed and disconsolate souls, and his indignation against presumptuous sinners. Never let me pretend to teach others till God has taught myself. And embracing every opportunity of fellowship with him, let me always act in his service under the influence of a gracious good-will to it. Never let me shrink at doing or suffering for Jesus Christ, who has done and suffered so much for me. In every difficulty of work or warfare, let me firmly believe that he will

HOUSES OF DIVES AND LAZARUS—BESIDE THE ROAD CHRIST WALKED OVER TO HIS CRUCIFIXION. [ISAIAH, 1:6.]—"I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from shame and spitting." The houses of Dives and Lazarus make up a station in the Via Dolorosa. The Via Dolorosa is the gloomy and sad way over which our Savior walked to Calvary. It begins with the Palace of Pilate, which is now the Governor's serai. Over one of the buildings on this way the Scala Santa or staircase leading to the judgment hall stood until removed by Constantine to the basilica of Saint John Lateran, in Rome. We have along this way the Church of the Flagelation, or the Church of the Crowning with Thorns, the arch of Ecce Homo, Convent of the Sisters of Zion, and at the bottom of the valley, the house of Dives. Pilgrims who visit Jerusalem during the Easter weeks make it a point to pass over and meditate along this sad way.

CHAPTER LI.

1 An exhortation, after the pattern of Abraham, to trust in Christ, by reason of his comfortable promises, 4 of his righteous salvation, 7 and man's mortality. 9 Christ by his sanctified arm defendeth his from the fear of man. 17 The prophet bewaileth the afflictions of Jerusalem, 21 and promiseth deliverance.

HEARKEN to me, [a]ye that follow after righteousness, ye that [b]seek the LORD: look unto [c]the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged.[1]

2 Look[d] unto Abraham your father, and unto Sarah that bare you: for I called [e]him alone, and blessed him, and increased him.

3 For[g] the LORD shall comfort Zion: he will comfort all her waste places, and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the LORD; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody.

4 ¶ Hearken unto me, [h]my people, and give ear unto me, O my nation: for [i]a law shall proceed from me, and I [j]will make my judgment to rest for a light of the people.

5 My[k] righteousness is near; my salvation is gone forth, and mine arms shall judge the people: [l]the isles shall wait upon me, and on mine arm shall they trust.

6 Lift up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath; for [m]the heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment, and they that dwell therein shall die in like manner:[2] but [o]my salvation shall be for ever, and my righteousness shall not be abolished.

7 ¶ Hearken unto me, ye that [p]know righteousness, the people [q]in whose heart is my law; [r]fear ye not the reproach of men, neither be ye afraid of their revilings.

8 For[s] the moth shall eat them up like a garment, and the worm shall eat them like wool: [t]but my righteousness shall be for ever, and my salvation from generation to generation.

9 ¶ Awake,[u] awake, put on strength, O [3]arm of the LORD; awake, as [v]in the ancient days, in the generations of old. Art thou not it that hath cut Rahab,[4] and [z]wounded the dragon?[5]

10 Art thou not it which [y]hath dried the sea, the waters of the great deep; that hath made the depths of the sea a way for the ransomed to pass over?

11 Therefore[z] the redeemed of the LORD shall return, and come with singing unto Zion; and everlasting joy shall be upon their head: they shall obtain gladness and joy; and sorrow and mourning shall flee away.[6]

12 ¶ I,[a] even I, am he that comforteth you: who art thou, that thou [b]shouldest be afraid of a man that shall die, and of the son of man which shall be made [c]as grass;

do great things for me. In deeps, in nights of desertion, temptation, trouble, and grief, let me never fear, but only believe that, while I sit in darkness, the Lord will be a light unto me, and will bring me to the light. And let me stand in awe, lest confidence in my own wisdom and righteousness should entail upon me everlasting damnation.

CHAPTER LI. Ver. 1–3. The God who delivered Abraham from among his idolatrous friends, and, contrary to every natural appearance, made him and Sarah the parents of millions, can easily make you to flourish after your captivity in Canaan, and can easily form for himself a flourishing gospel church in the world. 4–8. The gospel, authorized by God, shall be published; and the ordinances of it, established and attended by his power, shall be effectual for converting men to Christ, and for revealing and bestowing upon them his everlasting righteousness and salvation. 9–16. The almighty power of God, which plagued the Egyptians and divided the Red Sea, shall bring the Jews from Babylon and their present dispersion with great joy, and deliver the church from heathenish or antichristian oppressors.—And for your comfort against the threatened fury of oppressors, the almighty Creator has given you his promises, and has protected you, that he may re-establish you as his church and people; and has raised up and qualified Jesus Christ in order to the erection and establishment of the gospel church. 17–23. Let not therefore the Jews, or the Christian church, despair under the terrible and destructive, and even stupifying judgments of God inflicted upon them: he will, in his proper time, deliver them, and execute judgment upon the Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, Romans, Antichristians, and Turks, who cruelly oppressed them.

Ver. 1. Righteousness is exactly equivalent to obedience; that is, perfect, not partial, obedience. This will appear evident from comparing 'the gift of righteousness,' Ro. 5. 17, with 'the obedience of one,' whereby 'many are made righteous,' Ro. 5. 19.—Note, It is of the utmost importance in theology to observe, that it is through this 'righteousness,' and this righteousness alone, that 'grace reigns unto (the exhibition and bestowment of) eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.' Grace ascends the throne of mercy only by the steps of righteousness.—Look unto the rock, &c. Israel, in his origin, is reminded that he was, for hardness, as a stone hewed out of a rock; and for filthiness, as clay digged out of a pit. C.

Ver. 5. My righteousness is near—even so near, that it is 'unto all, and upon all them that do believe,' Ro. 3. 22; yea, so near, as to dwell within the very heart of every believer, Ro. 10. 6–10. C.

Ver. 7. My law. This law in the heart is the promise of the new covenant established in Jesus as Mediator, and which is rendered effectual through free grace in justification, He. 6. 12. —Fear ye not the reproach, &c. How strange that free grace has ever been the subject of reproach and reviling! nay, of persecution unto death! Yet how glorious when persecuted believers can say, 'Being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it.' And without this 'mind that was in Jesus,' we are 'none of his,' Ro. 8. 9. C.

Ver. 11. This prediction indicates a time still future; for though there have been restorations with joy, as under Cyrus and Artaxerxes, there has yet been no 'everlasting joy.' See Re. 21. 4. C.

Ver. 14. Die in the pit. Casting into a deep pit, with a little food, was an ancient mode of punishment; thus inflicting a slow and proportionally cruel death. It may here be also an allusion that[t] hath stretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth; and [h]hast feared continually every day because of the fury of the oppressor, as if he were ready[8] to destroy? and where[i] is the fury of the oppressor?

14 The captive exile hasteneth that he may be loosed, and that he should not die [j]in the pit, nor that his bread should fail.

15 But I am the LORD thy God, that [k]divided the sea, whose waves roared: The LORD of hosts is his name.

16 And [l]I have put my words in thy mouth, and I have covered thee in the shadow of mine hand, that [m]I may plant the heavens, and lay the foundations of the earth, and say unto Zion, Thou art my people.

17 ¶ Awake,[o] awake, stand up, O Jerusalem, which hast drunk at the hand of the LORD the cup[p] of his fury: thou hast drunken the dregs of the cup of trembling, and wrung them out.[9]

18 There[q] is none to guide her among all the sons whom she hath brought forth; neither is there any that taketh her by the hand of all the sons that she hath brought up.

19 These[r] two things[1] are come[2] unto thee; who shall be sorry for thee? desolation, and destruction,[3] and the famine, and the sword: by whom shall I comfort thee?

20 Thy[s] sons have fainted, they lie at the head of all the streets, as a wild bull in a net: they[t] are full of the fury of the LORD, the rebuke of thy God.

21 ¶ Therefore, hear now this, thou afflicted, and drunken, but not with wine:

22 Thus saith [u]thy Lord the LORD, and thy God that pleadeth the cause of his people, [v]Behold, I have taken out of thine hand the cup of trembling, even the dreg of the cup of my fury; thou shalt no more drink it again:[4]

23 But [z]I will put it into the hand of them that afflict thee; which have said to thy soul, Bow[y] down, that we may go over: and thou hast laid thy body as the ground, and as the street, to them that went over.[5]

[5] This chapter, with the first twelve verses of ch. liii., forms a connected passage of exquisite beauty. It is in part designed to be an introduction to the description of the person and work of the Messiah which follows. It is dramatic in form. The scene is laid in Babylon. The time is near the close of the captivity. The persons are the Lord and his people, who address each other alternately, God giving comfort and consolation, and the people pleading for deliverance.—P.

5 Now, therefore, [i]what have I here, saith the LORD, that my people is taken away for nought? they that rule over them make them to howl, saith the LORD; and my name continually every day is [j]blasphemed.

Ver. 18. One of God's greatest mercies is the raising up of men distinguished by knowledge, sagacity, prudence, courage, and piety, as guides to a church or a nation. Such was Moses, such was David in Israel, such was Paul in the primitive church, such many of the glorious band of reformers—mighty minds, receiving their character from God's Spirit, and enstamping that character upon their own and after ages. C.

REFLECTIONS—The perfections, relations, gracious promises, and providences of God are an infinite source of consolation to the saints. With ease he accomplishes the most remarkable events in mercy. And yet it is hard to make those who are in anguish of spirit to hearken to his words of comfort, or to review what he has done for them, either for their humiliation or encouragement, or for their excitement to holiness. How strangely God connects his mercies and his judgments! But there is little reason to regard either the reproaches or terrors of wicked men, when JEHOVAH and his blessings are ours, and near to us. And quickly will our waiting, weeping, and working for him, be graciously rewarded with unutterable and everlasting joys. How easily can JEHOVAH renew and restore souls, and form and re-establish churches, by the word of his power! But terrible are even his paternal chastisements. And unfaithfulness to him is often punished by the unfaithfulness of our relations to us. By sinfully quarrelling with his providences we but entangle and torment ourselves. None can comfort when God wounds us. But though he cause grief, he will have compassion. Whom he loveth he will love unto the end. And if judgments begin at the house of God, where shall the ungodly sinner and persecutor appear?

CHAPTER LII. Ver. 1–6. Rejoice, ye Jews, in hopes of being graciously delivered from your heathen oppressors and corrupters without any ransom, even as you have already been from the Egyptians and the Assyrians. And as I get nothing by your misery but blasphemous reproaches, as if I could not, or cared not, visage[z] was so marred more than any man, and his form more than the sons of men;

15 So[y] shall he sprinkle many nations: the kings shall [a]shut their mouths at him:[8] for that which[a] had not been told them shall they see, and that which they had not heard shall they consider.

WHO hath[a] believed our [1]report?[2] and to whom is [b]the arm of the LORD revealed?[3]

2 For he [c]shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

3 He[d] is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and [4]we hid as it were our faces from him;[5] he was despised, and we esteemed him not.

4 ¶ Surely [e]he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet [g]we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.

5 But he was [h]wounded[6] for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace[7] was upon him; and with his stripes[8] we are healed.

to deliver you, I will make you quickly to experience the fulfilment of all my promises. And in like manner rejoice, thou gospel church, in hopes of thy extension, purification, and deliverance from every enemy, heathen, Popish, or Mahometan. 7–12. Great joy and harmony, hearty renunciation of idols, and a composed return of the Jews to their own land, shall be produced by the proclamation of Cyrus, and the Lord's powerful appearance for their relief; and much more by the publication of the gospel by Jesus Christ and his apostles, and by the effectual redemption of multitudes from heathenism, Popery, Satan, and their own lusts, by an ascended Redeemer. 13–15. The infinitely well-qualified Messiah, in consequence of his inexpressible ignominy, debasement, and suffering, shall be highly exalted as Head over all things to his church; and shall, by his Word, his Spirit, and blood, purify multitudes of sinful Gentiles from their iniquities; and even kings, and other great ones, shall with reverence hear his gospel truths, which had been hid from former generations, and shall submit to his laws.

Ver. 1. Put on thy strength. The only strength of the church is Christ, whom spiritually she puts on, as armour for defence and garments for beauty, Ro. 13. 12, 14; Ga. 3. 27; Ep. 4. 24; 6. 11. C.

Ver. 3, 4. The passage is elliptical. Its general object is to prove that God, as he had delivered his people in days past, when in imminent danger, so he would deliver them now. Barnes has given the following paraphrase, which brings out the full sense:—'Ye have been sold for nought, and ye shall be ransomed without price. As a proof that God can do it, and will do it, remember, says he, that my people went down formerly to Egypt, and designed to sojourn there for a little time, and that they were there reduced to slavery, and oppressed by Pharaoh, but that I ransomed them without money, and brought them forth by my own power. Remember also how often the Assyrian has oppressed them without cause. Remember the history of Sennacherib, and Tiglath-pileser, and Shalmaneser, and how they have laid the land waste; and remember, also, how the Lord has delivered it from these oppressors. With the same certainty and the same ease he can deliver the people from the captivity of Babylon.' P.

Ver. 5. My name . . . is blasphemed. Either by the heathen exulting in their victory over Israel, as Sennacherib did in his pride, and saying, 'Where is your God?' 2 Ki. 18. 22, 30, 33–35; 19. 10; or by the irreligious conduct of the Jews, who, while professing zeal for the law, did, through breaking of that law, bring dishonour and blasphemy upon the holy name of their God, Ro. 2. 23, 24. C.

Ver. 7. This is the exclamation of the 'watchmen,' ver. 8, announcing the Prince of Peace, whose 'feet' alone they describe; those feet 'like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace,' Re. 1. 15, emblem of that furnace of affliction, ch. 48. 10, in which his church is to be melted, and by his Spirit purified from her dross. C.

Ver. 11. Go ye out from thence. Whence? From 'Egypt,' from 'the dust,' ver. 2, 4, from 'the nations, the ends of the earth,' ver. 10, into which they had been scattered. A similar exhortation is extended by St. Paul to the Gentile church, to come out from the idolatry of the world, 2 Co. 6. 17, and by St. John to come out from the mystical Babylon, Re. 18. 4—all progressive parts of the same glorious march of prophecy.—Be ye clean, &c. These are the priests, the Levites being interdicted from 'coming nigh the 'vessels' of the sanctuary,' Nu. 18. 3. But now all believers being 'kings and priests,' Re. 1. 6, are here exhorted to cleanse the vessels in which they bear the Lord's treasure, 2 Co. 4. 7. C.

Ver. 12. The God of Israel—not of Israel the people, but of Israel 'the prevailer with God,' prevailer by sacrifice and intercession—'the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.' See ch. 49. 3; Ro. 15. 16; Ep. 1. 17. C.

Ver. 13. These three verses (13–15) are closely connected with ch. liii. They constitute a portion of the same grand prophecy. The sense is greatly marred by their being placed at the close of this chapter, and separated from that which follows. From the deliverance of Israel from the Babylonish captivity, the prophet passes to a greater and far more glorious deliverance—that of his people from the captivity of sin by the atoning work of the Messiah. P.

Ver. 14. There is a want of grammatical correspondence, and consequent obscurity, in the translation of this verse. 'As' requires either another 'as' to follow, or a 'so' to correspond, expressed or understood. May not this be rectified by placing the 'so' where it stands in the Hebrew, at the commencement of the second clause? And is not the meaning as follows:—'As many were astonished at thee,' O Jerusalem, ver. 9, when thy visage was marred in the dust, and thy form in chains, ver. 2, 'so his (my servant's) visage was marred more than any man,' &c. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's grace and our duty, his glory and our salvation, are marvellously connected. Both saints and sinners ought to bestir themselves when he offers deliverance. And thrice happy is the church when she is duly separated from the world, which lieth in wickedness. And yet how averse are many to partake of this blessedness: how averse to accept of an offered deliverance from corrupt lusts, or from corrupt societies and synagogues of Satan! But blessed are the effects of Jesus' gospel and government in the world, powerful the influence of his offices and states, and gracious the manifestation of his person, sufferings, and glory for the conviction of the most hardened sinners.

CHAPTER LIII. Ver. 1–3. How few truly believe the gospel record concerning Jesus Christ! How few experience his gracious power, or behold his heart-captivating glory;—who, in his humbled estate, under the special care and protection of JEHOVAH, sprung from the humble family of David in the likeness of sinful flesh without any external glory or pomp—and was all along oppressed with miseries and griefs, and quiet contemned and hated by men, especially the Jewish rulers and people! 4–9. But notwithstanding our reckoning him persecuted by God as a notorious criminal, he as our Saviour, by whom it had pleased the Lord to pardon our iniquities, suffered, in the most patient manner, because of our manifold sins, that he might expiate them, and secure our eternal salvation:—to manifest which JEHOVAH not only allotted him honourable interment, but quickly released him from his grave, and made him the mediatorial Parent of all who believed in his blessed name, in that very age so remarkable for wickedness. 10–12. In consequence of bearing our iniquities, and the sufferings thereof, which our Father, in love to us, inflicted upon him in his soul and body, that he might thereby make full atonement for our sin, he is rewarded with everlasting life and honour; and has, to his infinite satisfaction, a living church of Jewish and Gentile converts, whom he instructs, and through his own sacrifice, justifies and saves. And while he is enthroned far above all principalities and powers, he erects, extends, and establishes his spiritual kingdom on earth, and his kingdom of glory in heaven.

Ver. 1. The main object of the sacred writer in this whole prophecy is to set forth the glorious person and work of the Messiah. To do this effectually, the mode in which his glory was exhibited and his work accomplished during his incarnation must be described. Hence it is necessary to exhibit the depth of his humiliation. One part of his humiliation consisted in his being despised and rejected of men. 'He came unto his own, and his own received him not.' The reality of his advent and of his mission was denied by the Jews. It is this sad fact which the prophet predicted in the opening words of this chapter. P.—Our report. The report of the 'sprinkled nations,' both Jewish and Gentile believers, ch. 42. 15, who declared what they 'both had seen and heard of the WORD OF LIFE,' 1 Jn. 1. 1–3. C.

Ver. 2. Before him—before the Lord. Plant—a scion or sucker, a descendant of a reduced family. When we shall see him—both Jews and Gentiles, nations and kings, ch. 42. 15. C.

Ver. 3. We hid as it were our faces. 'As one that hideth his face from us' Lowth', in shame and grief, as mourners were wont to do. See 2 Sa. 15. 30; Eze. 24. 17. C.

Ver. 8. 'From imprisonment and judgment was he taken away, and who shall bear witness to his genealogy,' whereby, as 'son of David,' he is heir of the throne at Jerusalem: as 'Son of God,' heir of all things. 'Therefore (because there was none to witness the truth or judge righteously) he was cut off,' &c. C.—This is a passage of very great difficulty. The explanations given of it by commentators are widely different. Perhaps the following may be its true meaning:—He, the Messiah, was quickly taken away to execution after a short confinement and a formal, though unjust, official trial. Yet who, among those by whom he was there surrounded (his generation), considered that he was cut off from the land of the living—that he was smitten for the transgression of my people? The idea is, that neither the injustice of his sentence, nor the great object of his sufferings and his death, excited the least thought among those who saw him. With reckless indifference he was seized, beaten, tried, condemned, and crucified. P.

Ver. 10. When thou shalt make, &c. 'When thou (O Jerusalem, ch. 52. 14, that killest the prophets, Mat. 23. 37) shalt make his soul (through false witness and false judgment, ver. 8) an offering for sin.'—He (my risen servant) shall see his seed—his spiritual children. C.

Ver. 11. By his knowledge, &c. 'By the knowledge of him (or himself, i. e. the Messiah) shall he, my righteous Servant (the Messiah), justify many.' The idiom is Hebrew, and is very expressive. The term 'knowledge' denotes a full acquaintance with Christ and his saving plan. It is the same idea which the apostle Paul brings out in Phi. 3. 10. 'That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death.' Christ himself says, 'This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent,' Jn. 17. 3. P.

Ver. 12. Therefore will I divide, &c. 'Therefore will I give him the multitudes for his portion, and the mighty for his spoil'—his spiritual trophies of victory and reward: multitudes of every people converted and brought to glory; Satan and the grave vanquished and spoiled. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! that Jesus Christ and his gospel should be so little known to the hearers of it! But nothing less than almighty grace can make us either know or believe in him. God exactly verified his predictions and promises in the whole sacrifice and exaltation of our Redeemer. Though carnal apprehensions of him lead men to contemn, reject, and blaspheme him, infinite was his love in undertaking, obeying, and suffering the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God! How great was our Father's love in sending him to us, and placing our burdens on his infinitely well beloved, his only begotten Son! And sweet, full, firm, and lasting is that forgiveness, that redemption, which comes through the blood, the intercession of God in our nature, and from JEHOVAH'S infinite and unchangeable love. In the ratified promises of the new kingdom, an extensive and firm foundation is laid for that faith by which we do and must receive Jesus Christ, as made of God to us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption. And the rewards of our obedience of faith are all gloriously wrapped up in the blessed reward of Jesus Christ!

CHAPTER LIV. Ver. 1–5. Rejoice greatly, ye Gentiles, who have hitherto produced few converts to Christ; for now greater multitudes of you shall be born again than ever were in the Jewish church: greater multitudes shall be converted to Christ after his departure to heaven, than while his church enjoyed his bodily presence. The gospel church, that tabernacle of God, shall be greatly enlarged by the conversion of Gentile nations on every side. No more shall they be reproached, as rejected by and strangers to God: for now shall the divine Jesus and his Father call to himself a peculiar people in all places of the world. 6–10. And however destitute and wretched in themselves, despicable in their first appearances, or distressed and per-

WHEAT MARKET, NAZARETH—WHERE CHRIST GREW UP. [ISAIAH, liii.]—"Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground." The fifty-third chapter of Isaiah is by all authorities conceded to refer to the sufferings of Christ. We give a view of the wheat market in Nazareth, the town in which Christ grew up. The scene such as we witness above has been one common doubtless in all ages of the town's history. Nazareth is upon a hill overlooking the valley of Esdraelon, which has been always noted for its fertility and its abundant harvests of wheat. Every place, and scene, and street, and hill, and rock in the town where the Savior spent thirty years of his life, is interesting. Large and rich life only can render a town significant and influential.

LORD hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.[9]

7 He[1] was oppressed, and he was afflicted,[2] yet [k]he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb[3] to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

8 He was [l]taken from prison and from judgment; and[4] who shall declare his generation?[5] for he was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was he stricken.[6]

9 And he[7] made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich [8]in his death;[9] because he had done no violence,[1] neither was any [m]deceit in his mouth.

10 ¶ Yet[o] it pleased the LORD to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin,[2] he[p] shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the [q]pleasure of the LORD shall prosper in his hand.

11 He [r]shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: [s]by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities.

12 Therefore[t] will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath poured out his soul unto death; and he [u]was numbered with the transgressors; and he bare the sin of many, and [v]made intercession for the transgressors.

1 This is a glorious promise. It is given to the true church, and history shows that it has hitherto been graciously fulfilled. The substance of the promise is, that no persecution or suffering would ever be permitted to overwhelm or desolate the church, as the flood overwhelmed the earth, or as the Babylonians and Romans desolated Jerusalem. The Lord in the greatness of his mercy has confirmed this with an oath.—P.

5 For [e]thy Maker is thine husband; the LORD of hosts is his name; and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel; [f]the God of the whole earth shall he be called.

6 For [h]the LORD hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit, and a wife of youth, when thou wast refused, saith thy God.

7 For [i]a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I [j]gather thee.

8 In [k]a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but [l]with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the LORD thy Redeemer.

9 For [m]this is as the waters of Noah unto me: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee.[1]

10 For [o]the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, [p]neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the LORD that [q]hath mercy on thee.

11 ¶ O[r] thou afflicted, tossed with tempest, and not comforted, behold, [s]I will lay thy stones with fair colours, and lay thy foundations with sapphires.

12 And I will make thy windows of agates, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleasant stones.

13 And [t]all thy children shall be taught of the LORD; and [u]great shall be the peace of thy children.

14 In[v] righteousness shalt thou be established: thou shalt be far from oppression; for [w]thou shalt not fear: and from terror; for it shall not come near thee.

15 ¶ Behold,[y] they shall surely gather together, but not by me:[2] whosoever shall gather together against thee shall fall for thy sake.[3]

16 Behold,[z] I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, and that bringeth forth an instrument for his work;[4] and I have created the waster to destroy.

secuted in after-ages, as the Jewish church was during the captivity in Babylon and the Syro-Grecian persecution, yet if they are faithful I will withdraw my affectionate regard, but, after occasional frowns, still manifest new tokens of my favour. 11–17. Notwithstanding her terrible distress, persecution, and inward perplexities, I will render her glorious in oracles, ordinances, gifts and graces, officers and members, and in spiritual knowledge, peace, and holiness; and in due time will grant full deliverence, and overthrow the wicked, spiritual and temporal, heathen, Popish, or Mahometan; and that graciously, through my own sacrifice made in behalf of the world.

Ver. 1. O barren. The church under the emblem of the childless and disconsolate Sarah (see Ga. 4. 22–27) is here exhorted to a song of joy at the birth of a numerous family of regenerate souls born 'again of water and of the Spirit.'—More are the children of the desolate. Hitherto the unconverted have been most numerous in the world, but here is a blessed promise of a time yet to come, and it will be realized when the children of grace shall outnumber the unconverted, when the knowledge of the Lord shall yet cover the earth, as the waters cover the sea. C.

Ver. 3. Thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles. Our LORD was of the seed of Abraham according to the flesh; and, as head over his church, and heir of all things, inherits the Gentiles. C.

Ver. 4. Youth. The murmurings and idolatries of the wilderness.—Widowhood. Periods of captivity: but especially the exile and scattering that speedily succeeded their national rejection of Christ. C.

Ver. 5. 'Thy Makers, thy Husbands.' These words set forth the glorious doctrine of the Trinity, all things being 'made' by the WORD in union with the FATHER and the HOLY SPIRIT. C.

Ver. 6. A wife of youth, when thou wast refused. As Ruth was refused by the next of kin, according to the law, De. 24. 5–10; Ru. 4. 1–8, even so the world, to which the backslider has turned for comfort and protection, refuses it; and when, through grace, the backslider 'comes to himself,' he is accepted of God. See Ho. 2. 7; Lu. 15. 17. C.

Ver. 10. The mighty empires which I have granted for a time to Babylon, Greece, and Rome, shall depart, yea, 'the earth itself shall be burned up,' but my covenant of peace in Jesus shall abide for ever, 1 Pe. 3. 10. C.

Ver. 11. Though tossed as a vessel on a tempestuous sea, Mat. 8. 23–27, I will bring you safely to land, and build for you a glorious dwelling on a sure foundation, 1 Co. 3. 11; Ep. 2. 20; Re. 21. 19. C.

Ver. 14. The 'righteousness' in which the church is established, is no other than 'the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all, and upon all, them that do believe,' Ro. 3. 22. C.

This is the heritage of the servants of the LORD;
and [c]their righteousness is of me, saith the LORD.

CHAPTER LV.

1 The prophet, with the promises of Christ, exhorteth to faith, 6 and to repentance. 8 The happy state of them that believe.

HO, every[a] one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money, and [b]without price.

2 Wherefore[c] do ye spend[1] money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not? hearken [d]diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness.

3 Incline your ear, and come unto me: [e]hear, and your soul shall live; and [g]I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David.

4 Behold, [h]I have given him for [i]a witness to the people, [j]a leader and commander to the people.

5 Behold, thou [k]shalt call a nation that [l]thou knowest not; and nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee, [m]because of the LORD thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee.

6 ¶ Seek[o] ye the LORD while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near.

7 Let[p] the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man[2] his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him: and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.[3]

8 ¶ For[q] my thoughts are not your thoughts,[4] neither are your ways my ways, saith the LORD.

9 For[r] as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.

10 For as the rain cometh down, and the snow, from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater;

11 So[s] shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void; but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it.

12 For [t]ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands.

13 Instead[u] of the thorn shall come up the fir-tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle-tree: and it shall be to the LORD [v]for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not

CHAPTER LVI.

1 The prophet exhorteth to sanctification. 3 God promiseth it shall be general without respect of persons. 9 He inveigheth against blind watchmen.

THUS saith the LORD, [a]Keep ye [1]judgment, and do justice: for my salvation is near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed.

2 Blessed[b] is the man that doeth this, and the son of man that layeth hold on it; that [c]keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and keepeth his hand from doing any evil.

3 ¶ Neither [d]let the son of the stranger, that hath joined himself to the LORD, speak, saying,
The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people: neither [e]let the eunuch say, Behold, I am a dry tree.

4 For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs
[g]that keep my sabbaths, and choose the things that please me, and [h]take hold of my covenant;

5 Even[h] unto them will I give in [i]mine house, and within my walls, a place[2] and [j]a name better than of sons and of daughters: I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off.

6 Also the sons of the stranger, that [k]join themselves to the LORD, to serve him, and [l]to love the name of the LORD, to be his servants, [m]every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and [o]taketh hold of my covenant;

7 Even them will I [p]bring to my holy mountain, and make them joyful in my house of prayer;
their burnt-offerings and their sacrifices shall be accepted upon mine altar: for [q]mine house shall be called an house of prayer for all people.

8 The Lord GOD, which [r]gathereth the outcasts of Israel, saith, [s]Yet will I gather others to him, beside those that are gathered[3] unto him.

9 ¶ All[t] ye beasts of the field, come to devour: yea, all ye beasts in the forest.

10 His watchmen are [u]blind; they are all ignorant, they are all [v]dumb dogs, they cannot bark; sleeping,[4] lying down, loving to slumber.

11 Yea, [x]they are greedy[5] dogs which can never have enough,[6] and they are [y]shepherds

Ver. 17. This promise of deliverance, instruction, and protection, is the heritage of the Lord's servants, Ps. 119. 111. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Wretched was the state of religion in the world for many ages before Christianity was established. And great power in God, and care in men, are necessary for spreading the gospel and enlarging the church. But surely it is much to be lamented that some who have most of the means have least of the power of grace. It is great matter of joy to the long-rejected Gentiles that Jesus, our Maker, is now our God and our Husband, able to save us to the uttermost. May we ever walk as his bride, loving, cleaving to, and trusting in him! He condescends to our wretchedness in dealing with our souls. And wisely he mingles his favours and frowns, that we may neither be proud under the one nor despair under the other. But there is great matter of joy, and sure ground of faith, in the absolute unchangeableness of his love and promise of peace. Graciously he remarks his people's distresses, and balances them with his mercies unnumbered. His instructions graciously render us pious and peaceful. And safe are those, amidst millions of enemies, who trust implicity with all their hearts in Christ, and JEHOVAH, the manager of the world, in him their protector, and the gracious Lord of all mankind.

CHAPTER LV. Ver. 1–5. Ye sinners of mankind, who are not, but wish to be, happy, come ye, however guilty or polluted, to the ordinances of the gospel, and by faith freely receive all the blessings and privileges graciously offered in it. Why do ye lay out your gifts, parts, and opportunities in pursuit of worldly enjoyments, superstitious devotions, or self-righteousness, which can afford you no solid satisfaction? Carefully listen to and believe my gospel offers and invitations; and let your souls with pleasure receive and live on the substantial, satisfying, strengthening, and sanctifying blessings therein conferred. By faith embrace these offers, as the means of your spiritual and eternal life; and I will establish with you the everlasting promise of grace, which contains, bequeaths, and insures all the free blessings promised to David; but secured by and lodged in Jesus Christ for the salvation of miserable sinners! Behold with faith, love and admira-

INTERIOR OF THE HOUSE OF ANANIAS—WHERE ANANIAS LIVED, WHO WAS DIRECTED TO INQUIRE FOR SAUL IN THE HOUSE OF JUDAS. [ISAIAH, lv: 5.]—"Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not; and nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee, because of the Lord thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee." Near the east gate of Damascus there stands the traditional house of Ananias. Ananias was the disciple of Christ in Damascus who was directed to inquire for Saul in the house of Judas at the time of the apostle's conversion. This is said to stand upon the site of the house in which Ananias lived. It is fitted up now for a kind of church. We use this picture to illustrate the fifty-fifth chapter of Isaiah, because St. Paul was the great apostle to the Gentiles, through whose ministry outlying and foreign nations were to be brought to the Holy One of Israel.

12 Come ye, say they, [a]I will fetch wine,[7] and we will fill ourselves with strong drink; and to-morrow shall be as this day, and much more abundant.

CHAPTER LVII.

1 The blessed death of the righteous. 3 God reproveth the Jews for their whorish idolatry. 13 He giveth evangelical promises to the penitent.

THE righteous[a] perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart: and [b]merciful men[1] are taken away, none considering that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come.[2]

2 He shall [c]enter into peace:[3] they shall rest in their beds, each one walking in his uprightness.[4]

3 ¶ But draw near hither, [d]ye sons of the sorceress, the seed of the adulterer and the whore.

4 Against[e] whom do ye sport yourselves? against whom [g]make ye a wide mouth, and draw out the tongue? are ye not [h]children of transgression, a seed of falsehood;

5 Inflaming yourselves with [5]idols [i]under every green tree, [j]slaying the children in the valleys under the clifts of the rocks?

6 Among the smooth stones[6] of the stream is thy portion; they, they are thy lot; even to them hast thou poured a drink-offering, thou hast offered a meat-offering. [k]Should I receive comfort in these?

7 Upon[l] a lofty and high mountain[7] hast thou set thy bed: even thither wentest thou up to offer sacrifice.[8]

8 Behind[m] the doors also and the posts hast thou set up thy remembrance; for [o]thou hast discovered thyself to another than me, and art gone up; [p]thou hast enlarged thy bed, and made thee a covenant with them;[9] thou lovedst their bed where thou sawest it.[1]

9 And[q] thou[2] wentest to the king[3] with ointment, and didst increase thy perfumes, and didst send thy messengers far off, and didst debase thyself even unto hell.[4]

10 Thou [r]art wearied in the greatness of thy way; yet saidst thou not, [s]There is no hope: thou hast found the life[5] of thine hand; [t]therefore thou wast not grieved.

11 And[u] of whom hast thou been afraid or feared, that thou [v]hast lied, and hast not remembered me, nor laid it to thy heart? [x]have not I held my peace even of old, and thou fearest me not?

12 I[y] will declare thy righteousness, and thy works; for they shall not profit thee.

tion, I have freely granted him to publish and attest every gospel truth to ignorant and unbelieving men, to instruct and guide them to salvation, to rule and defend them, and to restrain or overcome the wicked. And at his invitation, through the influence of the Holy Ghost, and in order to glorify him, shall multitudes of Gentiles, who had neither been acknowledged by him nor known him, receive and submit to him. 6–13. Importunately seek after and heartily embrace him as your Saviour and portion, while he earnestly offers himself to you in his Word and ordinances. Let even the greatest sinner detest and turn from his self-contrived methods of relief, as well as from his courses and purposes of wickedness, in the sure faith of the unbounded mercy and pardoning grace of God: for in riches of mercy his purposes, words, and works infinitely transcend everything similar and every conception among men; and his promises cannot be defeated, but always issue in blessings to mankind.—And as with great joy the Jews shall be divinely conducted from Babylon and their present dispersion to their own country, and shall plant, multiply, and flourish in the same, so shall multitudes, to the public and lasting honour of God, be delivered from their spiritual bondage of heathenism, Popery, Satan, or their lusts; and while themselves are converted from mischievous sinners into agreeable and useful saints, they shall be delivered from whatever is hurtful and offensive.

Ver. 1. 'Ho, every one that thirsteth' for righteousness, Mat. 5. 6, 'and he that hath no money' (nothing, though he had gained the whole world, to give in exchange for his soul, Mat. 16. 26), 'come ye to the waters.' C.

Ver. 3. David signifies Beloved, and is a prophetical (Je. 30. 9; Ho. 3. 5), a heavenly (Mat. 3. 17), and apostolic name of Christ, Ep. 1. 6. All mercies in him are made sure by 'two immutable things'—God's promise of truth and his oath of confirmation, He. 6. 17, 18. C.

Ver. 5. By following out the address in ch. 54. 1–17, it will be seen that the once barren but now prolific church is the party addressed in this promise. C.

Ver. 9. Higher. God's thoughts are higher (1) in their subject—Christ and his church, Ep. 1. 3–6. (2) In their object—salvation, Ep. 1. 10–14. (3) In their result—success, ver. 11. C.

Ver. 12. Mountains and hills—empires and kingdoms.—Trees of the field—believers everywhere throughout the world, Is. 61. 3. C.

Ver. 13. 'Thorns and briers' are the emblems of the primal curse, Ge. 13. 8; He. 6. 8.—'The fir-tree' is the mark of peaceful dwellings, Ca. 1. 17, successful commerce, Eze. 27. 5, and joyous music, 2 Sa. 6. 5.—'The myrtle,' of that co-extension of natural and spiritual husbandry, improving alike the natural and the moral wilderness, Is. 41. 19. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Think now, my soul, how all the blessings of salvation are framed to answer our need! —The most trifling cumberers of God's vineyard, nay, the most notorious sinners, are expressly, are earnestly invited by him to receive the same without any conditions. Infinite is his grace who, at infinite expense, provides these favours for his enemies, his betrayers, and murderers, and thus offers them to his despisers. But infinitely criminal must be that unbelief which treads on such grace, and doubts the fulfilment of his infallible promises. And base is the heart, and cruel the preacher, who gives JEHOVAH the lie; and pretends that self-formed qualifications of sensibility and sincerity must render us welcome to his market of GRACE.

CHAPTER LVII. Ver. 1. The general scope of this prophecy, and its close connection with ch. liv. lv., should be kept in view. In ch. liv. the blessed results of the Messiah's work and triumph are stated:—His church or kingdom would be established on an everlasting foundation. In ch. lv. it is declared that the doors of the church would no longer be shut against the Gentiles; but that they as well as God's ancient people would have access. In this chapter the same glorious truth is set forth more clearly and fully. Every individual of the human family, wherever born, from whatever nation or tribe sprung, would be admitted on equal terms to all the blessings and privileges of Christ's people. P.—Keep ye judgment, &c. The prophet being now about to close a great series of predictions, proceeds to certain practical observances, just as, in later days, Paul was accustomed to explain and establish certain doctrines, and then to enforce moral duties; both acting upon the principle of laying the foundation, and then building the temple. C.

Ver. 2. Keepeth the Sabbath. Sabbath observance is chosen as the chief outward test of inward holiness, (1) because it is a visible testimony to God's authority; (3) because, as an act of self-denial, it affords a continued specimen of deep Christian principle; and (4) because it is a natural type of the 'rest that remaineth for the people of God.' C.

Ver. 3. Son of the stranger. Not merely a Gentile as distinct from a Jew, but one whose parents had been strangers to God, whose early education had been neglected, and whose youth had consequently been spent in folly. C.

Ver. 4. The eunuchs, &c. Many Christians are much troubled because they think they have effected no good, because they have no spiritual posterity whom they can call 'their little children,' Ga. 4. 19. To such desponding believers this encouragement is addressed, to teach them that they are not to be judged by what they have done; but by what, through grace, they have endeavoured to accomplish, Ro. 9. 16. C.

Ver. 7. Them will I bring to my holy mountain. From Da. 2. 35 it is evident that the 'mountain of the Lord' is the emblem of the church exalted by Messiah; that the 'house of prayer' has ceased to be confined to Jerusalem, and is found wherever there is a worshipper 'in spirit and in truth,' Jn. 4. 20–24; that the 'offerings and sacrifices' are prayer, praise, and beneficence, 1 Pe. 2. 5; He. 13. 15, 16; and that 'the altar' is the spiritual and living altar and sacrifice, Christ, He. 13. 10. C.

Ver. 9. The foregoing verse has closed a glorious series of prophecies, some past, some present, but chiefly future. Here commences a series of accusations, rebukes, and exhortations, happily closing in deep national and ecclesiastical confession and repentance, ch. 59. 9–15. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's kindness powerfully binds and constrains to holiness in all manner of conversation. And if I share of his grace, it becomes me to hate evil; to love him with all my heart, soul, mind, and strength; carefully to observe all his institutions, and do to my neighbours of mankind as I would they should do to me. Always should I rest contented with my earthly lot, as now no natural defects can debar me from the congregation of the Lord: and the fulness of Jesus' promise can sufficiently balance my want of children, or anything beside. Yea, let me greatly rejoice that Gentile sinners are now not only invited, but divinely drawn, to God's holy mountain and the gospel church, with its divine and life-giving ordinances. But fearful is the presage of impending ruin when ministers and magistrates become monsters and patterns of wickedness.

CHAPTER LVII. Ver. 3–12. Answer ye my charge, ye who, descended from wicked parents, have abandoned yourselves to witchcraft, adultery, and idolatry. Why do ye contemptuously deride me and my prophets, abandon yourselves to vices, and yet hypocritically pretend to serve me? Ye are violent and eager upon your idolatrous worship, and sacrifice your children to Molech. Ye can hardly see a smooth stone in a river but you fancy it to be a god, and offer oblations to it. Can this fail to provoke me? Ye build temples and altars on every high place, and toil yourselves to go up and sacrifice there. Every corner of your houses is stored with memorials of your idols; and by coveting whatever you have seen among heathens, ye have exceedingly multiplied them. By courting alliances with heathen princes, even on the basest terms, ye have partook with them in their idolatrous worship. Without ever being convinced by your disappointments, ye have wearied yourselves in foreign embassies and wickedness; and, obtaining present ease, have never repented of your conduct. Without any proper ground of fear, ye have thus acted treacherously towards me, never regarding my relation to you, or the great things which I have done for you; and my patience exercised, and forbearing, has but tempted you to disregard me the more. Therefore, by my fearful judgments executed upon you, will I manifest how criminal and ruinous your conduct has been. Nor shall your idols or heathen allies be able

13 ¶ When[z] thou criest, let thy companies deliver thee: but [a]the wind shall carry them all away; vanity shall take them: but [b]he that putteth his trust in me shall possess the land, and shall inherit my holy mountain;

14 And shall say,[6] Cast[c] ye up, cast ye up, prepare the way, take up the stumbling-block out of the way of my people.

15 For thus saith [d]the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell[e] in the high and holy place, with him also that is [g]of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones.

16 For [h]I will not contend for ever, neither will I be always wroth: for the spirit should fail before me, and the souls [i]which I have made.

17 For[j] the iniquity of his covetousness was I wroth, and smote him: I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on frowardly[7] in the way of his heart.

18 I[k] have seen his ways,[8] and will heal him: I will lead him also, and [l]restore comforts unto him and to his mourners.[9]

19 I create [m]the fruit of the [1]lips; [o]peace, peace to him that is far off, and to him that is near, saith the LORD; and I will heal him.

20 But the wicked are [p]like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt.

CHAPTER LVIII.

1 The prophet, being sent to reprove hypocrisy, 3 showeth the difference between a counterfeit fast and a true. 8 He declareth what promises are due unto godliness, 13 and to the keeping of the sabbath.

CRY [a]aloud,[1] spare not; lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins.

2 Yet [b]they seek me daily, and delight to know my ways, as a nation that did righteousness, and forsook not the ordinance of their God: they ask of me the ordinances of justice; they take delight in approaching to God.

3 Wherefore[c] have we fasted, say they, and thou seest not? wherefore have we [d]afflicted[2] our soul, and thou takest no knowledge? Behold, in the day of your fast [e]ye find pleasure, and exact all your [3]labours.[4]

4 Behold, [g]ye fast for strife and debate,[5] and to smite with the fist of wickedness: ye shall not fast as ye do this day,[6] to[7] make your voice to be heard on high.

5 Is it [h]such a fast that I have chosen? a day for a man to afflict his soul?[8] is it to bow down his head as a bulrush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes under him? wilt thou call this a fast, and an acceptable day to the LORD?

6 Is not this the fast that I have chosen? [i]to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens,[9] and to let the oppressed[1] go free, and that ye break every yoke?

7 Is it not [j]to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast [2]out [k]to thy house? when thou seest the naked, that [l]thou cover him; and that thou [n]hide not thyself from thine own flesh?

8 ¶ Then[3] shall [o]thy light break forth[4] as the morning, and [p]thine health shall spring forth speedily; and thy [q]righteousness shall go before thee: [r]the glory of the LORD shall be thy rereward.[5]

9 Then[s] shalt thou call, and the LORD shall answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am. If thou take away from the midst of thee [t]the yoke, [u]the putting forth of the finger, and speaking vanity:

10 And if [v]thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul; then [x]shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noon-day:

ness, and forsook not the ordinance of their God: they ask of me the ordinances of justice; they take delight in approaching to God.

3 Wherefore[c] have we fasted, say they, and thou seest not? wherefore have we [d]afflicted[2] our soul, and thou takest no knowledge? Behold, in the day of your fast [e]ye find pleasure, and exact all your [3]labours.[4]

4 Behold, [g]ye fast for strife and debate,[5] and to smite with the fist of wickedness: ye shall not fast as ye do this day,[6] to[7] make your voice to be heard on high.

5 Is it [h]such a fast that I have chosen? a day for a man to afflict his soul?[8] is it to bow down his head as a bulrush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes under him? wilt thou call this a fast, and an acceptable day to the LORD?

6 Is not this the fast that I have chosen? [i]to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens,[9] and to let the oppressed[1] go free, and that ye break every yoke?

7 Is it not [j]to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast [2]out [k]to thy house? when thou seest the naked, that [l]thou cover him; and that thou [n]hide not thyself from thine own flesh?

8 ¶ Then[3] shall [o]thy light break forth[4] as the morning, and [p]thine health shall spring forth speedily; and thy [q]righteousness shall go before thee: [r]the glory of the LORD shall be thy rereward.[5] to protect either themselves or you. 13–21. But such as believe my word, and trust in my perfections, shall return from their captivity to Canaan by my providence; and Cyrus, by his proclamation, shall remove every hindrance in their way. For however high and lofty I am as the Holy One who inhabits eternity, yet am I infinitely condescending towards persons destitute, distressed, and broken in spirit; nor will I continue my judgments till such be utterly ruined or discouraged.—For their injustice, and other abominations, I have indeed punished them by the Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, Romans, and others; and yet, under their affliction, they have become worse and worse. I will therefore, by an extension of sovereign grace, forgive and reform them, lead them back to their duty and their country, and restore comforts to them; and by my prophets publish peace and prosperity to them, that their lips may be filled with my praise. But by their own lusts, guilt, and fears, and the judgments which I inflict, the wicked shall always remain in a restless, shameful, and loathsome condition.

Ver. 1. The righteous perisheth, &c. Christ the righteous is crucified; and, so far from 'laying it to heart' as national guilt, the cry is, 'His blood be upon us and our children.'—Merciful men. Those who have desired and obtained mercy, the disciples and martyrs of our Lord, Mat. 5. 7; 2 Ti. 1. 13. C.

Ver. 2. 'He (Christ) shall enter into his peace,' 'walking in his uprightness:' while they, the disciples and martyrs, shall rest in their graves, their beds, till the resurrection, Ac. 7. 60. C.

Ver. 3. These titles are first literal; for idolatry and lewdness are synonymous. They are then emblematic of the false doctrines, heresies, worldliness, and image-worship by which Christianity, alas! still continues to be disfigured. C.

Ver. 5. Reference is here made primarily to the gross idolatry and cruel rites practised during the reign of Manasseh. The idol Molech was set up in the bottom of the valley of Kidron, at the mouth of Hinnom, just beneath the overhanging cliffs of Olivet. Molech was a brazen statue, having a place within it for a furnace. It was heated, and the children were then placed in the open arms of the monster, and roasted alive. Of Manasseh it is said, 'He caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom,' 2 Ch. 33. 6. P.

Ver. 6. A smooth oblong stone is culled from the bed of a river, placed on end under a tree, and water is carried and poured upon it; such idolatry is still practised by the women of Hindostan. C.

Ver. 8. Behind the doors, &c. In secret also, 'behind the doors and the posts,' hast thou 'set up thy remembrance'—dedicated a memorial of thy trust in idols, and thereby incurred the terrible curse of the law, De. 27. 15. C.

Ver. 10. Though wearied with efforts of labour and expenditure, yet no experience of failure has dissipated false hope: thou hast found a life neither by my Word nor by my Spirit, but of thine own hand (thine own power), therefore thou art not grieved either for thy failures or idolatries. C.——The general sense of this verse is:—No amount of labour in the service of your idols has sufficed to weary or discourage you. Still do you go on in idolatry. You have found in these evil practices sufficient pleasure and profit to keep you from despondency. P.

Ver. 12. I will declare thy righteousness to be but filthy rags, Is.64.6; 'thy works,' that they are not wrought in God, Jn.3. 21. C.

Ver. 14. Stumbling-block—the offence of the cross. Teach them to look upon Him whom they have pierced, and mourn; teach them to glory in the cross at which they stumbled. C.

Ver. 17. His covetousness. Israel's, ch. 56. 8. Covetousness was one of the ingredients of the first sin. It is idolatry, and therefore specially hateful in the sight of God. But it is not confined to riches, but extends to 'everything that is our neighbour's.' C.

Ver. 19. This is the fruit of the tree of life, transmitted in the words of 'peace to him that is far off,' the Gentile; and 'to him that is near,' the Jew. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God kindly hides his people in heaven from his terrible judgments on earth. And great is the folly and ignorance of men, that such alarming warnings are often so little regarded. Dreadful indeed must be our inward corruption, which can thus push us to the utmost wickedness in every form, notwithstanding all the laws, mercies, and judgments which God lays in our way to hinder it. And when God himself is thus contemned and insulted, his faithful ministers must not hope to escape. But he will not always suffer our sins to pass unpunished. When he is wroth, not any created helper can in the least avail us. But an abiding faith will secure a blessed portion, both in time and eternity: and God himself will undoubtedly pity and relieve us in our depths of distress. Great is the happiness of those hearts in which he dwells. No evil can approach, no good be absent.—Alas! how covetousness provokes God and ruins men! But infinite is that grace which heaps mercies on the richest deservers of hell. Delightful is the new-kingdom connection betwixt pardon, conversion, comfort, peace,

11 And the LORD shall guide thee continually, and [y]satisfy thy soul in drought,[6] and make fat thy bones:[7] and thou shalt be [z]like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not.[8]

12 And they that shall be of thee [a]shall build the old waste places: thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach, The restorer of paths to dwell in.

13 ¶ If[b] thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the sabbath [c]a delight, the holy of the LORD, honourable; and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words:

14 Then shalt thou [d]delight thyself in the LORD; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth,[9] and feed thee with the[e] heritage of Jacob thy father; for [g]the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.

BEHOLD, the LORD'S hand is not [a]shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear:[1]

2 But [b]your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid[2] his face from you, that he will not hear.[3]

3 For [c]your hands are defiled with blood, and your fingers with iniquity; [d]your lips have spoken lies, your tongue hath muttered perverseness.

10 We[q] grope for the wall like the blind, and we grope as if we had no eyes: we stumble at noon-day as in the night; we are [r]in desolate places as dead men.[1] and holy gratitude. But fearful is the guilt, and tremendous the misery, of such as perish in their sins amidst the offers and influences of God's GRACE.

11 We[s] roar all like bears,[2] and mourn sore like doves:[3] we look for judgment, but there is none; for salvation, but it is far off from us.

CHAPTER LVIII. Ver. 1-7. Why complain ye so loudly that I do not reward your fasting, while therein you but gratify your own inclinations, oppress your poor servants, promote contention and oppression of the innocent, reproach your debtors, servants, or neighbours, or content yourselves with mere outward noise and show?—whereas the fasting which I delight in, is to repent of, and reform you from, your wickedness; particularly your usurious exactions and cruel oppressions, and to bestow necessary supplies upon your poor brethren. 8-12. If you forbear and restrain oppression of your neighbours, threatening and derisive contempt, hypocritical dissimulation, and do kindly pity and relieve the destitute and afflicted, great shall be your gracious reward; great shall be your comfort, prosperity, and glory. God shall, by his presence and providence, protect you; he shall readily accept and grant your requests; he shall direct you in all your ways, and while others are distressed with want, ye shall be plentifully provided for, and rendered the honoured instruments of re-establishing your nation, repairing your long desolate cities; and of the erection and re-establishment of the gospel church. 13, 14. And if ye carefully abstain from all carnal labour and recreations on the Sabbath, and with pleasure observe it in the spiritual exercises of my worship, ye shall enjoy unbounded comforts in me, as your God, in my ordinances; and with safety, honour, and pleasure, continue in the possession of Canaan, till at last ye be exalted to the felicities of the heavenly inheritance.

Ver. 2. Seek me daily. 'They loved to pray standing in the synagogues, and in the corners of the streets, that they might be seen of men,' Mat. 6. 5.—Delight to know my ways—as Herod, who heard John gladly, Mar. 6. 20; as the stony-ground hearers, who received the seed with joy, Mat. 13. 20; to whom the word—as mere matter of temporary feeling and taste—is as the words of a song, Eze. 33. 32.—Delight in approaching to God. Not for any love to God or his law; but from habit, love of a pompous worship (ver. 3), and the opportunity of attracting the admiration of ignorant followers. C.

Ver. 6. If 'every yoke' is to be broken in the acceptable fast of the LORD, then his Spirit demands the abolition of all that can be called slavery in every nation 'that names the name of JESUS.' C.

Ver. 8. Thy righteousness, &c. Messiah, in whom alone is righteousness, will go before you as your Leader, ch. 55. 4, and the 'glory of God in the face of Jesus' (2 Co. 4. 6) will protect your rereward, as did the Shechinah glory in the day when it protected your fathers in the passage of the Red Sea, Ex. 14. 19. C.

Ver. 9. Putting forth of the finger. Being connected with the abolition of the yoke, or of slavery, it is most probably an allusion to 1 Ki. 12. 10, and synonymous with oppression upon pretence of right. See ch. 59. 3. C.

Ver. 12. Tadmor in the desert, which still abides in solitary and desolate grandeur, is believed to have been the work of Solomon, and affords one of the most striking examples of the ruins of 'many generations.' What a cheering prospect is afforded in the predicted restoration of such ruined and deserted cities! C.

Ver. 13. If thou turn away thy foot from works of agriculture, De. 11. 10, walks of amusement, or journeys of pleasure, upon the Sabbath. C.

REFLECTIONS.—There is great need that ministers should deal closely with the consciences of their hearers, particularly nominal professors; and that all should seek, by a thorough self-examination, the evident marks of grace. For what alarming lengths in religious appearances do hypocrites sometimes go, and that merely to gratify their own legality and pride! Many flatter themselves that God will reward the services which, in fact, he abhors. And such are often greatly exasperated to have the vanity of their self-confidence exposed. There is much need of great brokenness of heart for and of reformation from sin, in our humiliation for it: otherwise our demure looks will but provoke God to abhor us. Nor can we have a deep sense of Jesus' grace without having our hearts and hands opened towards our poor and distressed brethren: and what is lent to the Lord, by relieving his people, he repays with usury. Let us likewise be careful that our hearts are sanctified and divinely influenced, in order to a proper sanctification of the Lord's-day. Multitudes undergo the most alarming miseries in time and eternity, as the just punishment of their profanation of it; while in keeping his commandments there is a great reward.

CHAPTER LIX. Ver. 5, 6. With the utmost labour and care they frame villanous schemes of doctrine or practice, by which their neighbours and partners are destroyed, and themselves nothing profited.—9-11. To punish our iniquity, men deny us justice, and God refuses to plead our cause. When we expect deliverance and prosperity, our miseries are increased, our spirits are overwhelmed with despair, and our anguish and grief inexpressible. 16-21. Finding that there are scarcely any left to stand up for injured honesty and truth, or even to plead for mercy, God will exert his immediate power in the righteous and faithful salvation of his people, and the destruction of their enemies, Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, Romans, Papists, or Mahometans, and thus shall the nations around be awed by, or turned to, the Lord. Whenever Satan, or his instruments, make any assault, God, by the preaching of the gospel, and by his providence, shall graciously and suddenly repress their attempts. Jesus, the almighty Redeemer, shall not only appear in his humble estate in the Jewish church and temple, but shall dwell in his gospel church, and by faith call to himself the remnant of the Hebrew nation along with the fulness of the Gentiles. And the Spirit and oracles of God, granted to him and his church, shall always, especially in the happy time to come, abide with his ministers and people, to direct and instruct them in everthing necessary.

LORD, and departing away from our God, speaking oppression and revolt, conceiving and uttering from the heart words of falsehood.

14 And [v]judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off: for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter.

15 Yea, [w]truth faileth; and he that [y]departeth from evil [4]maketh himself a prey:[5] and the LORD saw it, and it displeased him[6] that there was no judgment.

16 ¶ And he saw that [z]there was no man, and wondered that there was no intercessor; therefore[a] his arm brought salvation unto him; and his righteousness, it sustained him.

17 For[b] he put on righteousness as a breastplate, and an helmet of salvation upon his head; and he put on the garments of vengeance for clothing, and was clad with zeal as a cloak.

18 According[c] to their deeds,[7] accordingly he will repay, fury to his adversaries, recompense to his enemies; to the islands he will repay recompense.[8]

19 So[d] shall they fear the name of the LORD from the west, and his glory from the rising of the sun.[9] When[e] the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the LORD shall lift up a standard against him.[1]

20 ¶ And [g]the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the LORD.

CHAPTER LX.

1 The glory of the church in the abundant access of the Gentiles, 15 and the great blessings after a short affliction.

ARISE,[a] shine; for [b]thy light is come,[1] and the glory of the LORD is risen upon thee.

2 For, behold, [c]the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people: but the [d]LORD shall arise upon thee, and his glory[2] shall be seen upon thee.

3 And the [e]Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising.

4 Lift[g] up thine eyes round about, and see: all they gather themselves together, they come to thee: thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side.

5 Then[h] thou shalt see, and flow [3]together, and thine heart shall fear, and be enlarged; because the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee,[4] the forces[5] of the Gentiles shall come unto thee.

6 The[i] multitude of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah; all they from Sheba shall come: they shall bring gold

Ver. 3. Your hands are defiled with blood. Either with the sacrifice of children to Molech, 2 Ki. 21. 6, or the factious and cruel administration of law in name but in violation of justice, 2 Ki. 21. 16; or by such bloody persecutions as the early Christians endured from Rome Pagan, and the blessed Reformers from Rome Papal. C.

Ver. 5. He that eateth. He that adopts their principles is destroyed: and that which is crushed, even when thwarted and disappointed in their evil designs, still the result is the production of those violent party feuds that, like a venomous viper, poison and destroy the peace and prosperity of their country. C.

Ver. 9. Judgment. A clear perception of national sins and national duties in conformity with the law of God.—Justice. Neither are we able, with all our efforts, to obtain any due administration of justice; all is partial, one-sided, and oppressive. C.

Ver. 10. We grope. Rejecting the light of God's Word, and the end of God's glory, as the only rules in legislation, we grope about in the dark, and make one experiment after another, and all ends in greater darkness and confusion. C.

Ver. 16. Righteousness. The righteousness of the Scriptures is the work of God in the person of Christ, whom righteousness sustained in life, death, and resurrection: and whom it still sustains in the blessed work of intercession. C.

Ver. 21. Upon thee—the Redeemer. Thy seed—the children whom God hath given thee in the everlasting covenant, and by renewal of the Holy Ghost, He. 2. 13; 1 Pe. 1. 23. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is in vain to expect favours from God while we indulge ourselves in sin; and absurd to love that which separates us from our God, and entails his judgment on our heads. Dreadful is that root of original corruption which springs up in so many abominable courses; miserable their condition who have their own conscience upbraiding them, while JEHOVAH and his instruments are punishing them; and awful the situation when the universal prevalency of wickedness is attended with general wretchedness, perplexity, and anguish! Thrice happy is it to reflect, that where sin abounded grace doth much more abound; and that our whole salvation, and the overthrow of the wicked depend on God himself, who loves all: that Jesus Christ and his Spirit are appointed to accomplish the whole work of our conviction and salvation, repentance and faith being left to the good management of our own free-will.

CHAPTER LX. Ver. 1, 2. Be enlightened, comforted, and glorious, O church, for not only is thy deliverance out of Babylon effected, but the Son of God is come in our nature, to enlighten the world, and glorify God in the salvation of men. And though multitudes were lying, or still remain, in depths of ignorance, wickedness, and misery, Jesus shall show his glory, through the gospel, among you. 3–14. The accession of proselytes, and bounty of kings and princes, to the Jewish church, after their return from Babylon, shall be no more than an earnest of the multitudes of princes and others, even of the most savage nations, that shall heartily accede to the gospel church, and devote their substance to, and labours in, the service of it. 15–22. And great shall be her honour, stable and lasting her joys, abundant her prosperity, excellent her ordinances, gifts, and graces, upright and peaceful her officers, complete her joys, lasting and divine her glory, eminently pure, holy, happy, and numerous her members, and quick her enlargement—all because of their faith in Christ.

Ver. 1. Arise, shine. This is a prophecy of the birth and ministry of Jesus, in whom was 'light,' and in whose reflected splendour Zion is called to shine. C.

Ver. 3. The 'wise men from the East' that came to Jerusalem to inquire after the birth of Jesus, tradition pronounces to have been kings. If so, kings literally came to the 'brightness of his rising.' But be this as it may, the prediction was fully verified on the accession of Constantine to the Roman empire. C.

Ver. 4. Thy sons. Thy adopted sons shall come 'from far' among the Gentiles; others, like daughters, 'shall be nursed at thy side,' in thine own bed, upon thine own arm. C.

Ver. 6. Midian was the most celebrated son of Keturah. What Judah became among the tribes of Israel, Midian became among the tribes of Arabia. The Midianites were for ages the dominant people, and virtual rulers of Arabia. The nucleus of the nation was on the eastern border of Edom; but they spread thence westward through the Sinai peninsula, and eastward to the Euphrates. The caravan trade between Central and Western Asia appears to have been chiefly in their hands.—Ephah was one of the sons of Midian, and the founder of a distinguished tribe. P.

Ver. 7. Kedar was the second, and Nebaioth the eldest son of Ishmael. The former appears to have settled in Central Arabia, and his descendants were among the chief nomads of that wide country. The Nabatheans probably had their earliest settlements on the banks of the Euphrates. In later times they migrated westward, drove out the Edomites, and took possession of their wild mountain home. The splendid rock temples and palaces of Petra were chiefly their work. P.—Rams of Nebaioth shall minister. The ascription of rational service to the flocks shows that in this prediction the camels, &c., are emblematic of the people of their several countries offering to God the sacrifice of prayer and of praise, through Jesus Christ, in that spiritual 'Mount Zion and heavenly Jerusalem' to which every believer is gone up, He. 12. 22. But that they also include the temporal restoration of Zion and Israel, as a great central light of truth, other parts of the prediction seem clearly to intimate. See ver. 10, 15. C.

Ver. 12. This does not mean political submission, but religious service; and the nation that serves Christ serves Zion: all others shall perish, Ps. 2. 8, 9, 12. C.

Ver. 19. This blessed period of national order, peace, and light, corresponds to that glorious vision of John, Re. 21. 23, 27. The Lord hasten it in his time! C.

Ver. 21. All righteous. All, as Abraham, who 'believed God, and it was counted to him for righteousness.' None can be righteous but by the 'righteousness of God by faith of Jesus Christ,' Ro. 3. 10, 22. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Where sin had abounded grace much more abounds; and, through Jesus' sacrifice reigns unto eternal life, where sin had reigned unto death. But they who live destitute of the gospel are plunged into the greatest misery and darkness. And infinite is the mercy when Jesus Christ, the light of life and the glory of his people, manifests himself in his incarnation and ordinances. The remarkable favour of God, the clear light of the gospel, and the shining lives of professors, powerfully attract members to the church. And with inexpressible pleasure and wonder do the lovers of Christ behold men crowding to him as their refuge, and to the ordinances of his grace. And if we truly give him our heart, we shall liberally employ our wealth, honour, and influence for promoting his cause. How abundant and constant is the access of sinful men to Jesus and his gospel church! Quickly and truly would he turn her corruption, contempt, poverty, oppression, and misery, into holiness, comfort, honour, wealth, happiness, and peace. What then must heaven be, where no evil can enter, and where God himself shall be our everlasting light, our everlasting glory, and our ALL IN ALL.

CHAPTER LXI. Ver. 1. The quotation of this passage, Lu. 4. 18, identifies the speaker with Christ. The announcement comes in direct fulfilment of the closing prediction of the previous chapter: 'I the LORD will hasten it in HIS time,' who, though to the eyes of men 'a little one and a small one,' is here anointed with the Spirit, and invested with the mighty power of God. C.

Ver. 2. How blessed the contrast—a 'day of vengeance'—'the acceptable year of the Lord!' A vengeance that specially began upon Jerusalem, Mat. 23. 37, 38; 24. 21, which continues the emblem of that series of judgments by which God broke in pieces the heathen Roman empire, and by which he destroys that mystical Babylon that has so long been permitted to 'make war with the saints,' Re. 13. 7. C.

Ver. 4. For more than a thousand years many of the great and incense; and they shall show forth the praises of the LORD.

7 All[j] the flocks of Kedar shall be gathered together unto thee, the rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee: they shall come up with acceptance on mine altar, and I will glorify the house of my glory.

8 Who are these [k]that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows?

9 Surely [l]the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them, [m]unto the name of the LORD thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee.

10 And [o]the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee: for [p]in my wrath I smote thee, but in my favour have I had mercy on thee.[6]

11 Therefore [q]thy gates shall be open[7] continually; they shall not be shut day nor night; that men may bring unto thee the forces[8] of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought.

12 For[r] the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted.

13 The[s] glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir-tree, the pine-tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary; and I will make the [t]place of my feet glorious.

14 The[u] sons also of them that afflicted thee shall come bending unto thee; and all they that despised thee shall bow themselves down at the soles of thy feet; and they shall call thee, [v]The city of the LORD, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel.

15 ¶ Whereas[z] thou hast been forsaken and hated, so that no man went through thee, [y]I will make thee an eternal excellency, a joy of many generations.[9]

16 Thou[s] shalt also suck the milk of the Gentiles, and shalt suck the breast of kings: and [a]thou shalt know that I the LORD am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob.

17 For[b] brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver, and for wood brass, and for stones iron: I will also make thy officers peace, and[c] thine exactors righteousness.

18 Violence[d] shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders: but thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise.

19 The[e] sun shall be no more thy light by day; neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee: but the LORD shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory.

20 Thy[g] sun shall no more go down; neither shall thy moon withdraw itself; for the LORD shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended.

21 Thy[h] people also shall be all righteous: [i]they shall inherit the land for ever, [j]the branch of my planting, the work of my hands, that I may [k]be glorified.

22 A[l] little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation: [n]I the LORD will hasten it in his time.

CHAPTER LXI.

1 The office of Christ. 4 The restoration, 7 and blessedness of the faithful.

THE Spirit[a] of the Lord GOD is upon me; because the LORD hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek;[1] he hath sent me to [b]bind up the broken-hearted, [c]to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound;

2 To[d] proclaim the acceptable year of the LORD, and the day of vengeance of our God; [e]to comfort all that mourn;

3 To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, [g]to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, [h]the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness;[2] that they might be called [i]trees of righteousness, the planting of the LORD, that he might be glorified.

4 ¶ And they shall [j]build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations.

5 And [k]strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and the sons of the alien shall be your ploughmen, and your vine-dressers.

6 But ye shall be named [l]the priests of the LORD; [m]men shall call you the ministers of our God: [o]ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles, and in their glory shall ye boast yourselves.

7 For [p]your shame ye shall have double,[3] and for confusion they shall rejoice in their portion: therefore in their land they shall possess the double; [q]everlasting joy shall be unto them.

8 For [r]I the LORD love judgment, I hate robbery for burnt-offering; and I [s]will direct their work in truth, and [t]I will make an everlasting covenant with them.

9 And[u] their seed[4] shall be known among the Gentiles, and their offspring among the people:

* The beauty of these expressions in the original cannot be represented in a translation. 'To give them a crown instead of ashes.' On occasions of deep sorrow and bereavement eastern females remove the head-dress, untie the hair, and sprinkle ashes over the head. On occasions of great rejoicing, such as a marriage, the hair is decorated with jewels and flowers, and the head encircled with a crown. How beautiful and graphic therefore the statement, 'A crown for ashes!' The 'garment of praise' was the robe used at weddings and great festivals.—P.

cities and populous villages of Palestine have been literally 'a desolation.' Samaria, Bethel, Jezreel, Capernaum, Jericho, and multitudes of others, are in ruins. The whole country, in fact, when contrasted with its state in the days of Isaiah, or in the time of our Lord, is 'waste.' As the curse has been literally fulfilled, may we not expect that the promised blessing will be fulfilled as literally? P.——So far as this prediction is literal, its accomplishment is still future: and that it will have a literal accomplishment, the prophecies leave no room to doubt. In the meantime it has been spiritually verified, in the building up of God's people 'through faith unto salvation.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Clear is the call, and unbounded the spiritual furniture, of our Lord Jesus for his saving work; and wonderful the instruction, healing, deliverance, protection, and comfort which he gives us by the gospel. He graciously roots and grounds sinners of mankind in himself, and in a spiritual state; raises temples to God out of the ruined lodgings of lusts; makes the bond-slaves of Satan free indeed; the servants of sin priests and ministers to God; and fraudulent wanderers upright followers of truth.—Thrice happy are they whom he delivers from redoubled misery and shame; whom he enriches with his grace, and gives full contentment and joy in himself; and to whom he is a God and guide, even unto death. And sweet and honourable to exercised souls are Jesus'

SYNAGOGUE OF CHRIST AT NAZARETH—WHERE CHRIST PREACHED HIS FIRST SERMON. [ISAIAH, lxi:1.]—The first sermon that Christ ever preached he preached in Nazareth, in the Synagogue. The Synagogue represented in the picture above is said to stand upon the exact site of the one in which Christ preached. This sermon was the only one Christ ever preached from a text, and that text he found in the 61st chapter of Isaiah: "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; He hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound. To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn." It was after the delivery of this sermon that the acquaintances of our Savior led him to the brow of the hill to cast him down.

all that see them shall acknowledge them, that they are [v]the seed which the LORD hath blessed.

10 I[x] will greatly rejoice in the LORD, my soul shall be joyful in my God: for [y]he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decketh[5] himself with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth herself with her jewels.

11 For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth; [z]so the Lord GOD will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations.

CHAPTER LXII.

1 The fervent desire of the prophet to confirm the church in God's promises. 6 The office of the ministers (unto which they are incited) in preaching the gospel, 10 and preparing the people thereto.

FOR Zion's[a] sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until the[b] righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth.[1]

2 And[c] the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory: and [d]thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the LORD shall name.

3 Thou shalt also be [e]a crown of glory in the hand of the LORD, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God.

4 Thou[g] shalt no more be termed Forsaken: neither shall thy land any more be termed Desolate; but thou shalt be called Hephzi-bah,[2] and thy land Beulah;[3] for the LORD delighteth in thee, [h]and thy land shall be married.

5 For as a young man marrieth a virgin, so shall[i] thy sons marry thee: and as the bridegroom rejoiceth[4] over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee.

6 ¶ I have set [j]watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day nor night: ye that make mention of the LORD,[5] keep[k] not silence,

7 And give him no [6]rest, [l]till he establish, and till he make Jerusalem a praise in the [7]earth.

8 ¶ The LORD hath [m]sworn by his right hand, and by the arm of his strength, Surely [6]I will no more give[8] thy corn to be meat for thine enemies; and the sons of the stranger shall not drink thy wine, for the which thou hast laboured:

9 But[p] they that have gathered it shall eat it, and praise the LORD; and they that have brought it together shall drink it in the courts of my holiness.

10 ¶ Go[q] through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people.

11 Behold, [r]the LORD hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, [s]Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh; behold, [t]his reward is with him, and his work[9] before him.

12 And they shall call them, [u]The holy people, The redeemed of the LORD: and thou [v]shalt be called, Sought out, A city not forsaken.

blessed righteousness and great salvation, with all the holiness and comfort which proceed therefrom.

CHAPTER LXII. Ver. 1. For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace. Poole ascribes these words to the prophet Isaiah; Aben Ezra, to Israel in captivity; the Targum, to God resolved not to be silent, nor give the nations rest till the coming of the deliverer. By following the grammar of the preceding and subsequent passages, which all uniformly speak in the name of one person, there can be no hesitation in applying these words to Messiah—'God manifest in the flesh.' C.

Ver. 2. Thy righteousness. The righteousness of God, by faith of Jesus Christ, Ro. 3. 22.—Thy glory. The glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ, 2 Co. 4. 6. C.

Ver. 5. Thy sons. Rather, 'thy builders'—God, the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, building up the church as a living temple, 1 Co. 3. 9, 16, 17. C.

Ver. 10. Go through, go through the gates. Do not tarry at ease in the church, as men in the gaiety and luxury of a city, but pass out of the gates into the uncultivated lands of nominal or perverted Christianity, Mahometan delusion, or heathen darkness, and lift high a standard of testimony to 'the truth as it is in Jesus,' in sight of an ignorant and misled people. C.

Ver. 12. They shall call them. That is, the faithful watchmen who have prepared the way, gathered out the stones, and lifted up the standard, shall call the people so tended and cultivated, 'the holy (the separated and dedicated) people.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great fervour and perseverance, particularly in preaching and prayer, are necessary in the ministers of Christ. How near to theirs, and especially to Jesus' heart, lie the important concerns of the church! And great and numerous are the blessed fruits of their intercessions. Thrice happy is it, when not only churches are vindicated, but Jesus' righteousness and salvation are clearly exhibited and distinctly perceived; when church-members are spiritually joined to the Lord, and to one another in him; are an honour and pleasure to him; and bring forth the fruits of righteousness, to the praise of his glory; and when divine oracles, ordinances, officers, gifts and graces, and practical holiness, meet together! Thrice happy is it that in the work of our salvation, and of rearing, reforming, and ruling the church, Jesus Christ, and JEHOVAH in him, are ALL and IN ALL. Infinite is the condescension, mercy, power, wisdom, care, and faithfulness which he manifests in his work. And such as accept him by a living faith and thus walk in him he will protect.

CHAPTER LXIII. Ver. 1-6. Who is this that cometh from the overthrow and destruction of the deeply wicked, temporal or spiritual, having almighty power to perform his will withersoever he goes? It is I, the Messiah, who promise nothing but what I faithfully perform, and who through my own perfect sacrifice, am able to save to the uttermost.—I by myself alone, without needing any created assistance, have utterly subdued and overcome the wicked: and I will quickly come myself in the tremendous loss of such as still remain; for the seasons appointed for the overthrow of the wicked and the deliverance of believers, are fixed in my purpose and view. And though none be found able or willing to espouse their quarrel, or attempt their deliverance, my power and zeal shall save them, who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and even render them astonished at the greatness of my compassion.—8. They will not deal falsely and deceitfully in their promise with me.—14. The Lord carried them gently and surely, as on plain ground, through the Red Sea and the wilderness, till, to render himself famous in the earth, he brought them into the quiet possession of Canaan. 16–19. Abraham cannot either take notice of our troubles, or afford us any relief.—Why hast thou given us up to a spirit of error and obstinacy, and left us to the bent and bias of our own corrupt hearts, that we cannot fear thee in a filial and reverential manner? O be reconciled, and show thyself favourable to us. Instead of possessing Canaan for ever, as was promised to the patriarchs, we, thy peculiar people, have enjoyed it but a little while; and our adversaries, who were never in such near relation to thee, have destroyed thy temple and thy land.

Ver. 1. The first six verses of this chapter are a responsive ode or hymn:—the astonished and joyous church questioning, and the triumphant Messiah responding. He here speaks in his kingly office: he is mighty to save, or deliver from the power of man. Edom is mentioned because it was one of the most determined enemies of Israel. Bozrah is mentioned because it was the capital and stronghold of Edom. These together symbolized the foes of the church in every age; and King Messiah is represented as gaining a complete victory over them. P.—Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? The Lord hath a sacrifice in Bozrah, and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea, Is. 34. 6, &c.: see also Je. 47. 7–22; Eze. 25. 12–14; 35. 1–15, in which predictions there appears a wonderful contrast between Jacob and Esau; for though Jacob be scattered throughout all lands, he can still be found and known, while in truth there is not any remaining of the house of Esau. 'Edom is cut off for ever.'—The question in this prophecy seems therefore to refer to this predicted period of 'vengeance,' and furnishes, most probably, an emblem and specimen of those national judgments with which God forewarns and threatens all nations which becoming, through agriculture and commerce, prosperous and great, as Edom, forget God, become proud of their wealth, unkind, cruel, and idolatrous.—The people to whom the standard has been lifted up, ch. 62. 10, and the daughter of Zion warned of her coming salvation, ch. 62. 11, prefer this interesting question. C.

Ver. 5. Wondered. Messiah is said to have wondered at the want of a Saviour, as he was grieved at the hardness of the people's hearts, Mar. 3. 5—both being expressions perfectly suitable to him when 'found in fashion as a man.' C.

Ver. 7. I will mention, &c. Messiah continues to speak, but pauses, as it were, from the work of judgment, to show how judgment upon the wicked is lovingkindness to those whom it delivers from their hands. C.

Ver. 9. For the import of 'Angel of his presence,' see Ex. 3. 2, 6; 13. 21; 14. 19; 23. 20, 21; Ju. 13. 18; comp. with Is. 9. 6; Zec. 12. 8; Mal. 3. 1, all indicating no other than Christ. C.

Ver. 11. Remembered—not as a thing forgotten, but as a thing in 'everlasting remembrance,' Ps. 112. 6. C.

Ver. 15. Toward me. Messiah here speaks as 'head over all things to the church, which is his body.' C.

Ver. 16. Here the church utters her prayer—'Thou art our Father' by regeneration of the Holy Spirit, Jn. 3. 5, though Abraness of his strength? I [d]that speak in righteousness, mighty to save.

NAPLES, FROM THE HILL. [ISAIAH, lxiii:1.]—"Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this that is glorious in his apparel, traveling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save." We give a picture of Naples, a Christian city built upon the foundations of a heathen city, to illustrate this 63rd chapter of Isaiah. This chapter was written 2594 years ago, but Christ, to whom reference is made in this prophecy, has gradually changed the character of civilization. Where heathen temples once stood now stand Christian churches. Where men once sacrificed to idols, they now bring themselves willing sacrifices to the Lord Jesus Christ. Where once stood cities consecrated to pagan rights and given up to blindness, there now stand Christian cities regulated by humane laws, and moving in the great open ways disclosed by the life and spirit of Jesus Christ.

2 Wherefore [e]art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the wine-fat?

3 I[g] have trodden the wine-press alone; and of the people there was none with me; for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment.

4 For the [h]day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come.

5 And I looked, and [i]there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold: therefore [j]mine own arm brought salvation unto me; and my fury, it upheld me.[2]

6 And I [k]will tread down the people in mine anger, and make them drunk in my fury, and I will bring down their strength to the earth.

7 ¶ I[l] will mention the loving-kindnesses of the LORD, and the praises of the LORD, according to all that the LORD hath bestowed on us, and the great goodness toward the house of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them according to his mercies, and according to the multitude of his loving-kindnesses.

8 For he said, [m]Surely they are my people, children that will not [o]lie:[3] so he was their Saviour.

9 In[p] all their affliction he was afflicted, and the [q]angel of his presence saved them: [r]in his love and in his pity he redeemed them: and [s]he bare them, and carried them all the days of old.

10 But they [t]rebelled, and vexed his holy Spirit: therefore [u]he was turned to be their enemy, and he fought against them.

11 Then he [v]remembered the days of old, Moses and his people, saying, Where is he that brought them up out of the sea with the shepherd[4] of his flock? where is he that put his holy Spirit within him?

REFLECTIONS.—Wonderful is Jesus Christ in the view of all that know him. And yet he indulges his servants and people in the most familiar inquiries and requests. Blessed are the periods which God hath fixed for showing mercy to believers, and distributing judgment to the wicked. And with the greatest zeal, fervent affection, and care, he accomplishes every promise or threatening. Nor can the inability or unconcern of others in the least discourage our almighty Saviour, or hinder his success: but thrice dreadful is their destruction in which his glory must be exalted!—Never ought we to remember God's mercies but with minds lost in love, in wonder, and in praise. And every blessing of providence, grace, or glory, in time or eternity, ought to be viewed as having its sole rise in his infinitely rich and gracious mercy. Alas! how base is it to lie, to deal treacherously, to rebel and vex the Holy Ghost, in opposition to that infinite pity and manifold salvation of God's dear Son! But wonderfully God mingles his sharpest corrections of his people with his gracious comforts. And it is comely when recounting of mercies, confession of iniquities, and pleading of promises are rightly connected; and when supplicants complain chiefly of spiritual judgments, and fill their mouths with arguments before him.

CHAPTER LXIV. Ver. 1–5. Oh that thou wouldest, in some awful manner, appear for the ruin of thine enemies and the relief of thy people, as in the destruction of the Egyptians and Canaanites, or as at Mount Sinai! For whatever great things thou hast done, we believe that thou wilt still do greater, in the incarnation of thy Son, the spread of thy gospel, and the erection, preservation, and perfection of the New Testament church.—Thou enrichest, with thine unsearchable blessings, them who with pleasure receive thy favours, obey thy laws, and hold fellowship with thee in thy ordinances. And though our sins have long provoked thee to anger, thy ways of mercy are perpetual, and therefore we hope for thy salvation. 6–12. We are indeed wholly corrupted, and our best works abominable in thy sight. Our sins have brought on these wasting and captivating judgments. And very few, with fervent importunity, labour to prevent thy departure, or plead for the removal of thy consuming judgments. But notwithstanding our unworthy carriage towards thee, do thou, our Father and Creator, graciously remember and spare us, moderate and shorten thy corrections, since we are thy faithful people. When Jerusalem and our other cities are laid desolate, and thy temple, in which our fathers long worshipped thee, is burned, and all our pleasant palaces and structures are destroyed, let thy bowels of compassion make thee hasten to our relief.

Ver. 1. Rend the heavens. Surely not the natural and visible heavens; for to rend them were to introduce universal ruin, and could not be a prayer of faith and love; but the political heavens, the moving and directing lights of the rebellious and idolatrous kingdoms. See ch. 13. 10, 13–22; comp. Joel 2. 10: 3. 15, 16–19; Mat. 24. 29.—Mountains. The exalted potentates of the world, whether adverse or friendly to the truth and holiness. They are friendly, ch. 2. 2; adverse, but subdued, ch. 41. 15.—Flow down at thy presence. 'Flow down' as mountains are wont to do when the sun melts the winter snows, see ch. 2. 2: Joel 3. 18, when springs and rivers issue from their bosom, or flocks and herds descend from them as streams, ch. 65. 9, 10. C.

Ver. 3. Thou camest down. This cannot refer to God's coming down on Sinai; for then the people looked for the 'terrible things' that were done, Ex. 19. 3–25. Moreover, upon that awful occasion, mention is never made of 'mountains,' but of 'the mount,' Ex. 19. 11–13, 16, &c. Does it not therefore rather refer to some of those unexpected deliverances which God at different times so signally wrought for his people, as by his judgments on Pharaoh, Sennacherib, and other enemies? C.

Ver. 4. Neither hath the eye seen, &c. 'Nor hath eye seen a God besides thee, who providest such things for them that trust him.' C.

4 ¶ For since the beginning of the world [d]men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what he hath prepared for him[3] that waiteth for him.

5 Thou[e] meetest him that rejoiceth and worketh righteousness; those that remember thee in thy ways: behold, [4]thou art wroth; for we have sinned: [2]in those is continuance, and we shall be saved.[5]

6 But [h]we are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags; and we all do [i]fade as a leaf; and our iniquities, like the wind, [j]have taken us away.

7 And[k] there is none that calleth upon thy name, that stirreth up himself to take hold of thee: for [l]thou hast hid thy face from us, and hast consumed[6] us, because of our iniquities.

8 But now, O LORD, [m]thou art our father: we[o] are the clay, and thou our potter; and [p]we all are the work of thy hand.

9 ¶ Be not [q]wroth very sore, O LORD, neither remember iniquity for ever: behold, see, we beseech thee, we are all thy people.

10 Thy[r] holy cities are a wilderness, Zion is a wilderness, Jerusalem a desolation.

11 Our[s] holy and our beautiful house, where our fathers praised thee, is burned up with fire: and all our pleasant things are laid waste.[7]

12 Wilt[t] thou refrain thyself for these things, O LORD? wilt thou hold thy peace, and afflict us very sore?

5 Which say, [i]Stand by thyself, come not near to me; for I am holier than thou. [j]These are a smoke in my [4]nose,[5] a fire that burneth all the day.

6 Behold, [k]it is written before me; I will not keep silence, but will recompense, even recompense into their bosom,

7 Your[l] iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers together, saith the LORD, which [m]have burned incense upon the mountains, and blasphemed me upon the hills: therefore [o]will I measure their former work into their bosom.

8 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, [p]As the new wine is found in the cluster, and one saith, Destroy it not; for a blessing[6] is in it: so will I do for my servants' sakes, that I may not destroy them all.

9 And [q]I will bring forth a seed out of Jacob, and out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains: and mine elect shall inherit it, and my servants shall dwell there.

10 And [r]Sharon[7] shall be a fold of flocks, and the valley of Achor a place for the herds to lie down in, for my people that have sought me.

11 ¶ But ye are they that [s]forsake the LORD, that forget my [t]holy mountain, that prepare a table for that troop,[8] and that furnish the drink-offering unto that number.[9]

12 Therefore[u] will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow down to the slaughter: [v]because when I called, ye did not answer; when I spake, ye did not hear; but did evil before mine eyes, and did choose that wherein I delighted not.

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [x]Behold, my servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry: behold, my servants shall drink, but ye shall be thirsty: behold, my servants shall rejoice, but ye shall be ashamed:

14 Behold, my servants shall sing for joy of heart, but ye shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for vexation[1] of spirit.

15 And [y]ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen: for the Lord GOD shall [z]slay thee, and call his servants by [a]another name:[2]

16 That[b] he who blesseth himself in the earth,

REFLECTIONS.—In trouble the almighty God must be implored for our relief: and he will make himself known to all; to his people in mercy, and to the wicked in judgment. There is infinite need of his gracious descents to awaken, enlighten, pardon, purify, protect, regulate, direct, and comfort his church. What mercy he keeps, and what stores of blessedness he has laid up, for such as cheerfully wait on him, and walk with him, in all his ordinances, laws, and dispensations of providence! He bears with unnumbered provocations, and graciously forgives them, in the best of the people. But shameful are our sinful pollutions, and greatly criminal our want of earnestness in dealing with God; nor is there a surer token of a graceless heart, than neglect of and even indulged carelessness in prayer. But while we are pining away in our iniquities, nothing is more fit than by faith to throw ourselves entirely upon the great mercy of God. And if the disorders and desolations of churches lie so heavy on the heart of saints, how near must they go to the heart of the Saviour!

CHAPTER LXV. Ver. 1–7. I am now manifested to, enjoyed, and worshipped by the Gentiles, who for many ages have continued ignorant of and careless about me, and stood in no saving relation to me. But since, notwithstanding my long-continued offers of grace, vouchsafement of oracles and ordinances, and the strivings of my Spirit and providence, the Jews continue in their obstinate rejection and blasphemous contempt of me, since they still approve the sins of their fathers, or do what is equally horrid, and yet boast, to my high provocation, of themselves, as if they were the only holy people on earth; I will now, in the most tremendous and lasting manner, punish on them their own and their fathers' iniquities. 8–10. Nevertheless, I will not utterly destroy the nation, as there is among them, and in their loins, a number of believers, who in the apostolic and coming periods, shall truly accept Christ and his church, and become very useful to others. 11–16. But as for the body of that nation, since they have apostatized from my truths and service, and have, at least, in approbation of their fathers' conduct, offered sacrifices to multitudes of idols, and have obstinately rejected the Messiah, they shall terribly be destroyed by the shall bless himself in the [c]God of truth; and he that sweareth in the earth, shall swear by the God of truth; because [d]the former troubles are forgotten, and because they are hid from mine eyes.

17 ¶ For, behold, I create [e]new heavens, and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind.[3]

18 But [g]be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy.

19 And [h]I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people: and the [i]voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying.

20 There[j] shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days: for the child shall die an hundred years old; [k]but the sinner, being an hundred years old, shall be accursed.

21 And they [l]shall build houses, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them.

22 They shall not build, and another inhabit; they shall not plant, and another eat: for [n]as the days of a tree are the days of my people, and mine elect shall[4] long enjoy the work of their hands.

23 They[o] shall not labour in vain, nor bring forth for trouble: for [p]they are the seed of the blessed of the LORD, and their offspring with them.

24 And it shall come to pass, that [q]before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear.

25 The[r] wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock: and [s]dust shall be the serpent's [5]meat. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my [t]holy mountain, saith the LORD.

CHAPTER LXVI.

1 The glorious God will be served in humble sincerity. 5 He comforteth the humble with the marvellous generation, 10 and with the gracious benefits of the church. 15 God's severe judgments against the wicked. 18 The Gentiles shall have an holy church, 24 and see the damnation of the wicked.

THUS saith the LORD, [a]The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool: where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest?

2 For [b]all those things hath mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the LORD: but [c]to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and [d]trembleth at my word.

3 He[e] that killeth an ox is as if he slew a man; he that sacrificeth a lamb,[1] as if he cut off a dog's neck; he that offereth an oblation, as if he offered swine's blood; he that burneth[2] incense, as if he blessed an idol. Yea, they have chosen their own ways, and their soul delighteth in their abominations.

4 I [g]also will choose their [3]delusions,[4] and will bring their fears upon them; [h]because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear: but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not.

5 ¶ Hear the word of the LORD, ye that [i]tremble at his word; Your [j]brethren that hated you, that cast you out for my name's sake, said, Let the LORD be glorified:[5] but [k]he shall [6]appear to your joy, and they shall be ashamed.

Romans and others, and by famine, while the Christians shall be protected and nourished. They shall be miserable, detested, and infamous, while the Christians shall be joyful, respected, and happy in the worship of their Redeemer; and idolatry, carnal ceremonies, and vexing miseries shall be abolished. 17–25. For, to the inexpressible comfort of believers, whether Jews or Gentiles, I will, in the apostolic and especially in the spiritual period, and still more gloriously in the heavenly state, establish my church in a new form; in which spiritual joys, noted advances in holiness, happy continuance in life, sanctified enjoyment of the blessings of providence, remarkable blessings from God, and delightful fellowship with him, remarkable change of men's dispositions and tempers, happy peacefulness, mutual affection, and freedom from persecution shall amazingly abound.

Ver. 1. The Lord here replies to the concluding expostulation of the preceding chapter; and, by enumerating their sins, vindicates the severity of his corrective judgments upon Israel, and his merciful, but righteous, substitution of the Gentiles in the place of a rebellious and idolatrous people. C.

Ver. 4. Which remain among the graves. Frequent the graves of dead men, whom they elevate into demigods or 'saints,' whose relics they venerate as things peculiarly holy, and to whom they address their prayers as possessed of tutelary power.—Which eat swine's flesh. Swine's flesh being forbidden to the Jew for reasons ceremonially instructive, the eating of 'swine's flesh' was the emblem of all unhallowed indulgence and epicurean idolatry of appetite, Phi. 3. 19. C.

Ver. 7. Therefore will I measure, &c. The allusion is to the loose eastern robe, which is often used as an apron: and, when filled with large measures, is drawn up to the bosom. Our Lord alludes to the same dress and practice in his memorable inculcation of the duty of charitable judgment, forgiveness, and liberality, Lu. 6. 38. C.

Ver. 11. Prepare a table for Gad and Meni—names of heathen gods or idolatrous rites. Gad, or troop, was most probably a name for the starry heavens, which the Hebrews were prone to worship. Meni, or number, for numerical calculation of fortunate and unfortunate days, with which idolatrous and superstitious nations are still trammelled. C.

Ver. 13. This prediction was wonderfully accomplished in the siege of Jerusalem by Titus. The Christians, whose chosen name was 'servants of Jesus Christ,' Phi. 1. 1; Ja. 1. 1, warned by the prophecy of our Lord, Mat. 24. 15–28, had fled to Pella, and lived in abundance and security, while the unbelieving Jews felt all the extremities of thirst, hunger, and ruin. C.

Ver. 17. New heavens and a new earth cannot here mean the new and eternal state; for it appears from ver. 20 that after the new creation here predicted, death will still be in the world; whereas in the new and eternal state 'there will be no more death,' Re. 21. 4. 'The new heavens and new earth' here foretold represent a new state of governments and people, produced by an outpouring of converting and renewing grace upon the hearts of Israel and the Gentile churches and kingdoms. C.

Ver. 20. Though it were presumptuous to affirm that God may not, or will not, hereafter restore mankind to antediluvian longevity; yet, as the 'new heavens and new earth' seem decidedly emblematic, and not literal, is there not reason for concluding that 'infant' and 'old man' are likewise emblematic? Thus the whole Christian church are called 'little children' by Christ himself, by Paul, and John, Jn. 13. 33; Ga. 4. 19; 1 Jn. 2. 1–5, 21. According to this authorized language, the verse will be interpreted thus: 'There shall no more be in my visible church' any who abides 'an infant of days,' any who continue 'children in understanding,' 1 Co. 14. 20, nor 'an old man,' a father in Christ, 1 Co. 14. 15; 1 Jn. 2. 13, who shall not have knowledge and experience in grace; but even 'the child,' the youngest believer, shall die in the Christian ripeness of old age. And such shall be the purity and vigour of godly discipline, that 'the sinner' who 'loves not the Lord Jesus Christ,' whatever may be his rank and attainments, shall be cut off and cast away as an accursed thing from the fellowship of the renovated church, 1 Co. 5. 4, 5; 7. 9, 11; 1 Co. 16. 22. C.

Ver. 22. As the days of a tree are the days of my people. Oaks, cedars, and olives are of such known longevity, that no one can tell at what age they die. It is by no means improbable that the remnants of the 'cedars of Lebanon' may have been contemporary with Solomon, or the trees of the Mount of Olives contemporary with our Lord. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Wise is JEHOVAH in the disposal of his favours; and graciously he convicts sinful men by the offers and communications of his saving graces and comforts. But rebellious dissemblers with God, and rejecters of his Son, provoke him to give them up at last to the most terrible rejection and ruin. Though he bear long, he will not bear always; and nothing is more odious in his sight than a sinner vaunting of his holiness, and looking down with contempt on others. Yet how loath is he utterly to abandon a people who have been once devoted to his honour! And how liberally sinners expend their substance to gratify their lusts! Awful and lasting are the proofs we have of Jesus' Messiahship, and of the truth of the Christian religion, in the tremendous miseries, and still continued dispersion and disgrace, of his Jewish rejecters. But O what unspeakable blessings, for Jews and Gentiles, are still wrapped up in God's promises. If I must die without seeing their fulfilment, let me live and die in the firm faith of it. If I am dispirited by the remarkable dishonours of God and ruin of souls which now prevail, let me hope for that happy period in which the kingdoms of this world, Jews and Gentiles, shall become the kingdoms of my Lord, and of his Christ.

CHAPTER LXVI. Ver. 1–4. I do not regard your temple in all its glory, but the law-fulfilling Messiah, and broken-hearted believers in him. Your sacrifices offered up without faith in, nay, in opposition to, his, I esteem as infinitely criminal and detestable. And since ye obstinately cleave to your abominable righteousness and superstitions, I will give you up to the lusts of your hearts, and bring upon you the miseries which ye attempt to avoid. 5–14. And while God shall marvellously protect the Jewish Christians who have been persecuted by their brethren, terrible judgments shall be executed on the Jewish nation, city, and temple. But speedily, and before their destruction, shall multitudes be converted to Christ and his gospel church, particularly from among the Gentiles; and large, abundant, and lasting, especially in the latter days, shall be their comforts. 14–24. And while the 7 ¶ Before[m] she travailed, she brought forth; before her pain came, she was delivered of a man-child.

8 Who hath heard such a thing? who hath seen such things? [o]shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day? or shall a nation be born at once? for as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children.

9 Shall[p] I bring to the birth, and not cause to bring forth?[7] saith the LORD: shall I cause to bring forth, and shut the womb? saith thy God.

10 ¶ Rejoice[q] ye with Jerusalem, and be glad with her, all ye that love her: rejoice for joy with her, all ye that mourn for her:

11 That [r]ye may suck, and be satisfied with the breasts of her consolations; that ye may milk out, and be delighted with the abundance[8] of her glory.

12 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, [s]I will extend peace to her like a river, and the glory of the Gentiles like a flowing stream: [t]then shall ye suck, ye shall be borne upon her sides, and be dandled upon her knees.

13 As[u] one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem.

14 And [v]when ye see this, your heart shall rejoice, and your bones shall flourish like an herb; and [x]the hand of the LORD shall be known toward his servants, and his indignation toward his enemies.

15 ¶ For, behold, [y]the LORD will come with fire,[9] and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his anger with fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire.

16 For[z] by fire and by his sword will the LORD plead with all flesh: and the slain of the LORD shall be many.

17 They that sanctify themselves, and purify themselves [a]in the gardens, behind one tree in the midst,[1] eating[b] swine's flesh, and the abomination, and the mouse, shall be consumed together, saith the LORD.

18 ¶ For[c] I know their works and their thoughts: [d]it shall come, that I will gather all nations and tongues; and they shall come, and see my glory.

19 And [e]I will set a sign among them, and I will send those that escape of them unto the nations, [g]to Tarshish, Pul, and Lud,[2] that draw the bow, to Tubal and Javan,[3] to the isles afar off, that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory; and they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles.

20 And [h]they shall bring all your brethren for an offering unto the LORD, out of all nations, upon horses, and in chariots, and in [4]litters, and upon mules, and upon swift beasts,[5] to my holy mountain Jerusalem, saith the LORD, as the children of Israel bring an offering in a clean vessel[6] into the house of the LORD.

21 And I will also take of them for [i]priests and for Levites,[7] saith the LORD.

22 For as [j]the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the LORD, so shall your seed and your name remain.

23 And it shall come to pass, [k]that from one new-moon to another, and from one sabbath to another,[8] shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the LORD.

24 And they shall go forth, and [l]look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me; for [m]their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; [o]and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.

obstinate Jews, Heathens, Papists, and Mahometans, shall be, in the most terrible manner, punished by the judgments of God, and set up as distinguished monuments of sin, in time or eternity, the Jewish preachers, and others, shall spread the gospel into all parts of the world, and shall become noted instruments of the enlargement, purification, and lively devotion of the gospel church.

Ver. 1. The Jews were proud of their national descent from Abraham, whose faith they knew not; of the law of Moses, whose precepts they kept not; of the temple, whose services they degraded by their profanity; and of JEHOVAH their God, whom they associated with idols. Against this false pride and the false security thence arising, the Lord here proceeds to warn them by showing that heaven is his glorious temple, and the humble man the only acceptable worshipper. C.

Ver. 3. This verse is obscured by the italics of the translators, as the object seems to be a description, not of the comparative guilt of the Jews (as if a certain crime were committed), but the actual abominations they had conjoined with the worship of Jehovah: 'He that slayeth an ox' (to offer to God) 'killeth a man' (to satisfy his own malice); 'he that sacrificeth a lamb' (to Jehovah 'beheadeth a dog' (to a heathen deity); 'he that maketh an oblation' (to the living God) offereth 'swine's flesh' (a sacrifice to the dead); 'he that burneth incense' (emblem of ascending prayer) 'blesseth an idol' that can neither hear nor answer. C.

Ver. 5. The Lord here speaks the word of comfort to his church, anticipating the time when the first Christians were 'cast out of the synagogues,' Jn. 16. 2, and the custom of total excision from family affection and aid, as well as church-fellowship, still practised against every Jew who is converted to the 'truth as it is in Jesus.' C.

Ver. 7 When Christ, as 'a child born, a son given,' came in the flesh, a remnant were doubtless expecting and praying for his appearing; but as a nation and church, the Jews neither expected nor desired such a Redeemer. C.

Ver. 8. For as soon as Zion travailed. 'But as soon as Zion travailed,' &c. Of which see the wonderful conversions produced by a single apostolic address, Ac. 2. 41; 4. 4. And surely what God has effected once he is able to accomplish again.—Note, Let believers pray for that outpouring of the Spirit from on high; for neither by 'might nor by power' of man shall this work be effected, 'but by my Spirit, saith the Lord,' Zec. 4. 6. C.

Ver. 12. Like a river. A river, as distinguished from a cistern, which, however deep, is at length exhausted, while the mountain-fed river is rolling on, and, by aid of its tributaries, ever widening as it flows.—Note, This distinction is forcibly exemplified in the distinction between φρέαρ and πηγή, Jn. 4. 11, 14. C.

Ver. 14. Your bones. The bones are the emblems of strength and the mechanical instruments of motion. They abide in the grave when the flesh is decayed, as the root of an herb abides in the ground when the flower is faded, the leaf withered, and the stem cut down. The comparison, therefore, seems to refer to the resurrection as exhibited in the vision of dry bones, Eze. 37. 11. C.

Ver. 17. Behind one in the midst. 'Who purify themselves at a fountain in the midst of the gardens,' according to Kimchi. But how could any be said to purify themselves behind a fountain?—'After the rites of Achad' (Lowth). But Achad never elsewhere appears as the name of any idol. The marginal translation, 'one after another,' the literal, 'after one betwixt,' may probably suggest the true meaning, 'successively,' or 'promiscuously.' C.

Ver. 19. I will set a sign. A sign of God's power, faithfulness, holiness, and grace, such as appeared in the incarnation (Lu. 2. 34), preaching (Jn. 7. 46), and miracles of our Lord, and in the endowments, self-denial, and miracles of his apostles, Ac. 2. 19, 22, 43; 4. 30; 14. 3; Ro. 15. 19; 2 Co. 12. 12; He. 2. 4.—My glory. The real demonstration of the 'glory of God' is 'the face of Jesus Christ,' whether marked by the look of tenderness, the tear of pity, the elevation of prayer, the bloody sweat of agony in the garden, or the hand of the smiter in the hall; above all, in his face when he rose from the dead, and brought life and immortality to light from the darkness of the grave, 2 Co. 4. 6. C.

Ver. 23. 'From one new-moon to another, and from one Sabbath to another (that is, perpetually), shall all flesh come to worship before me,' not necessarily in Jerusalem—for that were physically impossible—but 'in spirit and in truth,' where the eye of faith seeth him in the temple of his universal presence, Jn. 4. 20–24; He. 11. 1. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Let my care be to have my heart right with God, and a meet habitation for him through the Spirit. And making Jesus my pattern, let me, with a contrite heart, tremble at his word. God forbid that I should ever value myself on account of external performances in religion, which may be so detestable to him; or that ever he should abandon me to the power and rage of my own lusts, and the fearful suffering attending the same. Hypocrites and church-rulers are frequently the most cruel persecutors. But saints may bear injuries with patience when God will so quickly overbalance them with deliverance and comfort. And the church's remarkable deliverances, enlargements, and joys, are ordinarily introduced or attended by the most tremendous judgments on hypocritical professors and open enemies. All labour and suffering are well bestowed that issue in the conversion of men to Christ. And notwithstanding all that the wicked can do, the word of the Lord hath had, and will have, free course, and be glorified. The ends of the earth shall be made to remember and turn to the Lord. And the grace of God, which bringeth salvation, shall teach men to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this world. But what dreadful spectacles of divine judgment have been the Jewish and Roman, and shall be the Popish and Turkish, persecutors of the church! Let, therefore, the British nation stand in awe and tremble!

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF ISAIAH.

Isaiah is placed at the head of the glorious prophetic company, not because his prophecy was first in point of time—for he was preceded by Jonah, Amos, and Hosea, and was contemporary with Joel and Micah—but because of the overwhelming importance of his subject, and his frequent references to the coming and kingdom of Christ. Upon this account Isaiah has been distinguished by the title of 'the evangelical prophet.' Concerning his family nothing certain is known, though some suppose him to have been of the blood-royal, and that his father was the son of Joash, and brother of Uzziah. There is a tradition among the Jews, and it has been adopted by many Christian writers, that Isaiah lived till the time of Manasseh, by whom he was sawn asunder. That some one of the prophets so suffered, the apostle affirms, He. 11. 37; but of the individual we are uncertain. If Isaiah lived till the time of Manasseh, he must have exercised the prophetic office during at least sixty-one years—a period by no means improbable, when compared with that during which many ministers of the gospel have continued to discharge the most laborious duties of their offices. It is however certain that he lived till after the fifteenth year of Hezekiah, which makes the continuance of his office beyond all question—calculating from the first of Uzziah—to have been not under forty-eight years.

The name of Isaiah, when interpreted, is, in some measure, descriptive of the nature of his divine message. It signifies 'the salvation of Jehovah;' and was bestowed with singular prophetic propriety upon him who was commissioned to foretell and describe, so vividly and impressively, the glorious advent of Messiah, through whom 'all flesh shall see the salvation of God.' See Is. 40. 5, comp. with Lu. 3. 6; Ac. 4. 12.

Called into office during a period of great national declension from truth, purity, and godliness, one great object of the prophet was to establish beyond controversy the divine origin of the Jewish institutions. This he effects by foretelling some events nigh at hand, 'coming home to men's own lives and bosoms,' and which the living witnesses of his own generation must have been able either to falsify or verify by their own observation. The verification of the prediction, including events most improbable at the time, fulfilled the Mosaic test of the divine commission of a prophet, and left unbelieving idolaters and apostates totally without excuse (see De. 18. 21, 22); while others of his prophecies, stretching far into futurity, have continued to receive an exact but progressive fulfilment during centuries; and others look forward still, and give assurance, by the experience of the past, that all that remain will be accomplished. C.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET JEREMIAH.

Jeremiah was a priest descended from Aaron, very early called to the prophetical office (ch. i.); and continued forty or fifty years faithfully discharging it. Living in a period of great dissimulation with God, and of notorious rebellion against him, the miseries which he foresaw, and the persecutions which he endured, rendered his condition extremely afflicted and sorrowful, ch. ix. 1; xi. 18, 19; xv. 10, 15; xvii. 14–18; xviii. 18–23; xx. 7–18; and, excepting some promises of deliverance from Babylon, or redemption through Jesus Christ, and happiness to his church, in ch. iii. xxx.–xxxiii.; xxiii. 3–8; xxiv. 4–7; xxix. 10–14; l. 4–8, 19, 20, 33, 34, he is continually engaged in charging men's sins upon them, or denouncing the judgments of God against them;—as the ruin of the Jewish nation, Egyptians, Philistines, Tyrians, Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Syrians, Arabians, and Persians, by the Chaldeans; and then of the Chaldeans themselves, ch. xxv. xxvii. xlvi.–li. &c. His first four sermons are generally plain, ch. ii.–xii. The following sixteen are generally introduced by some typical emblem, ch. xiii.–xxxv.

[It is the opinion of the most learned commentators that the prophecies of Jeremiah, having been written upon separate parchments, have not been placed as they were delivered, and the following, among other attempts, has been made to arrange them in chronological order:—after ch. xx., xxii. xxiii. xxv. xxvi. xxxv. xxxvi. xlv. xxiv. xxix.–xxxi. xxvii. xxviii. xxi. xxxiv. xxxvii. xxxii. xxxiii. xxxviii. xxxix. 15–19, xxxix. 1–14, lx.–lxiv. lxvi. (Blayney). After ch. xx., xxii. 1–24, xxvi. xlvi. 1–13, xxxv. xxv. xxxvi. 1–9, xlv. xxxvi. 9 to end, xxii. 24 to end, lii. 1–4, xxiv. xxix. 1–15, xxix. 16–21, xxix. 15, xxix. 21 to end, xxx. xxxi. xxvii. xxviii. xlviii. xlix. 1–51, xxxix. 1, xxxvii. 1–5, xxxiv. 1–11, xxxii. xxxiii. xxxvii. 5–47, xxxvii. 6–11, xxxiv. 11 to end, xxxvii. 11 to end, xxi. xxxviii. xxxix. 15 to end, lii. 5, 6, xxxix. 3, lii. 7–12, xxxix. 11–15, lii. 24–28, lii. 12–15, lii. 17–24, lii. 15, 16, xxxix. 10, lii. 4, xxxix. 2–10 (Townsend).

Of the comparative value of these suggested arrangements, it is unnecessary to speak, inasmuch as they are at best conjectural; but they are important as specimens of the indefatigable pains bestowed by their respective authors in "searching the Scriptures." C.]

CHAPTER I. Ver. 10. He was appointed to declare what God would infallibly do with the nations. 11–16. The almond-tree, which flourishes very early in the spring, imported that the Jews were almost ripe for destruction, and it would speedily come upon them. And the boiling-pot, with its face toward the north, signified that the Chaldeans would come from the north-east, and burn and render miserable Jerusalem and other cities of Judah. 17–19. Be expeditious and diligent, bold, resolute, and faithful, in delivering my messages, however severe or awful; for I will protect, strengthen, and stablish thee, that none of their persecutions shall hurt thee.

Ver. 1. Anathoth. A city of Benjamin, situated, according to Jerome, about two miles and a half north of Jerusalem. It was assigned to the priests, 1 Ch. 6. 60. It was destroyed by the Chaldeans, and again rebuilt, Ne. 11. 32; but, at present, it fully verifies the denunciations of the prophet, Je. 11. 21–23, for no thing remains but a few poor houses on the bleak mountain-side, surrounded by mounds of rubbish and hewn stones. C.

Ver. 2. Word of the Lord. Not a mere utterance which the prophet was commissioned to make; but the Son of God, in visible form, and with audible speech, ver. 4–14, as he also appeared and spoke to Abraham, Ge. 15. 1–18; 17. 1–22. See also Is. 6. 1; Jos. 5. 13; Eze. 1. 26; Da. 8. 15–18; 10. 6–10. C.

Ver. 17. Be not dismayed. Moral courage, arising from a sense of obedience to God, a love for the souls of sinners, a 'conscience sprinkled from dead works,' with deep self-denial that 'Christ may be all in all,' is an indispensable qualification of every one who would seek to convert sinners and build up believers to salvation. Like all other good qualities, it is the gift of God. He that has it should bless God: and he that has it not should pray for it; for without it it is impossible to 'do the work of an evangelist.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great are the pains and patience that God exercises to prevent the destruction of his professed people. And it is honourable to be early chosen, sanctified, and prepared for the ministerial service of God. How real are his purposes relative to men's persons and offices! He can easily qualify men for his service, and enable them to speak intelligibly and powerfully, notwithstanding all weakness or opposition, and though their message issue in the ruin of some and deliverance of others. And with great care doth God render his mind plain to his servants and people, and condescendingly vouchsafes them his presence in their work. In what different forms he warns men before he inflicts his remarkable judgments! And ministers had need to consider the infinite importance

TOMB OF THE HORATII, ON THE APPIAN WAY—PASSED BY ST. PAUL IN CHAINS. —[JEREMIAH i: 1.] "The words of Jeremiah, the son of Hilkiah, of the priests that were in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin." Jeremiah began to prophesy in the reign of Josiah. Josiah reigned in Jerusalem from 640 to 609 B. C. Near to the time when Josiah was reigning over the Israelites, there was a war between Rome and Alba, which was settled by a contest of the Horatii and the Curatii. These brothers and cousins fought in sight of the Roman and Alban armies with a bravery such as made their names famous in all after ages. The terrible tragedy between the brothers and cousins terminated the independent existence of the Alban power, and gave to the Roman cause complete victory. This tomb is distant about six miles from Rome on the Appian way. Along by this tomb came St. Paul in chains, a prisoner to Rome.

king of Judah, unto the [g]carrying away of Jerusalem captive in the fifth month.[1]

4 ¶ Then [h]the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

5 Before I [i]formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee; and I ordained[2] thee a[j] prophet unto the nations.

6 Then said I, Ah! [k]Lord GOD! behold, I cannot speak; for I am a child.

7 But the LORD said unto me, [l]Say not, I am a child: for [m]thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, and whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak.

8 Be[o] not afraid of their faces: for [p]I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the LORD.

9 Then the LORD put forth his hand, and touched[q] my mouth. And the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have [r]put my words in thy mouth.

10 See, I have this day set thee over the nations, and over the kingdoms, to [s]root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant.

11 ¶ Moreover, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Jeremiah, [t]what seest thou? and I said, I see [u]a rod of an almond-tree.[3]

12 Then said the LORD unto me, Thou hast well seen; for [v]I will hasten my word to perform it.

13 And the word of the LORD came unto me the second time, saying, What seest thou? and I said, I see [z]a seething-pot;[4] and the face thereof is toward[5] the north.

14 Then the LORD said unto me, [y]Out of the north[6] an evil shall break forth[7] upon all the inhabitants of the land.

15 For, lo, I will [z]call all the families of the kingdoms of the north, saith the LORD; and they shall come, and they shall set every one his throne[8] at the entering of the gates of Jerusalem, and against all the walls thereof round about, and against all the cities of Judah.

ver. 6 it appears he was a very young man, not literally "a child," however, when the Lord called him; and from ch. 52. 31 it is evident he must have lived to an extreme old age, for he records an event which occurred during the reign of Evil-Merodach, king of Babylon, and not earlier than B.C. 560. He thus lived during one of the darkest periods of Jewish history, and there fell to his lot more intense suffering probably than any prophet had ever experienced.—P.

of their charge, the great danger of unfaithfulness in it, and God's promises of his presence to enable them to perform it, and to protect them in it, as a balance to all the power and threatenings of their persecutors.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 2, 3. I remember the kindness which I showed to your nation when it was but forming, and when in the Arabian wilderness, by solemn covenant, I espoused you first of all the nations of the world to be my holy and peculiar people, and the affectionate regard which your fathers professed for me. And then I severely punished the Egyptians and others who attempted to do them wrong. 13–18. They have rejected me in my oracles, ordinances, and fulness, who am the freely bestowed, everlasting, and unbounded source of all grace, consolations, and blessings; and have, with inexpressible fatigue, procured to themselves idols which cannot give them the smallest relief. No wonder that they are basely enslaved and cruelly spoiled. The Assyrians, like outrageous lions, have wasted the country of the ten tribes, and murdered and carried captive the inhabitants. And the Egyptians have treacherously disappointed you, or shall murder Josiah, depose Jehoahaz, and impose a tribute. And will you, nevertheless, still send messengers to Egypt or Assyria, to form new alliances, or to borrow new idols? 20–28. When I formerly delivered you from the Egyptians, and other oppressors, ye engaged to keep my commandments, yet ye commit idolatry everywhere. I originally formed your nation of pious patriarchs, and established among you my pure oracles, ordinances, and worship; how then are ye become superstitious, idolatrous, and everyway corrupt, in both church and state? Nor can all your excuses, evasions, or pretences to reformation, conceal the manifest tokens of your wickedness from me. How can ye deny it, when the valley of Hinnom, where ye have burned your children to Molech, and other valleys where ye have worshipped your idols, manifest it? Ye have, even with madness and fury, run after idols empty as wind, one after another; and till fearful distress restrain you, ye appear quite irreclaimable. I have warned you to repent of your lewd, idolatrous, and foolish courses, and of hunting after alliances with heathens, which will bring you to captivity and misery; but ye desperately cleave to your strange gods. Yet all of you at last shall be ashamed of your idols, when ye find that, notwithstanding their multitudes, they can do nothing to save you from disgrace or punishment. 29–37. No excuse can be offered for your conduct; and all of you are guilty. Warnings and judgments have not in the least reclaimed you; nay, ye have cruelly murdered the prophets who admonished you. Did not I plentifully provide for and comfort you while ye continued obedient; why then do ye reject me, as if now, self-sufficient, ye had no need of me? Why thus so long forget me, who have been your chief glory and ornament? Why take such tedious journeys in pursuance of idolatrous courses, and become patterns and teachers to the very heathens in wickedness? Why, in every corner of your land, publicly sacrifice your children to idols, and murder the innocent, and yet hope to pass unpunished? Why thus change your idols and heathen allies? The Egyptians shall no more help you than the Assyrians did; but ye shall be led forth into a mournful and miserable captivity; and the curse of God shall render all your projected methods of relief unprofitable and ruinous to you.

that[r] led us through the wilderness, through a land of deserts and of pits; through a land of drought, and of the shadow of death; through a land that no man passed through, and where no man dwelt?

7 And [s]I brought you into a plentiful country, to eat the fruit thereof and the goodness thereof: but when ye entered, ye [t]defiled[7] my land, and made mine heritage an abomination.

8 The[u] priests said not, Where is the LORD? and they that handle the law knew me not: the pastors also transgressed against me, and [v]the prophets prophesied by Baal, and [w]walked after things that do not profit.

9 Wherefore I [x]will yet plead[8] with you, saith the LORD, and [y]with your children's children will I plead.

10 For pass over[9] the[a] isles of Chittim,[1] and see; and send unto Kedar, and consider diligently, [b]and see if there be such a thing:

11 Hath[c] a nation changed their gods, which are yet no gods? but my people [d]have changed their glory for that which doth not profit.

12 Be[e] astonished, O ye heavens, at this, and be horribly afraid, be ye [g]very desolate, saith the LORD.

13 For my people have committed two evils; they have [h]forsaken me, the [i]fountain of living waters, and hewed them out [j]cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water.

14 ¶ Is[k] Israel a servant? is he a home-born slave? why is he spoiled?[2]

15 The[l] young lions[3] roared upon him and yelled,[4] and they made his land waste: his cities are burned without inhabitant.

16 Also[n] the children of Noph and Tahapanes have broken the crown[5] of thy head.

17 Hast[o] thou not procured this unto thyself, in that thou hast forsaken the LORD thy God, when he [p]led thee by the way?

18 ¶ And now [q]what hast thou to do in the way of Egypt, to drink the waters of Sihor? or what hast thou to do in the way of Assyria, to drink the waters of the [6]river?[7]

19 Thine own [r]wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee: know, therefore, and see that it is an evil thing and bitter, that thou hast forsaken the LORD thy God, and that my fear is not in thee, saith the Lord GOD of hosts.

20 For[s] of old time I have broken thy yoke, and burst thy bands; and thou saidst, I [t]will not transgress;[8] when [u]upon every high hill, and under every green tree, thou wanderest, playing the harlot.

21 Yet I had [v]planted thee a noble vine, wholly a right seed; how then art thou [z]turned into the degenerate plant of a strange vine unto me?

22 For [y]though thou wash thee with nitre, and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord GOD.

23 How[z] canst thou say, I am not polluted, I have not gone after Baalim? [a]See thy way in the valley, know what thou hast done; thou art a swift dromedary[9] traversing her ways;

24 A[1] wild ass used[2] to the wilderness, that snuffeth up the wind at her pleasure;[3] in her occasion who can turn her away?[4] all they that seek her will not weary themselves; [b]in her month they shall find her.

25 Withhold[c] thy foot from being unshod, and thy throat from thirst: but thou saidst, [5]There is no hope:[6] no; for I have loved strangers, and after them will I go.

26 As[d] the thief is ashamed[7] when he is found, so is the house of Israel ashamed; they, their kings, their princes, and their priests, and their prophets,

27 Saying to a [e]stock, [g]Thou art my father; and to a stone, Thou hast brought me [8]forth: for they have turned their back[9] unto me, and not their face: but [h]in the time of their trouble they will say, Arise, and save us.

28 But [i]where are thy gods that thou hast made thee? let them arise, if they can save thee in the time of thy trouble:[1] for [j]according to the number of thy cities are thy gods, O Judah.[2]

29 Wherefore[k] will ye plead with me? ye all have transgressed against me, saith the LORD.

30 In vain have I [l]smitten your children: they received no correction: [m]your own sword hath devoured your prophets, like a destroying lion.

2 This was literally true. The Israelites imitated the example of the heathen, who not only worshipped great national deities, but also set up inferior tutelary deities in each city and village, and gave homage to them as their special patrons and protectors. This absurd and degrading superstition has even been introduced into Christian lands; each country and each great city has now its patron saint.—P.

golden calf, Ex. 32. 1–6, throughout all their history, till the Babylonish captivity. Since that period, the tenacity with which they have adhered to their law and traditions, forms an interesting contrast with their former versatility. And no doubt the present decision and tenacity of profession into which Providence has trained them will, when 'their heart turneth to the Lord,' whom they rejected and crucified, render them admirably fitted for that blessed work among the Gentiles, Is. 66. 19, unto which God has destined them in the latter day. C.

Ver. 12. Be astonished, O ye heavens! The heavenly powers who 'desire to look into' the mystery of man's redemption, and with whom there is 'joy over one sinner that repenteth.'—Query, As the sins of professed believers are said even to 'grieve the Holy Spirit,' and 'crucify the Lord afresh,' does not this expression intimate that, even among angels, in heavenly places, there may be a holy sorrow over the sins and apostasies of the church? See Ge. 6. 6; Ps. 95. 10; Ep. 4. 30; He. 6. 6. C.

Ver. 14. Is Israel a servant? God redeemed him from servitude, and made him a son, Ex. 4. 22, wherefore his present enslaved condition must be the punishment of his sins, Is. 50. 1; 52. 3. C.

Ver. 16. Noph was the Hebrew name of Memphis, the capital of Egypt. It stood just at the southern angle of the Delta, where the Nile branched.—Tahapanes, or Daphne, was also an Egyptian city, situated on the border of the country, on the Pelusiac arm of the Nile. These two cities are mentioned as representatives of all Egypt. P.——Broken the crown. By the defeat and death of the good king Josiah, the kingdom was reduced to a tributary province, 2 Ki. 23. 29, 33. C.

Ver. 22. Nitre. Natron, or carbonate of soda, which is found in many parts of Asia and Africa, and when dissolved in hard (acidulous) water, renders it fit for washing. Mixed with oil, it forms one species of soap. C.

Ver. 23. In the valley. The valley of the sons of Hinnom, where they had built the high places of Tophet. See ch. 7. 31; Is. 57. 5.—A swift dromedary. As swift as the dromedary, which, though subjugated, 'traverses (rather twists) her ways' to pass by her master who would impede or stop her from seeking her mate. C.

Ver. 24. A wild ass. As wild as the onager, which, bred in the desert, and unaccustomed to restraint, 'snuffeth up the wind,' and thereby discovering her companions, hastes to them as matter of right.—In her month they shall find her. Her mate will find her without difficulty, because she seeks as earnestly as she is sought: so Israel sought after idolaters as earnestly as idolaters sought after them. C.

Ver. 25. 'Withhold thy foot from being unshod,' as the wilful dromedary or untamable wild ass; 'and thy throat from thirst,' such as they experience in the wilderness—that is, eschew this wilfulness and wildness, and 'let thy feet be shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace,' and drink of the 'well of water springing up unto life eternal.' C.

Ver. 31. Have I been a wilderness—have my ways (ver. 31) been unprepared, my waters bitter or scanty, my food unprovided, my habitation unbuilt? C.

Ver. 34. I have not found it. 'I have not found it in a hole digged' (to hide it, Le. 17. 13), 'but upon every oak' (to expose and proclaim it), as an offering acceptable to abominable idols.—Note, Instead of the words upon all these, in the authorized translation, the ancient versions render it upon every oak, in allusion to the groves in which idols were worshipped, and their impure rites celebrated. C.

Ver. 35. Because I am innocent. I am 'innocent' of idolatry; using graven images, not as gods, but as means of devotion. So say the Hindoos (see Duff's India), so say the Council of Trent (see their decrees): but let Christians see the second commandment, and believe and obey God rather than men. C.

Ver. 36. At the particular period here referred to the Israelites were in great national distress and danger. The armies of Assyria

LORD: [p]Have I been a wilderness unto Israel? a land of darkness? wherefore say my people, We [3]are lords;[4] we will come no more unto thee?

32 Can a maid forget her [q]ornaments, or a bride her attire? yet my people have [r]forgotten me days without number.

33 Why[s] trimmest thou thy way to seek love?[5] therefore hast thou also [t]taught the wicked ones[6] thy ways.

34 Also [u]in thy skirts is found the blood of the souls of the poor innocents:[7] I have not found it by secret search,[8] but upon all these.

35 ¶ Yet thou sayest, [v]Because I am innocent, surely his anger shall turn from me: behold, [z]I will plead with thee, because thou sayest, I have not sinned.

36 Why[y] gaddest thou about so much to change thy way? thou also shalt be ashamed of Egypt, as thou wast ashamed of Assyria.

37 Yea, thou shalt go forth from him,[9] and thine[z] hands upon thine head: for the LORD hath[a] rejected thy confidences, [b]and thou shalt not prosper in them.

CHAPTER III.

1 God inviteth Judah to return to him, notwithstanding her vile whoredom. 6 Judah is worse than Israel. 12 The promises of the gospel to the penitent. 20 Israel reproved, and called by God, maketh a solemn confession of their sins.

THEY say,[1] If a man put away his wife, and she go from him, and become another man's, shall[a] he return unto her again? shall not that land be [b]greatly polluted? but [c]thou hast played the harlot with many lovers; [d]yet return again to me, saith the LORD.

2 Lift up thine eyes unto the [e]high places, and see where thou hast not been lien with: [f]in the ways hast thou sat for them, as the Arabian[2] in the wilderness; and thou hast [h]polluted the land with thy whoredoms and with thy wickedness.

3 Therefore the [i]showers have been withholden, and there hath been no latter rain; and thou hadst a [j]whore's forehead,[3] thou refusedst to be ashamed.

4 Wilt[k] thou not from this time cry unto me, My father, thou art the guide of my youth?

5 Will[l] he reserve his anger for ever? will he keep it to the end? Behold, [m]thou hast spoken and done evil things as thou couldest.[4]

6 ¶ The LORD said also unto me in the days of Josiah the king,[5] Hast thou seen that which backsliding[6] Israel hath done? she is [o]gone up upon every high mountain and under every green tree, and there hath played the harlot.[7]

7 And[p] I said, after she had done all these things, Turn thou unto me; but she returned not. And [q]her treacherous sister Judah saw it.

8 And I saw, [r]when for all the causes whereby backsliding Israel committed adultery, I had put her away, and given her a bill of divorce; yet her [s]treacherous[8] sister Judah feared not, but went and played the harlot also.

9 And it came to pass through the [g]lightness[1] of her whoredom, that [t]she defiled the land, and committed adultery with stones and with stocks.

10 And yet for all this her treacherous sister Judah [u]hath not turned unto me with her whole heart, but [2]feignedly,[3] saith the LORD.

11 And the LORD said unto me, The [v]backsliding Israel hath [z]justified[4] herself more than treacherous Judah.

12 ¶ Go, and proclaim these words toward the [y]north, and say, [z]Return, thou backsliding Israel, saith the LORD, and I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you: for I am [a]merciful, saith the LORD, and I will not keep anger for ever.

13 Only[b] acknowledge thine iniquity, that thou hast transgressed against the LORD thy God, and [c]hast scattered[5] thy ways to the strangers under every green tree, and ye have not obeyed my voice, saith the LORD.

14 Turn,[d] O backsliding children, saith the LORD; for I am [e]married unto you; and [g]I will take you one of a city, and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion:

15 And I will give you [h]pastors according to mine heart, [i]which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding.

16 And it shall come to pass, when ye be [j]multiplied and increased in the land, in those days, saith the LORD, [k]they shall say no more, The ark of the covenant of the LORD; neither shall it come to mind,[6] neither shall they remember it, neither shall they visit it, neither shall that be done[7] any more.

17 At that time they shall call [l]Jerusalem the throne of the LORD: and [n]all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the threatened to overwhelm them. Instead of trusting in God, they turned to Egypt for help. This proved the immediate cause of the overthrow of the Jewish monarchy and the destruction of Jerusalem. P.

REFLECTIONS.—It is honourable for nations, families, and persons to be early beloved by God, and addicted to his service; and safe to be followers of him through every difficulty. But very absurd is it for those who have shared his distinguished favours to apostatize from him to idols, and render him hatred for love; for church-officers to be ringleaders in guilt; and for men at once to belie their profession, affront their God, and cheat themselves out of happiness. Alas! in what slavery, poverty, and disappointment, and endless wandering after idols, do unbelief and forsaking of God issue! With denial of guilt, eagerness, obstinacy, and impudence, do men, abandoned by God, proceed from evil to worse. And it is common for sinners to supplicate relief from God when their idols cannot help them. But dreadful is their case who, under his word, rod, or favours, grow insolent and imperious in wickedness; and when, forgetting God, notwithstanding checks unnumbered, they abound in impiety.

CHAPTER III. As the Jewish nation were espoused to God by special covenant, apostasy and idolatry, or dependence on heathen allies instead of God, are often represented as whoredom, adultery, or fornication, by the prophets. 1–5. Notwithstanding ye have, under the judgments of famine, &c., multiplied your idols and idolatry, and eagerly hunted after companions in it, and opportunities of committing it, in all the corners of your land, and have impudently gone to your very uttermost in speaking and acting the most horrid abominations; yet, without a moment's delay, return unto me as your infinitely gracious Husband and Father. 11. The sins of the ten tribes, who had been long ruined or in a miserable captivity, were far less aggravated than those of Judah, being committed against fewer warnings, mercies, judgments, vows, &c. 12–25. These predictions began to be accomplished in and after the deliverance from Babylon;

LORD, to Jerusalem: neither [o]shall they walk any more after the imagination[8] of their evil heart.

18 In those days the house of Judah [p]shall walk with[9] the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers.[1]

19 But I said, [q]How shall I put thee among the children, and give thee a pleasant land, a goodly heritage[2] of the hosts of nations? and I said, Thou shalt call me, [r]My father; and shalt not turn away from[3] me.

20 ¶ Surely, as a wife treacherously departeth from her husband,[4] so [s]have ye dealt treacherously with me, O house of Israel, saith the LORD.

21 A[t] voice was heard upon the high places,[5] weeping[u] and supplications of the children of Israel: [v]for they have perverted their way, and they have forgotten the LORD their God.

22 Return,[x] ye backsliding children, and I will heal[6] your backslidings. Behold, [y]we come unto thee; for [z]thou art the LORD our God.

23 Truly [a]in vain is salvation hoped for from the hills,[7] and from the multitude of mountains; truly[b] in the LORD our God is the salvation of Israel.

24 For [c]shame hath devoured the labour of our fathers from our youth; their flocks and their herds, their sons and their daughters.

25 We[d] lie down in our shame, and our confusion covereth us: [e]for we have sinned against the LORD our God, we and our fathers, from our [g]youth even unto this day, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD our God.

CHAPTER IV.

1 God calleth Israel by his promises. 3 He exhorteth Judah to repentance by fearful judgments. 19 A grievous lamentation for the miseries of Judah.

IF thou wilt return, O [a]Israel, saith the LORD, return[b] unto me; and if thou wilt put away thine [c]abominations out of my sight, then shalt thou not [d]remove.

2 And [e]thou shalt swear, The LORD liveth, [g]in truth, in judgment, and in righteousness; and [h]the nations shall bless themselves in him, and in him shall they glory.

3 ¶ For thus saith the LORD to the men of Judah and Jerusalem, [i]Break up your fallow ground, and sow not among thorns.

4 Circumcise[j] yourselves to the LORD, and take away the foreskins of your heart, ye men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem; [k]lest my fury come forth like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

5 Declare[l] ye in Judah, and publish in Jerusalem; and say, Blow ye the trumpet in the land: cry, gather together, and say, Assemble yourselves, and let us go into the defenced cities.

6 Set up the standard toward Zion: [1]retire, stay not; for [n]I will bring evil from the [2]north, and a great destruction.[3]

but will be much more fully accomplished in the future return of the twelve tribes to Canaan, and in the glories of the Christian church; especially in the coming age, when converts shall be numerous, ministers and magistrates faithful, ceremonies laid aside, and peace, harmony, faith, and godly sorrow prevail.

Ver. 3. The showers have been withheld, &c. At no time are men more disposed to repine and murmur against Providence than during the time of drought; God therefore again and again directs men's thoughts above the clouds to him who sits in heaven, as the only giver of 'rain and dew and fruitful seasons.' C.

Ver. 12. Here commences a prophecy looking far into the future. It opens with calling Israel from the north—that is, from Media, Persia, the borders of the Caspian, Poland, Lithuania, and other regions lying northerly from Judea; and closes with a period when by conversion to JESUS, commencing with 'one of a city and two of a family,' ver. 14, they shall be 'multiplied and increased in the land'—they shall neither name, remember, nor visit 'the ark of the covenant of the LORD,' ver. 16; and Judah and Israel shall come together out of the land of the north, and shall no more turn from following after the LORD, ver. 17, 18. C.

Ver. 17. That Jerusalem is a name of the church of Christ cannot be questioned. See Ga. 4. 26; He. 12. 22; Re. 21. 2, 3. But that here it signifies the literal Jerusalem can scarcely be doubted by any who considers the literal reality of the sins charged, the judgments inflicted, and, connected with the repentance of Israel, ver. 14, the promise of restoration to 'the land given for an inheritance to their fathers,' ver. 18. See Ro. 11. 26. C.

Ver. 24. Shame. The noted idol Baal was called 'shame,' ch. 11. 13: Ho. 9. 10, from the shameful nature of his worship; and this and similar idolatrous worship devoured Israel's labour continually. This was effected (1) naturally by the habits of dissipation that idolatry fosters; and (2) by the direct and consuming judgments wherewith it is constantly punished. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How base, eager, active, abounding, and impudent in wickedness, apostates from God become! And if we would seriously repent, we must take a particular view of our sins and their aggravations. Unbounded is the mercy of that God of grace with whom we have to do. He is averse to punish with severity; and opens his arms and heart to receive the most enormous transgressors who attempt returning to him by faith. But sad is the case when God's judgments upon our neighbours do not awaken us to detest and avoid their sins; and that, when God bestows reforming magistrates and ministers, many who join in reformation do but dissemble with him. Few backsliders from God are ever recovered. And obstinacy in sin lays bars in the way of our mercies, that nothing less than uncommon stretches of mercy can remove. Earnest are JEHOVAH'S calls to faith and repentance; and strong and moving his gracious encouragements; and it is the assured faith of his special mercy that will most truly produce a true and gracious repentance. Peaceful, harmonious, well governed, conspicuous, and pure is the gospel church when everything in her is according to God's Word. And when his Spirit draws men to himself, deep is their sense of their guilt and folly in departing from and rebelling against him; and cordial their dependence on him, and justification of his judgments.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1–4. If you truly return to me by faith and repentance, and reform from your idolatries, and in a candid and upright manner devote yourselves to and serve me, in whom even the Gentile nations shall in a little time be blessed and glory, your captivity may be prevented. Yet not a mere outward reformation, but deep convictions of conscience, and a thorough renovation of your hearts, and purgation from the sinful corruptions thereof, are necessary to the preventing of my approaching and justly deserved judgments.—30, 31. No devices which ye can use shall avail you: the Egyptians and Chaldeans, whose friendship ye have courted, will forsake or murder you, which will occasion terrible anguish and despair all over the country, but especially at Jerusalem.

Ver. 2. Every one who has studied the prophecies of the Old and New Testaments, and carefully noted the history of nations, must have seen how wonderfully the fate of nations is interwoven with the condition of the Jews. Here the repentance of Israel would not only have suspended or superseded their own captivity and exile, but would have expedited and secured the conversion and happiness of the Gentiles. They did not repent—they were scattered—and but a few of the Gentiles have yet 'blessed themselves in him.'—Note, After a man's own personal salvation, few things should more occupy his thoughts than the present and eternal influence his conduct may exercise over others either for good or evil, happiness or misery. 'A word in season' may be instrumental to convert and 'save a soul alive'—a word may poison the heart of the hearer, and be followed by death and misery. C.

Ver. 10. The prophet neither says nor means that God had 'deceived' the people by telling them any flattering untruth—the ordinary meaning of deception—such an imputation would be insulting to the truth and holiness of God, and unworthy of the divine wisdom of the prophet. But the meaning is, 'that while God had promised peace to a penitent people forsaking their idolatry and returning to the Lord,' the Jews, appropriating the promise without realizing the character, have been deceived; and, in this sense only, were deceived by the Lord. In another view God is said to have 'deceived the people;' that is, false prophets prophesied, saying, 'Peace, peace! when there was no peace;' but the people loved and preferred these false prophesyings, and detested the truth, wherefore God 'gave them up to strong delusions,' and is therefore said to have done that which he judicially condemned an unbelieving, impenitent, and self-willed people to underlie. C.

Ver. 15. Dan. The north-eastern extremity of Palestine, at which the Babylonians, coming from Damascus, entered the Holy Land. See ver. 6. C.

Ver. 16. Watchers, besiegers. An army, not of temporary marauders, but fully instructed in all the arts of war and endurance of watchfulness. C.

Ver. 17. Grain fields, early ripe, require, in most countries, protection against birds, which, when affrighted from one part of the field, fly to another, and so require the guards to go 'round about' it. In Arabia the ripening grain requires to be strongly guarded against robbers, and as the fields are unfenced, the guards must surround them on all sides.—See Sir J. Chardin. C.

Ver. 19. Is this the exclamation of Israel, of the prophet, or of the LORD himself? Israel could not say, 'I have heard, O my soul, the sound of the trumpet!' for this was that sound which they sottishly refused to hear. Neither can it be the prophet, for he speaks of 'my tents' and 'my people' who 'have not known me.' This last phrase unquestionably designates Messiah. And as the speaker, throughout the whole discourse, ver. 19–26, is one, speaking uniformly in the first person, the whole must be understood of Messiah himself speaking prophetically as in 'the days of his flesh,' even as when he came near the city, looked upon it, and wept. C.

Ver. 25. No man. At the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, no Jew was left in it, unless such as hid themselves in subterraneous passages. The expression 'no man' may, however, be justly interpreted—'no man' was seen who stood up for order and defence. C.

Ver. 26. All the cities. Jerusalem, Acre, and Jaffa alone remain, the mere skeletons of their former glory. All the other cities of Judea have sunk either into mere villages or absolute ruins; so complete is the desolation, that of many the sites cannot be ascertained.—See Wylie's Modern Judea, p. 318–369. C.

Ver. 28. For this shall the earth mourn, &c. This expression alludes to a well-known fact in human nature—that is, that everything, yea, the very sunshine, looks gloomy and dismal to the man whose heart is darkened by hopeless distress—that feels the rod of punishment without the consolations of faith, humiliation, and repentance. C.

Ver. 30. Though thou rendest thy face with painting. 'Though thou distend thine eyes with paint' (Boothroyd). The allusion is to the eastern practice of painting the brows and edges of the eyelids black, which gives the white an enlarged and distended the destroyer of the Gentiles is on his way; he is gone forth from his place to make thy land desolate: and thy cities shall be laid waste without an inhabitant.

STREET IN TIBERIAS — ONE OF THE CENTERS OF JEWISH CULTURE AND WORSHIP SINCE THE DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM. [JEREMIAH, iv: 1.]—"If thou wilt return, O Israel, saith the Lord, return unto me; and if thou wilt put away thine abominations out of my sight, then thou shalt not remove." We give a street scene in Tiberias because of the view it enables us to get of modern Israelites. After the destruction of Jerusalem, Tiberias became the chief seat of the Jews. In the second century the Sanhedrin was removed here, and here was a great rabbinical school. There are now about three thousand people in this city, nearly two thousand of whom are Jews. They are easily recognized. Many of them have their hair in ringlets, and nearly all look pale and effeminate. Most of them, like the Jews in Jerusalem, live on charity. There is something pathetic about the way these ancient people of God hang about Jerusalem and Tiberias.

8 For this [p]gird you with sackcloth, lament and howl; for the fierce anger of the LORD [q]is not turned back from us.

9 And it shall come to pass at that day, saith the LORD, that [r]the heart of the king shall perish, and the heart of the princes; and [s]the priests shall be astonished, and the prophets shall wonder.

10 Then said I, Ah, Lord GOD! surely thou hast[t] greatly deceived this people and Jerusalem, saying, [u]Ye shall have peace; whereas the sword [v]reacheth unto the soul.

11 At that time shall it be said to this people and to Jerusalem, [w]A dry wind of the high places in the wilderness toward the daughter of my people, [y]not to fan, nor to cleanse,[5]

12 Even a full wind from those[6] places shall come unto me:[7] now also will I give sentence[8] against them.

13 Behold, [z]he shall come[9] up as clouds, and his chariots shall be as a whirlwind: [a]his horses are swifter than eagles. Woe unto us! for we are spoiled.

14 O Jerusalem, [b]wash thine heart from wickedness, that thou mayest be saved: how long shall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee?

16 Make ye mention to the nations; behold, publish against Jerusalem, that watchers[3] come from a far country, and [c]give out their voice against the cities of Judah.

17 As[d] keepers of a field are they against her round about; because [e]she hath been rebellious against me, saith the LORD.

18 Thy[g] way and thy doings have procured these things unto thee: this is thy wickedness,[4] because it is bitter, because it reacheth unto thine heart.

19 ¶ My[h] bowels, my bowels! I am pained at my very heart;[5] my heart maketh a noise in me; I cannot hold my peace, because [i]thou hast heard, O my soul, the sound of the trumpet, the alarm of war.

20 Destruction[j] upon destruction is cried: for the whole land is spoiled: suddenly are my tents[k] spoiled, and my curtains in a moment.

21 How[l] long shall I see the standard, and hear the sound of the trumpet?

* The prophet here seems to look away down the long vista of the future, and to see in perspective spoiler after spoiler wasting and desolating Palestine, until at length, in the fulness of the prophetic period, the whole country is desolate. The first general ruin was wrought by the armies of Babylon; the final one by the Romans. The language of Jeremiah is now completely fulfilled. Time has converted prophetic declarations into history. The mountains, hills, plains, cities, and villages of Palestine are, as compared with ancient times, 'desolate;' yet there is not 'a full end,' for a remnant has been left.—P.

22 For[m] my people is foolish, they have not known me; they are sottish children, and they have none understanding: [o]they are wise to do evil, but to do good they have no knowledge.

23 I[p] beheld the earth,[6] and, lo, it was without form and void; and the heavens,[7] and they had no light.

24 I[q] beheld the mountains,[8] and, lo, they trembled, and all the hills moved lightly.

25 I beheld, and, lo, [r]there was no man, and all the birds[9] of the heavens were fled.

26 I beheld, and, lo, [s]the fruitful place was a wilderness, and all the cities thereof were broken down at [t]the presence of the LORD, and by his fierce anger.

27 For thus hath the LORD said, The whole land shall be desolate; [u]yet will I not make a full end.

28 For[v] this shall the earth mourn, and the heavens above be black: because [x]I have spoken it, I have purposed it, and will not repent, neither will I turn back from it.

29 The [y]whole city shall flee for the noise of the horsemen and bowmen; they shall go into thickets, and climb up upon the rocks: every city shall be forsaken, and not a man dwell therein.[1]

30 And when thou art spoiled, [z]what wilt thou do? though thou clothest thyself with crimson,[2] though thou deckest thee with ornaments of gold, though thou rentest thy [3]face with painting, [a]in vain shalt thou make thyself fair: thy lovers will despise thee, they will seek thy life.

31 For I have heard a voice [b]as of a woman in travail, and the anguish as of her that bringeth forth her first child; the voice of [c]the daughter of Zion, that bewaileth herself, that [d]spreadeth her hands, saying, Woe is me now! for my soul is wearied [e]because of murderers.

CHAPTER V.

1 The judgments of God upon the Jews, for their perverseness, 7 for their adultery, 10 for their impiety, 19 for their contempt of God, 25 and for their great corruption in the civil state, 30 and their prevarication in religion.

RUN ye to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem, and see now, and know, and seek in the broad places thereof, [a]if ye can find a man, if there be any that executeth judgment, that seeketh the truth; and I will pardon it.

2 And[1] though they say, The LORD liveth; surely they swear falsely.

3 O LORD, [b]are not thine eyes upon the truth? thou hast [c]stricken them, but they have appearance, which custom has converted into an artificial beauty. Sin, so foolish, and so weak is humanity in departing from nature, when forsaking God! C.

REFLECTIONS.—Thrice blessed are the fruits of true and gospel repentance! But great accuracy is requisite in turning to the Lord, in dedicating ourselves to him, or swearing by his name. And deep convictions, and an effectual change of heart, is necessary to the extirpation of indwelling lusts. How great is JEHOVAH'S love to Gentile sinners! But dreadful is his wrath; and it is mad to kindle it upon ourselves by our sins! For furious, swift, terrible, and ruinous are the miseries, the effects of his justice upon impenitent sinners! It is vain to flee into defenced cities, or to attempt being courageous, under a sense of guilt. And those prophets who flatter men with vain hopes will most certainly perish along with those whom they have seduced and hardened in wickedness. Our ruin is wholly of ourselves. And it is criminal and absurd to be obstinate in wickedness when God's judgments are just falling on our heads. Hard is the heart which is not affected when destructive calamities befall the nation or church, and all created confidences concur to their ruin. And if such anguish and despair take place in the overthrow of nations, what must take place among the wicked in the last judgment, and in the eternal damnation of hell!

not grieved; thou hast consumed them, but they[d] have refused to receive correction: they have made their faces harder than a rock; they have refused to return.

4 Therefore I said, [e]Surely these are poor; they are foolish: for they know not the way of the LORD, nor the judgment of their God.

5 I will get me unto [g]the great men, and will speak unto them: for they have known the way of the LORD, and the judgment of their God: but these [h]have altogether broken the yoke, and burst the bonds.[2]

6 Wherefore a lion[3] out of the forest shall slay them, and [i]a wolf of the evenings[4] shall spoil them, a leopard shall watch over their cities: every one that goeth out thence shall be torn in pieces; [j]because their transgressions are many, and their backslidings are increased.[5]

7 ¶ How[k] shall I pardon[6] thee for this? thy children have forsaken me, and [l]sworn by them that are no gods: when [m]I had fed them to the full, they then committed adultery, and assembled themselves by troops in the harlots' houses.

8 They[o] were as fed horses in the morning: every one neighed after his neighbour's wife.

9 Shall[p] I not visit for these things? saith the LORD: and shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?[7]

10 ¶ Go[q] ye up upon her walls, and destroy; but [r]make not a full end: take away her battlements; for they are not the LORD'S.[8]

11 For the house of Israel and the house of Judah have [s]dealt very treacherously against me, saith the LORD.

12 They [t]have belied the LORD, and said, It is not he,[9] neither shall evil come upon us, neither shall we see sword nor famine:

13 And[u] the prophets shall become wind,[1] and the word is not in them: thus shall it be done unto them.[2]

14 Wherefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, Because ye speak this word, [v]behold, I will make my words in thy mouth fire, and this people wood, and it shall devour them.

15 ¶ Lo, [x]I will bring a nation upon you from far, O [y]house of Israel,[3] saith the LORD: it is a mighty nation, it is an ancient nation, a nation whose language thou knowest not, neither understandest what they say.

16 Their[4] quiver is as an open sepulchre, they are all mighty men.

17 And[z] they shall eat up thine harvest, and thy bread, which thy sons and thy daughters should eat: they shall eat up thy flocks and thine herds: they shall eat up thy vines and thy fig-trees: they shall impoverish thy fenced cities, wherein thou trustedst, with the sword.

18 Nevertheless in those days, saith the LORD, I [a]will not make a full end with you.

19 And it shall come to pass, when ye shall say, [b]Wherefore doeth the LORD our God all these things unto us? then shalt thou answer them, [c]Like as ye have forsaken me, and served strange gods in your land; so shall ye serve strangers in a land that is not yours.

20 ¶ Declare this in the house of Jacob, and publish it in Judah, saying,

21 Hear now this, [d]O foolish people, and without understanding;[5] which have eyes, and see not; which have ears, and hear not:

22 Fear[e] ye not me? saith the LORD: [g]will ye not tremble at my presence, which [h]have placed the sand[6] for the bound of the sea, by a perpetual decree, that it cannot pass it; and though the waves thereof toss themselves, yet can they not prevail; though they roar, yet can they not pass over it?

23 But[i] this people hath a revolting and a rebellious heart; they are revolted and gone.

24 Neither [j]say they in their heart, [k]Let us now fear the LORD our God, [l]that giveth rain, both the former and the latter, in his season: he reserveth unto us the [n]appointed weeks of the harvest.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 3. Thou requirest and regardest upright dealings; but they, under all thy lesser judgments, have stupified themselves, and become more and more stubborn and rebellious. 12–14. They have contradicted the faithful messages of God by his prophets, and pretended that they spoke of themselves in foretelling calamities; and that their words were but a mere puff of noisy wind, which would neither profit nor hurt anybody, unless they should be fulfilled on themselves. Therefore God's words by Jeremiah shall be accomplished in the fearful destruction of them and their country. 31. The prophets fit their predictions to the ambitious humours of the priests and princes; the people delight to be flattered with promises of prosperity; and what can these things end in but ruin to you all?

Ver. 2. Neither word nor oath could be believed—a state to which idolatry, superstition, and libertinism speedily conduct any people.—Note, Where God is not honoured, in vain do men talk of honour. They raise an idol, and they worship it, so long and so far as that worship pleases them; and then, like other idols, it is cast down, and, as 'wicked men and seducers wax worse and worse,' some baser idol of lust or avarice is reared in its stead. So was it with Israel, so will it ever be with unrenewed human nature. C.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The enemies sent against Judah encourage themselves. 6 God setteth them on work because of their sins. 9 The prophet lamenteth the judgments of God because of their sins. 18 He proclaimeth God's wrath. 26 He calleth the people to mourn for the judgment on their sins.

O YE[a] children of Benjamin, gather yourselves to flee out of the midst of Jerusalem, and [b]blow the trumpet in Tekoa, and set up a sign of fire[1] in [c]Beth-haccerem:[2] for[d] evil appeareth out of the north, and great destruction.

2 I have likened the daughter of Zion[3] to a comely[4] and delicate woman.[5]

3 The shepherds[6] with their flocks shall come unto her: [e]they shall pitch their tents against her round about; they shall feed every one in his place.

4 Prepare[g] ye war against her; arise, and let us go up at noon. [h]Woe unto us! for the day goeth away, [i]for the shadows of the evening are stretched out.

5 Arise, and let us go by night, and [j]let us destroy her palaces.

6 ¶ For thus hath the LORD of hosts said, Hew[k] ye down trees,[7] and cast a mount[8] against Jerusalem: this is the city to be visited; she is wholly[l] oppression in the midst of her.

7 As[m] a fountain casteth out her waters, so she casteth out her wickedness: violence and spoil is heard in her; before me continually is grief and wounds.

8 Be[o] thou instructed, O Jerusalem, [p]lest my soul [q]depart[1] from thee; lest [q]I make thee desolate, a land not inhabited.

9 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [r]They shall throughly glean the remnant of Israel as a vine: turn back thine hand as a grape-gatherer into the baskets.[2]

10 To[s] whom shall I speak, and give warning, that they may hear? behold, [t]their ear is uncircumcised, and they cannot hearken: behold, [u]the word of the LORD is unto them a reproach; they have no delight in it.[3]

11 Therefore [v]I am full of the fury of the LORD; I am weary with holding in: [x]I will pour it out upon [y]the children abroad, and upon the assembly of young men together: for [z]even the husband with the wife shall be taken, the aged with him that is full of days.

12 And [a]their houses shall be turned unto others, with their fields and wives together: for I[b] will stretch out my hand upon the inhabitants of the land, saith the LORD.

* Tekoa stood on a projecting shoulder of the mountain range about half-way between Jerusalem and Hebron, and the view from it commands nearly the whole wilderness of Judah, with a large section of the Jordan valley. The site of Beth-haccerem ('The house of the vineyard') has not been with certainty identified, but it may possibly be the lofty conical hill, a short distance from Bethlehem, which is the most conspicuous feature in the whole region. Signal fires lighted on those two places would rouse all Judah.—P.

15 Were they [e]ashamed when they had committed abomination? nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush: therefore [g]they shall fall among them that fall: at the time that I visit them they shall be cast down, saith the LORD.

16 Thus saith the LORD, [h]Stand ye in the ways, and see, [i]and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, [j]and walk therein, and ye shall [k]find rest for your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein.

REFLECTIONS.—Terrible and manifold are the corruptions of apostate nations and churches. One sin introduces another, till all ranks become absolute monsters in guilt. And, alas! great men, fattened by prosperity or power, are often the most active patterns in, or promoters of, wickedness. Very grating to multitudes of hearers are the faithful messages of God's ministers. But God will make them to know at last whose words shall stand, whether his or theirs. When professors of the true religion live destitute of the fear of God, nothing is so horrible or unnatural but they will commit it. And it is dreadful when men have carried their sins to such a height that God cannot longer forbear punishing them without violating the honour of his perfections. Nothing more hastens things to this crisis than combinations of ministers and magistrates to support one another in wickedness, and corrupt the nation between them.

1 Jeremiah is sent to call for true repentance, to prevent the Jews' captivity. 8 God rejecteth their vain confidence, 12 by the example of Shiloh. 17 He threateneth them for their idolatry. 21 He rejecteth the sacrifices of the disobedient. 29 He exhorteth to mourn for their abominations in Tophet, 32 and the judgments for the same.

2 Stand in the [b]gate of the LORD's house, and proclaim there this word, and say, [c]Hear the word of the LORD, all ye of Judah, that enter in at these gates to worship the LORD.

3 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, [d]Amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place.

4 Trust[e] ye not in lying words, saying, [g]The temple of the LORD, the temple of the LORD, the temple of the LORD, are these.

5 For [h]if ye throughly amend your ways and your doings; if ye throughly execute judgment between a man and his neighbour;

6 If[i] ye oppress not the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, and shed not innocent blood in this place, [j]neither walk after other gods to your hurt:

7 Then[k] will I cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that I gave to your fathers, for ever and ever.[2]

8 ¶ Behold, [l]ye trust in lying words, that cannot profit.

9 Will[m] ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods [o]whom ye know not;

10 And[p] come and stand before me in this house, which is called by my name,[3] and say, We are delivered to do all these abominations?

11 Is[q] this house, which is called by my name, become a den of robbers in your eyes? [r]behold, even I have seen it, saith the LORD.

12 But go ye now unto my place [s]which was in Shiloh,[4] where I set my name at the first, and see [t]what I did to it for the wickedness of my people Israel.

2 The nature and necessity of true piety and genuine practical godliness, are as fully set forth and as strongly enjoined by the prophets as by the apostles. The writings of Jeremiah are especially rich in practical exhortations. In no part of the Bible is the folly of mere religious formalism more clearly shown. Christian nations may learn most important lessons from this book; and the cold ritualist may well tremble as he reads.—P.

helpless, weak, and terrified, the enemies shall surround the city, and encourage one another, day and night, to give the assault, and destroy it. 9–11. By repeated murders and captivities they shall desolate the country. But to what purpose shall I warn this careless, ignorant, and hardened generation, who detest every message that comes from God, and reckon reproofs slanderous reproaches? Therefore my r...nd is so full of prophetic threatenings, and of zeal to utter them, that I cannot any longer forbear, but I must denounce destruction to persons of all ages, ranks, and relations. 14. The priests and prophets, instead of faithful reproofs for sin, and denunciation of approaching judgments, do, by their flattering and false predictions of peace, lull the people into a fatal security. 16, 17. Inquire after, and walk in, the good old way of faith and holiness prescribed in paradise, and walked in by your pious ancestors; and thus shall you find both temporal and eternal happiness.—Hearken to the voice of God's ministers, charging you with your sins, and warning you of approaching judgments. 18. Let therefore the heathen nations around observe to what height of wickedness and ripeness for judgments they are arrived! 27–30. I have therefore, under my own infallible protection, set up Jeremiah to observe and reprove their conduct. But they are obstinately wicked, abandoned to lying, slander, and every other base and abominable thing, corrupting themselves and one another. The instructions and admonitions of prophets, and the rebukes of Providence, are of no avail to reform them. Therefore they must be utterly rejected of God and men, as useless and abominable.

Ver. 1. Children of Benjamin. Jerusalem was situated partly in the lot of Benjamin, partly in that of Judah. The exhortation seems directed to Benjamin, either because the supreme power and consequent misrule lay in the hands of Judah, or perhaps they were less depraved than their brethren, and therefore more likely to listen to advice; or, by selecting the tribe among whom he dwelt, the prophet may have hoped to stir up the other to a holy jealousy. See Ro. 10. 19; 11. 11. C.

Ver. 3. Several of the predatory nations of the East are still, not partially, but universally, both soldiers and shepherds. And even at this day the Arabs with their flocks occupy the best of the land of Judea, combining the fearful characters of robber and murderer with that of shepherd. C.

Ver. 4, 5. The first clause conveys God's commission of judgment; the second, the alacrity of the summoned host to 'go up at noon'—the usual time of repose; the third declares their grief that they have not arrived in time to see to do the work of destruction; while ver. 5 declares their impatience for a night attack—the ordinary time for the assault of fortresses. C.

Ver. 6. Cast a mount against Jerusalem. The original is not a raised mount to overlook the walls, but any missile cast against them. The ballista, the catapulta, and the scorpion were, in point of fact, enormous bows, variously contrived, by means of springs, ropes, and levers, for shooting arrows or stones against besieged places. C.

Ver. 14. The Jewish priests held the office of physician, as may be seen in the law of the leper, where the symptoms of the disease are most accurately described, and the completeness of the cure most imperatively required. But as the soul is more precious than the body, so is the effectual cure of its diseases proportionally important. To this neither prophet nor priest had attended; but contented themselves with inculcating a narrow and superficial morality, without insisting upon the bodies being presented 'living sacrifices,' and their hearts 'transformed' by 'the renewing' of the Holy Spirit, Ro. 12. 1, 2. C.

Ver. 16. Antiquity, as such, is entitled to no veneration in things civil or religious; for if it were, then were violence and oppression venerable institutions, Ge. 6. 5, 11, 13; then were unbelief and idolatry worthy of all acceptation, Ge. 6. 3; Jos. 24. 2. Antiquity is venerable and authoritative just so far as its records and practices are 'good,' that is, authorized of God; and so far as they give 'rest to the soul,' that is, lead men to JESUS, his righteousness and service, Mat. 11. 28. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Sinners must often be alarmed before they will awaken. But fixed is the connection between national sins and national judgments. And the more luxurious and delicate people have lived, their calamity is the more insupportable. When an angry God is the leader, eager and alert to follow are the instruments of his wrath. But, O! how he multiplies his kind, though severe, admonitions before he strikes the fatal blow that desolates the country! Yet no direction, no warning, no good pattern, will prevail with hardened despisers of Christ—the way, the truth, and the life. His judgments on such must therefore appear righteous to every rational beholder. Nor can any pretences to devotion or reformation avail while men continue abandoned to wickedness. Yea, dreadful and desperate must be the issue with those upon whom not all the repeated pains of prophets and providences make any suitable impression.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 4. Do not imagine that, because the temple has been the place of God's special residence, he will never forsake it, but uphold it for ever. 9–11. Will ye practise the vilest abominations, and presumptuously appear in my courts, as if ceremonial services could atone for your guilt, and procure you a new indulgence in sin? Is my temple become a refuge for such notorious criminals? 21. You may eat or do what you please with all your offerings, for I detest them.

Ver. 4. Either these courts, and buildings, and apartments, or these worshippers, are the temple of the LORD. In the one view the Jews trusted in the temple as their protection, ver. 14, supposing it had preserved Judah when the ten tribes were carried away: in the other view, they 'trusted in themselves that they were righteous,' and would be preserved on account of the covenant with Abraham, or their own ceremonial observances. C.

Ver. 10. We are delivered, &c. As if they had said, We have been delivered from Egypt, from the perils of the wilderness, from the Philistines, from Sennacherib, and all other enemies, that we might enjoy this freedom of worshipping the gods of our own choice, and practising those rites that the over-scrupulous prophets call 'abominations,' but which we consider rational worship of the 'gods that brought us up out of the land of Egypt,' Ex. 32. 4. C.

Ver. 21. The burnt-offerings were wholly consumed, Le. 1. 9, but only the fat of the peace-offerings. The rest belonged to the priest, and was spent in a religious festival, Le. 7. 29–34; De. 12. 11, 12. God here authorizes them to eat of both; as, being the offerings of hypocrisy and pollution, both were equally unacceptable to him. C.

Ver. 22. This statement draws no contrast between 'ceremonial observances and spiritual duties,' nor asserts any comparative superiority of the one over the other. It merely relates a simple fact—that God neither 'spake nor commanded' anything concerning burnt-offerings or sacrifice in 'the day' that he brought Israel out of the land of Egypt. That 'day' was the day of passing the Red Sea—the last of Egypt, the first of freedom. See Ex. 15. 26. Neither was there, in the moral law, anything spoken or commanded concerning burnt-offering or sacrifice, see Ex. 20. 1–17; nor was it until the people had, through fear, 'removed and stood afar off,' and prayed that God should speak to Moses, and not to them, that any mention was made of sacrifice, Ex. 20. 24. C.

Ver. 25. Rising up early. As every word of God is fraught with plenitude of meaning, the frequent mention of 'rising up early' is not to be regarded as a casual expression, but as a divine lesson, delivered by example, in favour of early rising—a practice alike conducive to health of body, soundness of intellect, and growth in grace. C.

Ver. 27. Since God knew they would not answer, why did he send? Many evident reasons might be assigned, but the most obvious is sufficient:—though they might not answer, others might take warning by their sin of neglect and severity of punishment. C.

Ver. 33. Tophet was situated at, or close to, the junction of the glens of Hinnom and Kidron, just outside the walls of the ancient city of Jerusalem, and in full view of the temple on Moriah. It is encompassed by high rocks and naked cliffs, and every rock and cliff is honey-combed with tombs. It is a literal fact that

RUINS OF SHILOH—WHERE ABIJAH THE PROPHET LIVED. [JEREMIAH, vii:12.]—"But go ye now into my place which was in Shiloh, where I set my name at the first, and see what I did to it for the wickedness of my people in Israel." It is said in Joshua, xviii:1, that "the whole congregation of the children of Israel assembled together at Shiloh, and set up the tabernacle of the congregation there;" but because of Israel's wickedness the Philistines were permitted to smite and slay them in Shiloh, so that there fell in Israel 30,000 footmen, and the ark of God was taken here, and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were slain. Here we have the ruins of this city where the ark of the covenant remained so long. It is about 20 miles north of Jerusalem, on the way to Nazareth. There is nothing here but broken ruins. In May, when this scene was taken, this whole region was illuminated with flowers.

18 The[c] children gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead their dough, to make cakes to the [8]queen[9] of heaven,[1] and to pour out drink-offerings unto other gods, that they[d] may provoke me[2] to anger.

19 Do[e] they provoke me to anger? saith the LORD: do they not provoke themselves,[3] to the confusion of their own faces?

20 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [g]Behold, mine anger and my fury shall be poured out upon this place, upon man, and upon beast, and upon the trees of the field, and upon the fruit of the ground; and it shall burn, and shall not be quenched.

21 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; [h]Put your burnt-offerings unto your sacrifices, and eat flesh.

22 For [i]I spake not unto your fathers, nor commanded them in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, concerning[4] burnt-offerings or sacrifices:

23 But this thing commanded I them, saying, [j]Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people; and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you.

24 But [k]they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but walked in the counsels and in the imagination[5] of their evil heart, and went[6] backward,[1] and not forward.

25 Since the [n]day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day, I have even [o]sent unto you all my servants the prophets, daily rising up early, and sending them:

26 Yet[p] they hearkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear, but hardened their neck: they did worse than their fathers.

Her worship was introduced into Israel at a very early period, and was often accompanied by most immoral and lascivious rites. 28 But thou shalt say unto them, [r]This is a nation that obeyeth not the voice of the LORD their God, nor receiveth correction:[7] truth is perished, and is cut off from their mouth.

29 ¶ Cut[s] off thine hair,[8] O Jerusalem, and cast it away, and take up a lamentation on high places;[9] for the LORD [t]hath rejected and forsaken the [u]generation of his wrath.

30 For the children of Judah have done evil in my sight, saith the LORD: they have set [v]their abominations in the house which is called by my name, to pollute it.

31 And they have built the [x]high places of Tophet,[1] which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and their daughters in the fire; which I [y]commanded them [2]not, neither came it into[3] my heart.

32 ¶ Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, [z]that it shall no more be called Tophet, nor, The valley of the son of Hinnom, but, The valley of slaughter: for they shall bury in Tophet till there be no place.

33 And the [a]carcases of this people shall be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth; and none shall fray them away.

34 Then [b]will I cause to cease from the cities of Judah, and from the streets of Jerusalem, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness,[4] the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride; for the land shall be desolate.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The calamity of the Jews, both dead and alive. 4 The prophet upbraideth their foolish and shameless impenitency. 13 He showeth their grievous judgment, 18 and bewaileth their desperate estate.

AT that[1] time, saith the LORD, they shall bring out the bones of the kings of Judah, and the bones of his princes, and the bones of the priests, and the bones of the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of their graves:

2 And they shall spread them before the sun, and the moon, and all the host of heaven, [a]whom they have loved, and whom they have served, and after whom they have walked, and whom they have sought, and whom they have worshipped: [b]they shall not be gathered, nor be buried; [c]they shall be for dung upon the face of the earth.[2]

they have buried in Tophet until there is no place. As I returned from a visit to this spot to my temporary abode on Olivet, in the gray twilight of a summer evening, I saw what appeared to me to be a terrible illustration of the fulfilment of this strange prophecy. I saw hyænas, jackals, and vultures tearing the corpses from the shallow graves in the modern Jewish cemetery on the side of the Kidron. With what harrowing vividness did the prophet's dire prediction then flash upon my mind! P.

REFLECTIONS.—God's ministers have need of great boldness in facing multitudes of obstinate sinners. And it is common for the most profligate hypocrites to hope that their external privileges will recommend them to the favour of God, and even to use them as encouragements to the most horrid impieties. One public judgment of God is ordinarily a presage of another, as well as a warning to avoid the causes of it. But, alas! hopeless is their case for whom God's people must not pray! And yet how readily children confirm the denunciations of God against their parents, by following their evil courses! Ceremonies and forms of devotion do but provoke God more and more against men, who prefer them to the standing duties of morality. Slow and gradual, but at last most certain, are his judgments upon obstinate transgressors. And hardened and barbarous sinners have their crimes fearfully marked in their punishment, and are made to change their sinful mirth into everlasting anguish.

CHAPTER VIII. Ver. 4–9. Though they are fallen life by all the residue of them that remain of this evil family, which remain in all the places whither I have driven them, saith the LORD of hosts.

4 ¶ Moreover, thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD; [c]Shall they fall, and not arise? shall he turn away, and not return?

5 Why then is this people of Jerusalem slidden[g] back by a perpetual backsliding? [h]they hold fast deceit, [i]they refuse to return.

6 [j]I hearkened and heard, but they spake not aright: [k]no man repented him of his wickedness, saying, What have I done? every one turned to his course, [l]as the horse rusheth into the battle.

7 Yea, [m]the stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times; [n]and the turtle, and the crane, and the swallow, observe the time of their coming: but my people know not the judgment of the LORD.[3]

8 How[p] do ye say, We are wise, and the law of the LORD is with us? Lo, certainly [q]in vain[4] made he it; the pen of the scribes is in vain.[5]

9 The[r] wise men are ashamed,[6] they are dismayed and taken: lo, they have rejected the word of the LORD; and what [s]wisdom[7] is in them?

10 Therefore [t]will I give their wives unto others, and their fields to them that shall inherit[8] them: [u]for every one, from the least even unto the greatest, is given to covetousness; from the prophet even unto the priest, every one dealeth falsely.

11 For[v] they have healed the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace.

12 Were[z] they ashamed when they had committed abomination? nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush: therefore shall they fall among them that fall; [y]in the time of their visitation they shall be cast down, saith the LORD.

13 ¶ I will surely consume[9] them, saith the LORD: [z]there shall be no grapes on the vine, nor figs on the fig-tree, and the leaf shall fade; and the things that I have given them shall pass away from them.[1]

14 Why do we sit still? [a]assemble yourselves, and let us enter into the defenced cities, and let us [b]be silent there; for the LORD our God hath [c]put us to silence, and given us [d]water of [2]gall to drink, because we have sinned against the LORD.

15 We [e]looked for peace, but no good came; and for a time of health, and behold trouble!

16 The[g] snorting of his horses was heard from Dan;[3] the[h] whole land trembled at the sound of the neighing of his strong ones; for they are come,[4] and have devoured the land, and all that is in it;[5] the city, and those that dwell therein.

17 For, behold, I will send [i]serpents,[6] cockatrices, among you, which will not be charmed, and they shall bite you, saith the LORD.

18 ¶ When I would comfort myself against sorrow, [j]my heart is faint in[7] me.[8]

19 Behold, [k]the voice of the cry of the daughter of my people, [l]because of them that dwell in a far country:[9] Is[n] not the LORD in Zion? [o]is not her king in her? why have they provoked me[1] to anger with their graven images, and with strange vanities?

into grievous calamities, they will hearken to no counsel that will tend to their recovery; but persevering in their wickedness, they continue firmly trusting to the flattering delusions of their false prophets. Scarcely one of them seriously thinks what he has done; but in general they rush forward into abominable practices, quite thoughtless and regardless of danger. More brutish than the fowls of heaven, they have no proper discernment either of God's mercies or judgments.—Though God has given them his law, and it has been copied out and expounded to them, and they even boast of it, yet they make no good use of it. Their politicians can advise nothing for their relief, and indeed show themselves arrant fools by their rejection of God's word. 18–20. I am almost overcome with grief to hear the cries of the people, occasioned by the ravage of the Chaldeans. How comes it that we, who are God's people, and have his temple among us, are thus destroyed by profane heathens? It is because of our idolatries; and after all our looking for assistance from the Egyptians or others, the season is past, and no help is come. 22. All means of help fail, because we continue obstinate in our sin.

Ver. 2. It seems natural to the living man to be anxious about his dead body. This natural feeling seems heightened by the hope and assurance of a resurrection. Whatever therefore interferes with the repose of the grave, seems equally to violate the feelings of nature and religion. Such violation, however, may arise (1), From rude, irreverent, and savage neglect or contempt. (2) In condemnation of some sin of the dead, and as a lesson to the living; thus Josiah burned the bones of the idolaters on the altar at Bethel, 2 Ki. 23. 16, 20. (3) As matter of idle curiosity or science; thus the mummies of Egypt form an ordinary article of European commerce among the learned. (4) They have not unfrequently been dragged from their resting-places as manure for the earth. (5) Less frequently, and less extensively, for the purpose of superstitious and unholy rites. (6) For the purpose of clearing the sepulchral vaults as dwelling-places for a wretched and houseless population; of which fact examples are often found in various parts of Western Asia. C.

Ver. 3. Death shall be chosen rather than life. Examples of the voluntary choice of death have frequently occurred among the Jews when cruelly persecuted under pretence of religion, but really on account of their wealth and usury. Thus, during the reign of king John, in the city of York in England, a large party, having first put their wives and children to death, set fire to the place in which they were assailed, and, with all their riches, perished miserably by their own hands. C.

Ver. 16. The snorting of his horses. Many eastern armies are altogether composed of horsemen; all others, and they are often very numerous, are mere camp-followers, and never engaged in battle. C.

Ver. 21. I am black. A phrase signifying the deepest melancholy and distress—an allusion to the overcasting of the sky with black clouds before a storm, ch. 14. 2; Joel 2. 6; Na. 2. 10. C.

Ver. 22. Balm in Gilead. The Balsamum judaicum has been celebrated by Pliny, Tacitus, &c., for its costliness, its medicinal virtues, and as the product of Judea alone, and of one particular spot in that country which Josephus assigns to Jericho. Bochart, however, considers the Gilead balm to be the resin of the terebinth, which grows abundantly in that district; and as it and similar products are often used in dressing wounds at particular stages, this opinion seems the most probable. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Barbarous is the outrage of bloody conquerors in sporting with the remains of the dead. But it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of an angry God, who can stretch out his hand to death and damnation to devour us. Just is his judgment in exposing idolaters, even when dead, before the idols which they had loved and worshipped in life; and fearful is the state when life becomes a burden, and men prefer to it a random leap into eternity. How obstinate against God, how attached to apostasy and self-imposition, how heedless of their own conduct, and how regardless of God's Word, do most men live! But none are more distinguished plagues to nations than evil, flattering, and impudent clergy. Nor shall any in hell have a deeper share of damnation. To their running unsent of God, preaching another gospel, and slight dealing with the consciences of sinners, is owing the ruin of nations and churches, and the everlasting misery of millions. But when God arms himself to judgment against a people, what multitudes of calamities beset them! what deprivation of comforts! what disappointments, terrors, and despair! And it is greatly affecting to faithful ministers to see ruin, inevitable ruin, coming on their congregation, church, or nation.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 2. Princes in Asia frequently erect in the desert parts of their dominions rest-houses, or choultries, where travellers may reside for a night, a solitary and uncomfortable dwelling, but preferable to a palace amidst profligate and abandoned society. C.

Ver. 13. And the Lord saith—that is, Messiah saith—'God manifest in the flesh,' the only 'wise man,' 'the wisdom of God'—he declares the origin of natural to be moral evil; and traces up the stream of judgment to the fountainhead of sin. C.

Ver. 15. Wormwood. This is, most probably, the plant commonly so named.—Gall. What plant is meant is not known, but there can be no doubt that it signifies something very bitter—the emblem of sorrow and distress. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Manifold causes of weeping have faithful ministers in this world. And it is a fearful token of approaching judgments when they are so vexed with their people's abominations as to become weary of dwelling among them. Alas! sinful lusts transform even professors into very devils in crimes. Many are at great pains to secure their own damnation; and one sin opens the door for another. But terrible are the judgments of God upon obstinate sinners. And in a wonderful manner, by the same fire which consumes the wicked, he refines his own people. But every step of departure from him tends only to misery. And let sinners flee where they will, his curse attends them. Death closely follows sin. And very foolish are they who lament losses and death, but never lament sin as the cause of them, nor stand in awe of damnation. But it is very difficult to wean hardened sinners, especially gospel despisers, from every false confidence. Line must be upon line, and precept upon precept, and perhaps after all they will cleave thereto, and perish with heathens.

20 The harvest is past,[2] the summer is ended, and we are not saved.

21 For[p] the hurt of the daughter of my people am I hurt; I am black; astonishment hath taken hold on me.

22 Is there no [q]balm in Gilead? [r]is there no physician there? why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered?[3]

CHAPTER IX.

1 Jeremiah lamenteth the Jews for their manifold sins, 9 and for their judgments. 12 Disobedience is the cause of their bitter calamity. 17 He exhorteth to mourn for their destruction; 23 and to trust not in themselves, but in God. 25 He threateneth both Jews and Gentiles.

OH that[a] my head[1] were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!

2 Oh[b] that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men, that I might leave my people, and go from them! for they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men.

3 And[c] they bend their tongues like their bow for lies; but they are not valiant for the truth upon the earth: for they [d]proceed from evil to evil, and they [e]know not me, saith the LORD.

4 Take[g] ye heed every one of his neighbour,[2] and trust ye not in any brother: [h]for every brother will utterly supplant, and every neighbour [i]will walk with slanders.

5 And[j] they will deceive[3] every one his neighbour, and will not speak the truth: they have taught their tongue to speak lies, and [k]weary themselves to commit iniquity.

6 Thine[l] habitation is in the midst of deceit; through deceit they [m]refuse to know me, saith the LORD.

7 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts,[4] Behold,[o] I will melt them,[5] and try them; for how[p] shall I do for the daughter of my people?

8 Their[q] tongue is as an arrow shot out;[6] it speaketh deceit: one [r]speaketh peaceably to his neighbour with his mouth, but in heart[7] he layeth his wait.[8]

9 ¶ Shall[s] I not visit them for these things? saith the LORD: shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

10 For[t] the mountains will I take up a weeping and wailing, and for the [9]habitations[1] of the wilderness a lamentation, because they are burned up,[2] so that none can pass through them; neither can men hear the voice of the cattle: [3]both the fowl of the heavens and the beast are fled; they are gone.

11 And I [u]will make Jerusalem heaps, and a den of dragons; and I will make the cities of Judah [4]desolate,[5] without an inhabitant.

12 ¶ Who[v] is the wise man, that may understand this? and who is he to whom the mouth of the LORD hath spoken, that he may declare [w]it, for what the land perisheth and is burned up like a wilderness, that none passeth through?

13 And the LORD saith, [x]Because they have forsaken my law which I set before them, and have not obeyed my voice, neither walked therein;

14 But have walked after the [6]imagination of their own heart, and after Baalim, which their fathers taught them:

15 Therefore[y] thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, [z]I will feed them, even this people, with wormwood, and give them water of gall[7] to drink.

16 I will [a]scatter them also among the heathen, whom neither they nor their fathers have known: and I will send a sword after them, till I have consumed[8] them.

17 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [b]Consider ye, and call for the [c]mourning women, that they may come; and send for [9]cunning women, that they may come:

18 And let them make haste, and take up a wailing for us, that our eyes may run down with tears, and our eyelids gush out with waters.

19 For [d]a voice of wailing is heard out of Zion, How are we spoiled! we are greatly confounded, because we have forsaken the land, because our dwellings have [e]cast us out.[1]

20 Yet hear the word of the LORD, [g]O ye women, and let your ear receive the word of his mouth, [h]and teach your daughters wailing, and every one her neighbour lamentation:[2]

21 For [i]death is come up into our [3]windows, and is entered into our palaces, to cut off the children from without, and the young men from the streets.

22 Speak, Thus saith the LORD, [j]Even the carcases of men shall fall as dung upon the open field, and as the handful after the harvestman,[4] and none shall gather them.

23 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, [k]Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches:

24 But [l]let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the LORD which [m]exercise loving-kindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things [n]I delight, saith the LORD.

25 ¶ Behold,[p] the days come, saith the LORD, that [q]I will punish[5] all them which are [r]circumcised with the uncircumcised;

26 Egypt,[s] and Judah, and Edom, and the children of Ammon, and Moab,[6] and all that are in the utmost corners,[7] that dwell in the wilderness; for all these nations are uncircumcised, and all the house of Israel are [t]uncircumcised in the heart.

Bring all your goods out of the country, where they are exposed to plunder, into the strongholds; for quickly will I, in a furious manner, drive out the inhabitants of this land by death and captivity. FALLEN COLUMNS OF THE PARTHENON — DORIC COLUMNS OF THE STYLE OF ARCHITECTURE WHICH FLOURISHED IN ATHENS DURING THE TIME THAT JEREMIAH WROTE. [JEREMIAH, x: 10.]—"But the Lord is the true God, he is the living God, and an everlasting King; at his wrath the earth shall tremble, and the nations shall not be able to abide his indignation." Jeremiah is supposed to have written the words referred to above about B. C. 600. Upon this very year Pherecydes, the philosopher, was born, and this was a flourishing period of the Doric and Ionic orders of architecture in Athens. The Parthenon, fallen columns of which are shown in the above picture, was the most beautiful specimen of Doric architecture ever seen. Looking upon these pieces of broken marble as they lie scattered on the Acropolis, we can not help feeling the force of the words of Jeremiah: "The nations of the earth shall not be able to abide his indignation." In no other nation has architecture come to such high and exquisite perfection as in Greece, but it was all consecrated to idolatry.

CHAP. X.

HEAR ye[a] the word which the LORD speaketh unto you, [b]O house of Israel:

2 Thus saith the LORD, [c]Learn not the way of the heathen, and be not dismayed at the signs of heaven; for the heathen are dismayed at them.

3 For the [1]customs of the people are vain: for [d]one cutteth a tree out of the forest, the work of the hands of the workman, with the axe:

4 They[e] deck it with silver and with gold; they fasten it with nails and with hammers, [f]that it move not.

5 They are upright as the palm-tree, [g]but speak not; [h]they must needs be borne, because they cannot go. Be not afraid of them; [i]for they cannot do evil, neither also is it in them to do good.

6 Forasmuch as [j]there is none like unto thee, O LORD; thou art great, and thy name is great in might.

7 Who[k] would not fear thee, O King of nations? for to thee[2] doth it appertain:[3] forasmuch as among all the wise men of the nations, and in all their kingdoms, there is none like[4] unto thee.

8 But they are [5]altogether [l]brutish and foolish; the stock[6] is a doctrine of vanities.

9 Silver[m] spread into plates is brought from Tarshish,[o] and gold from [p]Uphaz, the work of the workman, and of the hands of the founder: blue and purple is their clothing; they are all the work of cunning men.[7]

10 But[q] the LORD is the true God,[8] he is the living God, and an everlasting [9]King: [r]at his wrath the earth shall tremble, and the nations shall not be able to abide his indignation.

11 Thus shall ye say unto them, The gods that have not made the heavens and the earth, even [s]they shall perish from the earth, and from under [t]these heavens.

12 He [u]hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heavens by his discretion.

13 When he uttereth his voice,[1] there is a multitude[2] of waters in the heavens, and [v]he causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth: he maketh lightnings with[3] rain, and bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures.

14 Every man is [w]brutish in his [4]knowledge: every founder is confounded by the graven image: [x]for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them.

15 They[y] are vanity, and the work of errors: in the time of their visitation they shall perish.

16 The[z] portion of Jacob is not like them: for he is the [a]former of all things; and Israel is [b]the rod of his inheritance: the LORD of hosts is his name.[5]

17 ¶ Gather[c] up thy wares[6] out of the land, O inhabitant[7] of the fortress:

18 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, [d]I will sling out the inhabitants of the land at this once, and will distress them, that they [e]may find it [8]so.

19 ¶ Woe[g] is me for my hurt! my wound is grievous: but I said, Truly this is a grief, and I [h]must bear it.

20 My tabernacle[9] is spoiled, and all my cords are broken: my children are gone forth of me, and they are not; there is none to stretch forth my tent any more, and to set up my curtains.

21 For the pastors[1] are become brutish, and have not sought the LORD: therefore they shall not prosper, and all their flocks shall be scattered.

22 Behold, [i]the noise of the bruit[2] is come, and a great commotion out of the north country, to make the cities of Judah desolate, and a den of dragons.

23 ¶ O LORD, I know that the [j]way of man

7 Then not makers, or creators, or gods, ver. 11. C.—How admirably is this whole passage fitted to demonstrate to thoughtful men the utter folly of idolatry. The prophet, as it were, anatomizes the whole system. He dissects the stocks which are called gods, and he thus shows not merely that they cannot aid others, but they are themselves helpless. That such discourses as this failed to reclaim the Jews proves how grievously they had fallen, how reason itself had left them. So it is in all ages, among all people. When men wilfully reject the truth, systematically turn aside from the commands and ordinances of the Lord, his Spirit ceases to strive with them: they are given over to a reprobate mind.—P.

5 The comparison here drawn between the false gods of the heathen and the JEHOVAH God of Israel is sublime. The Creator of all things is contrasted with the helpless, senseless stock which is modelled by the hand of a poor frail creature. It seems strange that the Israelites should have been so grievously deluded as to turn from the living God, to whose almighty power and infinite mercy their national history bore such striking testimony, and to have given homage to idols.—P.

persed. For, behold, the Chaldean army cometh, with great noise and fury, to render Judea utterly desolate.

Ver. 2. Learn not, &c. A special warning against imbibing the religious principles of the Egyptians, to whom they were inclined to go; or the Babylonians, who were destined to lead them captive.—Signs. Eclipses, comets, or meteors; or the high-sounding and imposing doctrines of astrology, concerning the planetary houses and signs of the zodiac. C.

Ver. 5. Upright. A most graphic description of the attitude of Egyptian idols, and probably of all idols, until Grecian sculpture gave everything but life to the marble, and induced the learned but most foolish Athenians to exclaim, when they looked upon a statue of Jupiter, That is no statue, that is the very god himself! How melancholy, alas! that science and art may attain their highest perfection, while religion sinks into the utmost degradation of idolatry! C.

Ver. 9. Blue—the colour of the unclouded eastern sky, the emblem of Deity; purple—the colour of kings, the emblem of royalty and dominion. C.

Ver. 11. This verse is in the Chaldee, as if to prepare the Hebrews with an answer to their idolatrous masters, when tempting them to idolatry. It is not improbable that, like the sentences adduced by Paul, Ac. 17. 28, it may have been a quotation from some of the earlier writings of the Chaldeans before they were perverted by idolatry. C.

Ver. 13. When God speaks to the ear of reason by the voice of thunder, the clouds, by the agency of electricity, are converted into water—not into a mass which would bring ruin, but into multitudinous drops that shower down fertility.—By a wonderful process he causes vapours to ascend from 'the ends,' from all parts of the earth; or does the prophet allude to the almost continual vapours and fogs that hang around the polar regions, the literal 'ends of the earth?'—The winds are literally treasured up by the condensing power of cold, ready, at the will of their Lord, to be drawn out in the breeze or storm. C.

Ver. 14. Brutish in his knowledge. Every man is really 'brutish in knowledge'—in the knowledge of God—until he is 'born again of water and of the Spirit,' Jn. 3. 5. C.

Ver. 15. Of many, the very names have perished, many have been broken to fragments, many overwhelmed in earthquakes, or buried in rubbish and ruins. Can such things have ever been gods? Did learned nations ever worship them? Alas! for Egypt, Greece, and Rome, such were their gods! They are perished! but, alas! for the paintings and images, the idols that still are worshipped! Alas! for the second commandment, which Rome, to her confusion, hath blotted out, though written by the finger of God!—Note, This awful suppression of the second commandment may be witnessed in the Romish catechism called Christian Doctrine. C.

Ver. 16. Portion. The God from whom Jacob would not part until he should bestow a blessing. See Ge. 32. 26–30; Ps. 119. 57.—Rod. Is it the rod of measurement? or rather the sceptre of power, government, and protection, Ge. 49. 10; Ps. 23. 4. And Israel is literally that people 'by whom and for whom' all nations and kingdoms are still governed, until Christ shall 'inherit all things' in fact, as he already does in right. C.

Ver. 18. 'The inhabitant of the fortress,' ver. 17, is here introduced, bemoaning his grievous wound and the captivity and loss of his children. C.

Ver. 20. My tabernacle is spoiled. The union of the 'tabernacle' with the 'pastors and flocks,' ver. 21, seems to fix the allusion to the tabernacle of the congregation in the wilderness; and which was afterwards set up in Jerusalem by David, previous to the building of the temple. It is the legitimate emblem of all religious ordinances and assemblies for the public worship of JEHOVAH. C.

Ver. 22. Behold, the noise of the bruit is come! 'Hark! a noise—behold, it draws near!'—Dragons. There is perhaps no distinct species of animal to which the word 'dragon' can be applied; it seems here rather a generic name for all wild beasts frequenting solitary places. C.

Ver. 23. Man is neither wise enough to discover, nor steady enough to pursue, the way of safety and success; his wisdom, and strength, and success must be the gift of God. Ja. 1. 17. C.

Ver. 24. Correct me, but with judgment. 'With judgment,' to reform; not 'with anger,' to extirpate. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Amazing absurdities often prevail even among nations which are famed for worldly wisdom and knowledge. And it is very unreasonable and dangerous for those who have been taught of God to learn the ways of heathens. God's eternal power and Godhead are so manifest as to leave the most stupid idolaters without excuse; and the more we contemplate his unsearchable greatness and glory, the more we shall be filled with reverence and godly fear, and lost in admiration. If he be our King, let us show ourselves faithful subjects, dependent on his protection, and devoted to his service. If he be our Portion, we can wish nothing beyond him. But often men remain ignorant of his excellency, and of the vanity of idols, till it be too late, and till his word be verified in their irrevocable and tremendous destruction. Terrible is the prospect when both rulers and ruled are plunged in ignorance, and abandoned to atheistical neglect of prayer. Neglect of God's worship in families ran-is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps.[3]

24 O LORD, [k]correct me, but with judgment; not in thine anger, lest thou bring me to nothing.[4]

25 Pour[l] out thy fury upon the heathen that know thee not,[5] and upon the families that call not on thy name: for [m]they have eaten up Jacob, and devoured him, and consumed him, and have made his habitation desolate.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Jeremiah proclaimeth God's covenant, 8 rebuketh the Jews' disobeying thereof, 11 prophesieth evils to come upon them, 18 and upon the men of Anathoth, for conspiring to kill Jeremiah.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Hear[a] ye the words of this covenant, and speak unto the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem;

3 And say thou unto them, [b]Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [c]Cursed be the man that obeyeth not the words of this [d]covenant,

4 Which I commanded your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, from the [e]iron furnace, saying, [g]Obey my voice, and do them, according to all which I command you: so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God;

5 That I may perform the [h]oath which I have sworn unto your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as it is this day.[1] Then answered I, and said, So be it,[2] O LORD.

6 Then the LORD said unto me, [i]Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, saying, Hear ye the words of this covenant, and [j]do them.

7 For [k]I earnestly protested unto your fathers, in the day that I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, even unto this day, rising early and protesting, saying, Obey my voice.

8 Yet[l] they obeyed not, nor inclined their ear, but walked every one in the imagination[3] of their evil heart: therefore [m]I will bring upon them all the words of this covenant,[4] which I commanded them to do; but they did them not.

9 And the LORD said unto me, [o]A conspiracy is found among the men of Judah, and among the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

[3] This appears to be the sad and humiliating inference which the prophet draws from his thoughtful survey of the state of Israel. their forefathers, which refused to hear my words; and they went after other gods to serve them: [q]the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken my covenant, which I made with their fathers.

11 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD, [r]Behold, I will bring evil upon them, which they shall not be able to escape;[5] and [s]though they shall cry unto me, I will not hearken unto them.[6]

12 Then shall the cities of Judah, and inhabitants of Jerusalem, go and cry [t]unto the gods unto whom they offer incense: but they shall not save them at all in the time of their trouble.[7] men with heathens, and entails his curse upon them. But great is the mercy that, though God correct, yet he will not destroy his people; and that, though we may not pray against corrections, we may pray for the mitigation of them, and hope that the rod will be quickly turned from us.

13 For [u]according to the number of thy cities were thy gods, O Judah; and according to the number of the streets of Jerusalem have ye set up altars to that shameful thing,[8] even altars to burn incense unto Baal.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 15, 16. What have the Jewish nation, whom I once so dearly loved and cherished, now to do in my temple, when they are so abandoned to idolatries, and when their sacrifices, which were once holy, are rendered detestable because of their obstinacy and joy in wickedness? I once made them outwardly flourishing and prosperous, and put them into a capacity to do much good, but now they shall be destroyed by the furious Chaldeans.

Ver. 4. From the iron furnace. A slight examination of the wonderful relics of their labour and skill will show that the Egyptians must have been well supplied with iron tools. And the allusion here, and in De. 4. 20, renders it highly probable that they were acquainted with the preparation of iron from the ore, and that the Israelites were condemned to work at their furnaces. C.

Ver. 6. The prophet, it appears, was commanded to itinerate as a preacher of righteousness from city to city, and, as is customary in milder climates, to preach in the public streets. C.

Ver. 13. The Israelites had adopted the custom of Egypt, where every city had its own peculiar tutelary deities, besides the national gods that were worshipped in common—a system of which it is melancholy to behold the exact reflected image in the tutelary saints assigned by the Church of Rome to countries, cities, families, or individuals. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God greatly loves true holiness; and abundant, but gracious, are his rewards of it. The saints of God delightfully consent to his transactions of grace, but especially to the better promise made with men in Christ, and established upon better promises than the national covenant which God made with Israel. But it is hard to make unregenerate men have so much as a semblance of holiness; on the contrary, they are ready deliberately and obstinately to combine against the Lord their God. But if they will not be ruled by his law, they must be destroyed by his curse. And dreadful is their case for whom prayer cannot avail: God will not, and idols cannot, help. Neither present devotions nor the past favours of God can profit them. Faithful ministers are often barbarously rewarded by those who should be their protectors. And none have been more malicious persecutors than profane clergymen. But if God preserve and vindicate his servants, they may possess their souls in patience, and continue their faithfulness. And, alas! wretched will be the condition of those who have injured them when God rises up to punish.

me see[8] thy vengeance on them; [p]for unto thee have I revealed my cause.

21 Therefore thus saith the LORD of the men of Anathoth that [q]seek thy life, saying, [r]Prophesy not in the name of the LORD, that [s]thou die not by our hand:

22 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, I will [t]punish[9] them; the young men shall die by the sword, their sons and their daughters shall die by famine;

23 And [u]there shall be no remnant of them, for I will bring evil upon the men of Anathoth, even [v]the year[1] of their visitation.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Jeremiah, complaining of the wicked's prosperity, by faith seeth their ruin. 5 God admonisheth him of his brethren's treachery against him, 7 and lamenteth his heritage. 14 He promiseth to the penitent return from captivity.

RIGHTEOUS [a]art thou, O LORD, when I plead with thee; yet let me talk[1] with thee of thy judgments: [b]Wherefore doth the way of the wicked prosper? wherefore are all they happy that deal very treacherously?[2]

2 Thou[c] hast planted them; yea, they have taken root: they grow;[3] yea, they bring forth fruit: [d]thou art near in their mouth, and far from their reins.

3 But thou, O LORD, [e]knowest me; thou hast seen me, and tried mine heart toward[4] thee; pull[g] them out like sheep for the slaughter, and prepare them for the day of slaughter.[5]

4 How[h] long shall the land mourn, and the herbs of every field wither, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein? the beasts are consumed, and the birds; because they said, [i]He shall not see our last end.

5 ¶ If thou [j]hast run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst [k]thou contend with horses? and if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst, [l]they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do [m]in the swelling of Jordan?[6]

6 For even [o]thy brethren, and the house of thy father, even they have dealt treacherously with thee; yea, [p]they have called a multitude after thee:[7] believe them not, though they speak fair words[8] unto thee.[9]

7 ¶ I[q] have forsaken mine house, I have left mine heritage; I have given the dearly [1]beloved of my soul into the hand of her enemies.

8 Mine heritage is unto me as a lion in the forest; it crieth out[2] against me; [r]therefore have I hated it.

9 Mine heritage is unto me as a [3]speckled bird; the birds round about are against her; come ye, [s]assemble all the beasts of the field, come[4] to devour.

10 Many[t] pastors[5] have destroyed my vineyard, they have trodden my portion under foot, they have made my pleasant portion[6] a desolate wilderness.

11 They [u]have made it desolate, and being desolate it mourneth unto me; the whole land is made desolate, because no man layeth it to heart.

12 The[v] spoilers are come upon all high places through the wilderness: for the sword of the LORD shall devour from the one end of the land even to the other end of the land: no flesh shall have peace.

13 They[x] have sown wheat, but shall reap thorns; they have put themselves to pain, but shall not profit; and they shall be ashamed of your revenues, because of the fierce anger of the LORD.[7]

14 ¶ Thus saith the LORD [y]against all mine evil neighbours,[8] that [z]touch the inheritance which I have caused my people Israel to inherit; Behold, [a]I will pluck them out of their land, and [b]pluck out the house of Judah from among them.

15 And it shall come to pass, after that I have plucked them out [c]I will return, and have compassion on them, and will bring them again, every man to his heritage, and every man to his land.

16 And it shall come to pass, [d]if they will diligently learn the ways of my people, [e]to swear by my name, The LORD liveth; as [g]they taught my people to swear by Baal; then shall they [h]be built in the midst of my people.

17 But [i]if they will not obey, I will utterly pluck up and destroy that nation, saith the LORD.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 5, 6. If you are so faint and impatient under the opposition of your own poor friends and neighbours at Anathoth, the place of your birth, how wilt thou bear through when all the rulers of Judah shall persecute you, and even your own relations and fellow-priests stir up the common people to destroy you? 7–13. I will quickly abandon my temple and my people, which I once so dearly loved, into the hand of the Chaldean destroyers. Instead of hearkening to my voice, as sheep to their shepherd, they blasphemously contradict my words, reject my government, abuse my messengers, and abandon themselves to rapine and oppression; therefore their heathen neighbours shall assemble in armies to destroy them; Nebuchadnezzar and his princes shall unhinge their constitution in church and state, and lay their whole country terribly desolate. While the crops shall be ruined, all their expensive attempts to save themselves by the help of the Egyptians shall but increase their misery. 14–17. I will also destroy, and carry captive out of their own countries, the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Egyptians, Philistines, Phœnicians, Syrians, and Northern Arabs, who have injured my people; and will afterwards bring back my people, and even part of these nations, to their respective countries; and will even unite them into the same true church, especially in the apostolic and coming periods. (See Introduction, ch. iv. sect. 18, 19.)

Ver. 2. Near in their mouth, as the bit of the bridle to the horse: but far from their reins, the powers by which he is guided or restrained.—Note, The Hebrew word for kidneys or reins is derived from a root that signifies to complete or finish, probably because the circuit of digestion, absorption, and arterial propulsion has been completed or finished when they have separated the superabundant aqueous and saline particles from the blood; and because the completeness of men (fearing God and keeping his commandments, Ec. 12. 13) lies in self-denial, the same word signifies to withhold, restrain, and, as it were, bridle and rein the passions, presenting the body 'a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, man's reasonable service.' C.

Ver. 4. He shall not see our last end. Most probably an allusion to De. 32. 29, and the previous description of the 'latter end,' the state of the Jewish people in 'the latter day,' ver. 15–28. 'He shall not see;' the wickedness charged against this expression can scarcely refer to Jeremiah, as if he had prophesied falsely, or should not live to see his predictions fulfilled, but rather to God, of whom they insinuate or affirm that he is either indisposed or unable to execute his threatened judgments. See Ec. 8. 11. C.

Ver. 9. A speckled bird. The Seventy render it hyena, which is countenanced by the Arabic, and adopted by Bochart, Gesenius, Boothroyd, and others. Jerome supposes it to be the peacock; and Blayney, despairing of identifying the species, translates it 'the bird tzeboa.' But however the word may be translated, the reference is probably not to any species, but to a well-known fact in natural history, viz. the disposition, nay habit, of birds to follow, and, as it were, persecute strange beasts or birds, or birds even of their own species, if speckled with anything uncommon. In such cases the natural timidity of birds seems to give place to a reckless courage, which occasionally incites the weakest to combine in pursuit and assault of their most formidable enemy. C.

Ver. 11. He does not mean no man felt the misery; but that no man 'laid to heart' his own sins, and the national sins, as the procuring cause of the judgments. C.

Ver. 13. Revenues. Boothroyd translates it 'crops,' which seems much more consonant to the tenor of the verse.—Note, The vineyard of the sluggard, the broken wall, the brier, the thistle, and the rank weed, are a shame to the husbandman: but the real shame of any people is sin—whether of a law broken, as

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Under the type of a linen girdle, hidden at Euphrates, God prefigureth the destruction of his people. 12 Under the parable of bottles filled with wine, he foretelleth their excess of misery. 15 He exhorteth them to prevent their future judgments. 22 He showeth their abominations are the cause of these evils.

THUS saith the LORD unto me, Go and get thee a [a]linen girdle, and put it upon thy loins, and put it [b]not in water.

2 So I got a girdle, [c]according to the word of the LORD, and put it on my loins.

3 And the word of the LORD came unto me the second time, saying,

4 Take the girdle that thou hast got, which is upon thy loins, and arise, go to [d]Euphrates, and hide it there in a hole of the rock.

5 So [e]I went and hid it by Euphrates, as the LORD commanded me.

6 And it came to pass after many days, that the LORD said unto me, Arise, go to Euphrates, and take the girdle from thence, which I commanded thee to hide there.

7 Then I went to Euphrates, and digged, and took the girdle from the place where I had hid it: and, behold, the girdle was marred, it was [g]profitable for nothing.[1]

8 Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Thus saith the LORD, [h]After this manner will I mar the pride of Judah, and the great pride of Jerusalem.

10 This[i] evil people which refuse to hear my words, which walk in the imagination[2] of their heart, and walk after other gods, to serve them, and to worship them, [j]shall even be as this girdle, which is good for nothing.

11 For as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have [k]I caused to cleave unto me the whole house of Israel, and the whole house of Judah, saith the LORD; that they might be unto me for a people, and [l]for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory: [n]but they would not hear.[3]

12 ¶ Therefore thou shalt speak unto them this word, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Every[o] bottle shall be filled with wine: and they shall say unto thee, [p]Do we not certainly know that every bottle shall be filled with wine?[4]

13 Then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will fill all the inhabitants of this land, even the kings that sit upon David's throne, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, [q]with drunkenness.

14 And I will dash them[5] one against another,[6] even the fathers and the sons together, saith the LORD; [r]I will not pity, nor spare, nor have mercy, but destroy them.[7]

15 ¶ Hear[s] ye, and give ear; [t]be not proud: for the LORD hath spoken.

16 Give[u] glory[8] to the LORD your God, before he cause [v]darkness, and before your feet stumble [w]upon the dark mountains,[9] and while ye look for light, he turn it into the shadow of death, and make it gross darkness.

17 But if ye will not hear it, [y]my soul shall weep in secret places for your pride; and mine eye shall weep sore, and run down with tears, because [z]the LORD's flock is carried away captive.

18 Say unto the king and to the queen, [a]Humble yourselves, sit down; for your principalities[1] shall come down, even the crown of your glory.

19 The cities of the [2]south[3] shall be [b]shut up,[4] and none shall open them: [c]Judah shall be carried away captive all of it, it shall be wholly carried away captive.

20 Lift up your eyes, and behold [d]them that come from the north; [e]where is the flock that was given thee,[5] thy beautiful flock?

21 What wilt thou say when he shall [6]punish thee?[7] for [g]thou hast taught them[8] to be captains, and as chief over thee; [h]shall not sorrows take thee, as a woman in travail?

22 ¶ And if thou say in thine heart, [i]Wherefore come these things upon me? [j]for the greatness of thine iniquity are [k]thy skirts discovered, and thy heels [9]made bare.[1]

23 Can[l] the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good, that are accustomed[2] to do evil.

24 Therefore[n] will I scatter them as the stubble that passeth away by the wind of the wilderness.

25 This[o] is thy lot, the portion of thy measures from me, saith the LORD; because thou hast [p]forgotten me, and [q]trusted in falsehood.

3 It seems probable that Jeremiah was in Babylon at the time when this prophecy was uttered. There is nothing in the story of his life opposed to this supposition, and the whole scope of the narrative appears to sanction the idea that the facts were real and not merely visionary symbols. It would seem too from the subsequent history of the prophet that he was acquainted with the chiefs of the Babylonian armies who conquered Judah; and the special orders given by Nebuchadnezzar (ch. 39. 11) regarding him indicate some previous knowledge. Jeremiah during his visit to Babylon at the time of this prophetic vision may have gained the friendship of those in power.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—The prosperity of wicked men has often been a stumbling-block to the godly. But let God do as he will, it is certain he will never do what is unrighteous. His providences may be dark, but never unjust; nay, nor unkind to the upright. We may sit easy under men's revilings, if we be conscious of God's approbation of us. Yea, there is no reason to covet that prosperity which fattens men, particularly hypocritical professors, for the fearful loss of God's favour. Atheistical and prophet-murdering sinners are a great plague to their country. And yet, if ministers will be faithful, they must expect more and more opposition, especially from evil brethren. And very justly the Lord metes out heavier trials to such as rage and fret at lesser ones, even when the lesser kindly prepare for the greater. Dreadful are those sins which make God desert and detest those ordinances and persons for which he has professed the greatest regard. But men's furious rage against him and his ways must be punished with fearful judgments. And yet no judgments fail to harden and exasperate sinners when God has withdrawn his Spirit from them. They who have tempted us to sin, ordinarily become our tormentors in punishing it. And if judgment begin at the house of God, the wicked corrupters and abusers of it need not think long to escape. But the bitterest enemies may be reconciled by the gospel. And such as diligently learn the Lord's ways shall share the blessings of his people; while ruin, dreadful ruin, in every age, shall await obstinate sinners.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 16. Glorify your own God, by confession and repentance of your sins, before he bring the most perplexing, scattering, deathful, and ruinous judgments upon you. 20–23. Behold, O Jews, the Chaldeans shall invade your country, and shall destroy and carry captive your once flourishing multitudes of God's own people; and when they, whom you formerly invited to your assistance (and thus showed them the way to subdue you), shall destroy you, how dreadful shall be your misery and anguish! CHAPTER XIV.

1 A grievous famine 7 causeth Jeremiah to pray. 10 The Lord will not be entreated for the people. 13 Lying prophets are no excuse for them. 17 Jeremiah is commanded to bewail their calamities.

THE word[a] of the LORD that came to Jeremiah concerning the [1]dearth.[2]

2 Judah[b] mourneth, and the gates thereof languish; they are black unto the ground; and the cry of Jerusalem is gone up.

3 And their nobles have sent their little ones[3] to the waters: they [c]came to the pits,[4] and found no water; they returned with their vessels empty; [d]they were ashamed and confounded, and [e]covered their heads.

4 Because[g] the ground is chapt, for there was no rain in the earth, [h]the plowmen were ashamed, they covered their heads.

5 Yea, [i]the hind also calved in the field, and forsook it, because there was no grass.

6 And[j] the wild asses did stand in the high places, they snuffed up the wind like dragons; their[k] eyes did fail, because there was no grass.

7 ¶ O[l] LORD, though our iniquities [m]testify against us, [o]do thou it for thy name's sake:[5] for our[p] backslidings are many; we have sinned against thee.

8 O [q]the Hope of Israel, [r]the Saviour thereof in time of trouble, [s]why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the land, and [t]as a wayfaring man that turneth aside to tarry for a night?

9 Why[u] shouldest thou be as a man astonied,[6] as a mighty man that cannot save? yet thou, O LORD, art [v]in the midst of us, and we are called by thy name;[7] leave[x] us not.

10 ¶ Thus saith the LORD unto this people, Thus[y] have they loved to wander, they have not refrained their feet, [z]therefore the LORD doth not accept[8] them: [a]he will now remember their iniquity, and visit their sins.

11 Then said the LORD unto me, [b]Pray not for this people for their good.

12 When[c] they fast, I will not hear their cry; and when they offer burnt-offering and an oblation, I will not accept them; but [d]I will consume them by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence.

13 ¶ Then said I, Ah, Lord GOD! [e]behold, the prophets say unto them, Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine; but I will give you assured peace[9] in this place.

14 Then the LORD said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name; [g]I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them: they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart.

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the prophets that prophesy in my name, and I sent them not, yet they say, Sword and famine shall not be in this land; [h]by sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed.

16 And the people to whom they prophesy [i]shall be cast out in the streets of Jerusalem, because of the famine and the sword: and they shall have none to bury them, them, their wives, nor their sons, nor their daughters: for I will pour [j]their wickedness upon them.

17 ¶ Therefore thou shalt say this word unto them, [k]Let mine eyes run down with tears night and day, and let them not cease: for [l]the virgin daughter of my people [n]is broken with a great breach, with a very grievous blow.

18 If [o]I go forth into the field, then behold the slain with the sword! and if I enter into the city, then behold them that are sick with famine! yea, both the prophet and the priest [l]go about into a land that they know not.[2] extreme disgrace and the basest of servitude; since ye are so hardened in a long course of sinning, that all attempts to remove your spotted practices, or your universal corruptions, are in vain.

Ver. 1. Thus saith the Lord. This is a prophecy in the distinctly symbolical form, and, in some sense, parallel to the parabolic teaching of our Lord.—Go and get thee a linen girdle. The girdle is 'linen' for two reasons. (1) Linen was of Egyptian origin, and is therefore used as a pictorial remembrance of past slavery, followed by future captivity. (2) Because, like Elijah and John, 2 Ki. 1. 8; Mat. 3. 4, it is most probable the prophet had customarily worn a leathern girdle; and now he assumes the linen, to exemplify Judah's taste for foreign finery, and contrast with it the state of rotten and unwashed raggedness into which sin was about to reduce her. C.

Ver. 7. Then I went to Euphrates. Tiphsah, the point of Euphrates nearest to Jerusalem, 1 Ki. 4. 24, was distant about 400 British miles, measuring 'as the bird flies.' This would probably give from 500 to 600 miles of travel. This distance has induced commentators to conclude that the journey was merely in vision. But of this visionary character there is not a trace in the passage, nor is there the shadow of reason for any such violent interpretation. Journeys of equal or greater length, and even on foot, are common in all countries, either for religion or worldly business: and the report of the prophet's journey, accompanied as he most probably would be by a number of his friends and pupils, or by a whole caravan (for it was the great commercial road), would be well calculated to excite the serious attention of some, though it might incur the ridicule of others, among his infatuated countrymen. C.

Ver. 13. God judicially gives them over to the drunkenness of pride, party spirit, and anarchy, ver. 14. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's ministers are often strangely tried for the instruction of their hearers; and it will require all the arts that can be used to make men understand what concerns their eternal welfare. But infinite is the kindness of God in making any of them his peculiar people, to the praise of his glory. Fearfully does he disgrace and ruin such as had behaved unfaithfully in his honourable service; and self-complacence, in parts, gifts, station, wealth, or power, God rejects with abhorrence. Alas! how stupified, and what mutual destroyers, do nations become when God leaves them! Their very managers and protectors do but ruin instead of relieving them; and vain hopes will but aggravate their misery and increase their confusion. Nothing but self-humiliation and repentance can avail when God lifts up his hand to destroy. Nor are the highest too great to sit in the dust when he calls to weeping and mourning for the sins of the land. Those ministers or others who know the terrors of the Lord cannot but tremble and weep for those who, insensible of danger, refuse to amend. Disgraceful miseries shall at last overtake the obstinate; and frequently the persons or things with which they sinned become the instruments of their punishment. Proud and ignorant sinners readily quarrel with the justice of their calamities. But, alas! how extensive and dreadful is God's charge against them, when he sets before them their great iniquities, their fixedness and obstinacy therein, their forgetfulness of and treacherous departure from him, and their mad propensity to whoredom and idolatry! Nothing less than the infinitely precious blood of Jesus, and the infinitely powerful grace of JEHOVAH, can renew and purify a sinner, thus spotted and deformed both in nature and practice. And, alas! dreadful is the guilt and folly that, while God waits to cleanse us, we should so refuse and evade his kindness.

CHAPTER XIV. Ver. 5. The inhabitants of the forest, Ps. 29. 9, had come out to the fields in search of grass, and the hind, the emblem of tenderest love, Pr. 5. 19, had forgot its instinct and forsaken its young through the misery induced by the sins of Jerusalem, ver. 7.—Note, While philanthropists are laudably employed in the prevention or punishment of 'cruelty to animals,' let them never forget that no remedy short of national 'repentance towards God, and faith towards the Lord Jesus Christ,' can ever reach to the root of the evil. C.

Ver. 17. The prophet is commanded to open, as it were, a fountain of tears over their sins, when every fountain of waters was dry, if by any means the contrast and the sympathy might move them to attention, examination, and repentance. C.

Ver. 20. We—that is, the penitent remnant whom, in the worst of times, and in the most apostate churches, God has either preserved as his 'hidden ones,' or endowed and commissioned as martyrs or reformers. C.

* Both Moses and Samuel were characterized by their earnest, powerful, and successful intercessions on behalf of the Israelites, when national sin had entailed national judgment. But even though these great and holy men should return to life, and stand together before God as suppliants for Israel, it would be in vain. Their sins were now so great and so aggravated that even divine mercy was exhausted, and justice must take its place. The people were lost to reason, to reproof, and even to shame. The Lord was not merely forgotten, he was openly despised and rejected. What a lesson is this for the nations of the earth!—P.

x Ec.8.12. Ps.37.5,6, 19,24, 25–29. ch. 39. 11; 40.4.

4 And I will cause them to be removed into all kingdoms of the earth, because of Manasseh the son of Hezekiah king of Judah, for that which he did in Jerusalem.

5 For who shall have pity upon thee, O Jerusalem? or who shall bemoan thee? or who shall go aside to ask how thou doest?

6 Thou hast forsaken me, saith the LORD, thou art gone backward; therefore will I stretch out my hand against thee, and destroy thee; I am weary with repenting.

7 And I will fan them with a fan in the gates of the land; I will bereave them of children, I will destroy my people, since they return not from their ways.

8 Their widows are increased to me above the sand of the seas: I have brought upon them, against the mother of the young men, a spoiler at noon-day: I have caused him to fall upon it suddenly, and terrors upon the city.

9 She that hath born seven languisheth; she hath given up the ghost; her sun is gone down while it was yet day; she hath been ashamed and confounded: and the residue of them will I deliver to the sword before their enemies, saith the LORD.

10 ¶ Woe is me, my mother, that thou hast born me a man of strife, and a man of contention to the whole earth! I have neither lent on usury, nor men have lent to me on usury; yet every one of them doth curse me.

11 The LORD said, Verily it shall be well with thy remnant; verily I will cause the enemy to entreat thee well in the time of evil, and in the time of affliction.

miserable, and make the inhabitants of the wealthiest cities pale, faint, and dying. At his nod fields deny their crops, and fountains their water, and cause even the richest to die by hunger and thirst; and not only sinners, but the irrational creatures, for our sakes, share in the punishment. Those who take no shame for their sins, provoke God to confound them with disappointments; and many mourn over their miseries who never mourn over the sinful causes of them. Yea, both sins and judgments often lie heaviest on their hearts who had the least hand in procuring them. Alarmingly dreadful, but just, is God's departure from a church or nation whose Hope and Saviour he has long been. And great is his condescension to indulge his people in the most familiar expostulations, and in the improving of his own excellencies, as arguments to enforce their requests. But no prayers can prevail when he is determined to leave men obstinate in wickedness; no sacrifice can be accepted, no excuse admitted. What plagues to themselves, and all around, are flattering, unfaithful, and erroneous ministers! But they who are faithful cannot forbear intercessions for their people's welfare and salvation. With unutterable groans and expostulations they deprecate their ruin; and encourage themselves therein by the views of God's honour, mercy, power, and blessed relation.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 9. Jerusalem, or Judea, which was once so populous, is bereaved of her inhabitants; destruction hath come upon her in the height of her prosperity, when it was altogether unexpected. 12–14. The hard-hearted and self-conceited Jews shall never be able to grapple with the Chaldean forces, to whom I will give all their wealth, without any possibility of redemption; and who, in execution of my kindled wrath, shall carry them away captives. 15–18. Lord, thou knowest my circumstances; protect, favour, and comfort me, and punish my persecutors. While they are spared, let me not be destroyed, but manifest thy regard to me, as one persecuted for thy sake. I very cheerfully received my commission from thee to be thy prophet, and with pleasure declared thy messages to this people, expecting that they might be moved to repent; but the repeated messages of wrath which I have been appointed to deliver, and the persecution which I have endured on their account, have inexpressibly burdened and sunk my spirits. And must my troubles be perpetual? Wilt thou never deliver me according to thy promise? 19–21. If thou repent of this sinful distrust, and cheerfully and diligently discharge thine office, I will continue thee in it; and if thou faithfully endeavour to convince and reclaim wicked hypocrites, and to comfort upright saints, thou shalt be honoured as a true prophet. But remember thy faithful reproofs to reduce them to that course in which thou walkest, and never comply with or flatter them in their sinful courses; and then will I constantly protect thee against, and at last deliver thee from, all thy furious and powerful persecutors.

Ver. 1. Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, &c. By intercessory prayer Moses prevailed, Ex. 32. 34; Nu. 14. 20, and Samuel likewise, 1 Sa. 7. 9; for this 'power with God' they are specially mentioned, Ps. 99. 6, 8. And while men inquire, cavil, and will neither understand nor believe that these things are so, the humble Christian can rely upon the word which testifies that 'the effectual fervent (inwrought) prayer of a righteous man availeth much,' Ja. 5. 16. C.

Ver. 4. Never was any prophecy more literally fulfilled, and never was there any one more unlikely to be true. (1) Because the Jews were remarkable for their attachment to their native land, to which all their institutions, interests, and recollections bound them, Ps. 137. 5. (2) Because, if scattered, they had hitherto displayed such a tendency to conform to the religion and habits of the heathen that all trace of their separate existence might be expected speedily to disappear. Notwithstanding of these things, they still abide a scattered, but a distinct people. 'They are found alike in Europe, Asia, Africa, and America: they are citizens of the world—without a country. They abound in Poland, Holland, Russia, and Turkey. In Germany, Spain, Italy, France, and Britain they are more thinly scattered. They are found in Persia, China, and India, east and west of the Ganges, and even in the interior of Africa, south of Timbuctoo' (Keith). C.

Ver. 6. God is perfect, therefore every attribute of his nature is perfect: (1) in itself; and (2) in its relation to his other attributes. Hence it follows that while his 'long-suffering' is perfect, so likewise his justice is perfect; and so God is said to be 'weary of repenting,' when the time of his 'long-suffering' is ended, and the relative time of his righteous retribution arrived. See ver. 15; Ex. 32. 12; Nu. 23. 19. C.

Ver. 7. I will fan them, &c. An allusion to 'fanning' or winnowing corn in gateways for sake of the air-draught. C.

Ver. 8. Mother of the young men. See the marginal translations. 'Mother of the chosen people' (Poole).—'I have brought against their mother city a chosen one' (Boothroyd). This variety testifies the difficulty of the phrase. But should not 'young men' be translated 'young man,' as the word is certainly singular? Is not this 'young man' king Jehoiachin, then only eighteen years of age? Comp. 2 Ki. 24. 8 with Je. 1. 3. Is not 'the mother of the young man' Nehushta, who is twice expressly mentioned, 2 Ki. 24. 8, 12, 15? having most probably been the chief adviser of her son in that idolatry which brought on the divine judgment.—A spoiler at noonday. In addition to the spoiler by night, ch. 6. 5, the evils of invasion in its most aggravated shape; a city taken by storm and delivered up to plunder. C.

Ver. 9. She that hath born seven languisheth. Is not this a prophetic allusion to 'all the men of might, even seven thousand,' whom Nebuchadnezzar carried away captive? See 2 Ki. 24. 16. C.

Ver. 10, 11 must be regarded as a parenthesis, containing a lamentation of the prophet on his persecution, and a promise of the LORD to protect him and his 'remnant,' not of days, but of believing ones 'who had not bowed the knee to Baal.' C.

Ver. 12. Shall iron alone (Judah) be able to break the northern iron (the Assyrians) combined with steel (the Chaldeans)? C.

Ver. 15. Revenge. God will certainly punish the persecutors of his servants. The prophet, however, does not pray for revenge, in the sinful sense of the word: but that God would take compassion on his unhappy case, and, in his own time and manner, restrain the wrath and humble the power, disappoint the schemes, and dissolve the combination of his enemies. C.

Ver. 17. Indignation. Either with the indignities he had endured from the cursing of all ranks, ver. 10, or with indignation at the idolatry of the sacrifices and profane revelry of the feasts of the king and people: or with an overwhelming sense of the indignation of God at the national apostasy and wickedness. C.

13 Thy[z] substance and thy treasures will I give to the spoil without price, and that for all thy sins, even in all thy borders.

14 And[a] I will make thee to pass with thine enemies into a land which thou knowest not; for a [b]fire is kindled in mine anger, which shall burn upon you.

15 ¶ O LORD, [c]thou knowest: remember me, and visit me, and revenge me of my persecutors: [d]take me not away in thy long-suffering: know that [e]for thy sake I have suffered rebuke.

16 Thy words were found, and I did [g]eat them;[3] and[h] thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart: for I am called by thy [4]name,[5] O LORD God of hosts.

17 I[i] sat not in the assembly of the mockers,[6] nor rejoiced; [j]I sat alone, because of thy hand: for thou hast [k]filled me with indignation.

18 Why is my [l]pain perpetual, and my wound incurable, which refuseth to be healed? [m]wilt thou be altogether unto me as a liar, and as waters that fail?[7]

19 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD, If thou return,[o] then will I bring thee again, and thou shalt [p]stand before me: and [q]if thou take forth the precious[8] from the vile,[9] thou shalt be as my mouth: [r]let them return unto thee; but return not thou unto them.[1]

20 And[s] I will make thee unto this people a fenced brazen wall; and they shall fight against thee, but [t]they shall not prevail against thee; for I am with thee to save thee, and to deliver thee, saith the LORD.

21 And [u]I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee out of the hand of the terrible.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 The prophet, under the types of abstaining from marriage, and from houses of mourning and feasting, foreshoweth the utter ruin of the Jews, 10 because they were even worse than their fathers. 14 Their return from captivity shall be more memorable than their deliverance out of Egypt. 16 God will doubly recompense their idolatry.

THE word[a] of the LORD came also unto me, saying,

2 Thou[b] shalt not take thee a wife, neither shalt thou have sons or daughters in this place.

2 'The northern iron' was doubtless of a superior quality, most probably prepared and hardened in some peculiar manner, like the steel obtained from the Chalybes of Pontus. A method of hardening iron was known in Pontus at a very early period. 'Northern iron,' therefore, was somewhat like our steel. The word rendered 'steel' in this verse means 'copper,' and ought to be so translated. In ancient times copper was mixed with other metals which rendered it hard and durable.—C.

Some special form of the practice was, however, forbidden by the divine law, De. 14. 1, and to the priests it was altogether interdicted, Le. 21. 5. It prevailed among the Greeks (see Harwood's Antiquities, p. 363), and is still found in Abyssinia.—C.

5 This is supposed to refer to the funeral feast given after 'the three days of weeping.' Such a custom seems to have prevailed among all nations. In England, during the plague, 1569, one of the precautions against the spread of the disease was the prohibition of funeral dinners. (Maitland's London, vol. i. p. 266.) The allusion here, however, seems to be, not to a funeral, but to a marriage feast. See ver. 9.—C.

6 This self-defence, founded upon their total ignorance or disregard of the law of God, is often looked upon by Christians with surprise. Alas! how many examples of equal ignorance, disregard, and justification, or, at least, palliation of sin, may Christians readily discover among themselves! The Sabbath is violated upon human authority, in opposition to divine law; and what is the Christian the Jewish to a title: 'What is our iniquity? what our sin against the Lord our God?'—Note. Sin, and the defence of sin, are the same in all ages, and among all people.—C.

4 They[c] shall die of grievous deaths: they shall not be lamented, neither shall they be buried; but they shall be as dung upon the face of the earth: and they shall be consumed by the sword, and by famine; and their carcases shall be meat for the fowls of heaven, and for the beasts of the earth.

5 For thus saith the LORD, [d]Enter not into the house of mourning,[1] neither go to lament nor bemoan them: [e]for I have taken away my peace from this people, saith the LORD, even loving-kindness and mercies.

6 Both the great and the small shall die in this land: they shall not be buried, neither shall men lament for them, nor [g]cut themselves, nor make themselves bald[2] for them.

7 Neither shall men tear[3] themselves for them in mourning, to comfort them for the [4]dead; neither shall men give them the [h]cup of consolation to drink for their father or for their mother.

8 Thou[i] shalt not also go into the house of feasting, to sit with them to eat and to drink.[5]

9 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, [j]I will cause to cease out of this place in your eyes, and in your days, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride.

10 ¶ And it shall come to pass, when thou shalt show this people all these words, and they shall say unto thee, [k]Wherefore hath the LORD pronounced all this great evil against us? or what is our iniquity? or what is our sin that we have committed against the LORD our [6]God?

11 Then shalt thou say unto them, [l]Because your fathers have forsaken me, saith the LORD, and have walked after other gods, and have served them, and have worshipped them, and have forsaken me, and have not kept my law;

12 And ye have done [m]worse than your fathers; for, behold, ye walk every one after the

Ver. 18. 'As the lying waters' (of the Serab) that appear to the traveller in the desert as a lake in the distance, but 'fail' and disappoint on his approach.—'Wilt thou be to me as a failing spring—as waters that are never sure?' (Boothroyd).

REFLECTIONS.—Dreadful is the case of nations when chargeable with sins which God will not pardon, and when the prayers of the choicest saints avail nothing for their relief. For in diversified and dreadful forms God can, even on earth, avenge himself on his enemies. Ministers, if faithful, must expect the most ungrateful returns from the world. And however earnestly they should follow after peace with all men, it must never be purchased by base and flattering compliances in sin; nor ought they to entangle themselves with the affairs of this world. But it is hard for the best to keep their temper in an evil day. It is astonishing that God should be so condescending and kind to his peevish saints. And they who distinguish themselves in piety, faithfulness, and diligence, may expect his distinguished favours and protections. If hypocrites will persecute them, heathens shall show them kindness. And however our frames change, we ought never to doubt of his faithfulness and fulfilment of all his promises.

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 6. Nor cut themselves. The custom of cutting the flesh in mourning was practised in several ancient nations. Among the Athenians it prevailed, and was forbidden by Solon. The Spartans were accustomed, in mourning for their great men, to tear their flesh (Harwood's Grecian Antiquities, p. 364). A similar practice prevailed amongst the ancient Huns, and was found amongst the modern South Sea Islanders. Though prohibited by Mahomet, it still maintains its ground in Moslem countries. In the annual mourning in Persia for Hassein the son of the Caliph Ali, many run about uttering doleful cries, and cutting themselves with knives and lancets till completely covered with blood. This barbarous practice was forbidden by the divine law, Le. 19. 28; notwithstanding which it still appears to have prevailed among the disobedient Hebrews. C.

Ver. 7. Cup of consolation. This was a refreshment sent to mourners by their friends. In ancient times the Jews were accustomed to send bread, fruits, and wine; in modern times they send eggs, salt, and a small loaf (Allen's Modern Judaism, p. 439), which is sometimes called 'the bread of bitterness,' and seems to be alluded to in 2 Sa. 3. 35; Eze. 34. 16, 17; Ho. 9. 4. C.

REFLECTIONS.—In evil days, a concern for our church and nation ought to swallow up our care for natural relations; for then our families, and other created comforts, become occasional additions to our trouble. Carnal feasting and mirth are very unseasonable when God's destructive judgments are hanging over and ravaging around us. God is exact in marking men's iniquities, and unavoidable is his punishment of them; but it is very hard to convince obdurate sinners of their guilt, or of the equity of God's judgments. And yet how infinite is his mercy in connecting the most awful judgments with the most gracious deliverances, and in making his strokes of wrath to prepare men for the reception of his favours! And marvellous imagination[7] of his evil heart, that they may not hearken unto me;

13 Therefore[o] will I cast you out of this land into a land that ye know not, neither ye nor your fathers; and there shall ye serve other gods day and night, where I will not show you favour.

14 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I[8] behold, [p]the days come, saith the LORD, that it shall no more be said, The LORD liveth that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt;

15 But, The LORD liveth [q]that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them: [r]and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers.

16 ¶ Behold, [s]I will send for many fishers, saith the LORD, and they shall fish them; and after will I send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks.

17 For mine [t]eyes are upon all their ways; they are not hid from my face, [u]neither is their iniquity hid from mine eyes.

18 And first[9] I will recompense their iniquity and their sin double;[1] because [v]they have defiled my land, they have filled mine inheritance with the [z]carcases of their detestable and abominable things.

19 O LORD, [y]my strength, and my fortress, and my refuge in the day of affliction, [z]the Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, [a]Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit.

20 Shall a man make gods unto himself, [b]and they are no gods?

21 Therefore, behold, [c]I will this once cause them to know, I will cause them to know[2] mine hand and my might; and they shall know that my name is the [3]LORD.[4]

4 The wonderful and cheering prophecy of this chapter reaches away outward into a still distant future. An ingathering of the remnant of Israel from among the Gentile nations, synchronous with the conversion of the Gentiles themselves, is predicted. This has not yet taken place. No sound exegesis can make it refer to the return from Babylonish captivity. From this and other passages we are justified in expecting that as, in accordance with prophecy, the Jews have been scattered among all nations, so they shall be gathered in again to the land of their fathers.—P.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 The captivity of Judah for her sin. 5 Trust in man is cursed, in God is blessed. 9 The deceitful heart cannot impose upon God. 12 The salvation of God. 15 The prophet complaineth of the mockers of his prophecy. 19 He is sent to renew the covenant in hallowing the sabbath.

THE sin of Judah is written with a [a]pen of iron, and with the point[1] of a diamond:[2] it is graven [b]upon the table of their heart, and [c]upon the horns of your altars;

2 Whilst[3] their[d] children remember their altars and their groves[4] by the green trees upon the high hills.

3 O my [5]mountain[6] in the field, [e]I will give thy substance and all thy treasures to the spoil, and thy high places for sin,[7] throughout all thy borders.

4 And thou, even thyself,[8] shalt[9] discontinue from thine heritage that I gave thee; [h]and I will cause thee to serve thine enemies in the land which thou knowest not: for [i]ye have kindled a fire in mine anger, which shall burn for ever.

5 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; [j]Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm,[9] and whose heart departeth from the LORD.

6 For he shall be [k]like the heath in the desert,[1] and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, [l]in a salt land and not inhabited.

7 Blessed[n] is the man that trusteth in the LORD, and whose hope the LORD is:

8 For he shall be [o]as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh; but her leaf shall be green, and shall not be careful in the year of drought,[2] neither shall cease from yielding fruit.

2 Shamir, the word here used, is not the Hebrew term usually translated diamond in Scripture. It signifies something very hard and sharp used for cutting. It is questionable whether the diamond was so used at the time when this book was written.—P.

are all his ways: he makes both the miseries and the deliverances of the Jewish nation to promote the gathering of the Gentiles to Christ.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 1, 2. Their proneness to idolatry is deeply rooted in their hearts, and marked on the multitudes of their altars; and they continue in it from generation to generation. 5–8. They who, instead of depending upon God, depend upon human powers for help, shall not only be disappointed of that safety and prosperity which they expected, but shall bring upon themselves the lasting miseries which they thought to have escaped; but they who trust in the Lord shall prosper in their undertakings, and be safe and happy when all around them are in distress. 12–18. O Lord, who hast long dwelt with us in thy tabernacle and temple, and in whom we hope for all necessary blessings, they that apostatize from thee, the infinite source of pure and lasting consolations, shall be disgraced, contemned, and destroyed. But do thou, the object of all my praises, deliver me from the injuries which I suffer from this malicious people, and effectually grant me comfort. They insolently deride me, as if the threatenings which I denounce would never be fulfilled. But I have patiently persevered in delivering thy messages to them, without ever desiring to bear one message of destruction, or to see it executed; and I have never spoken but as directed by thee. Do thou therefore acknowledge, protect, and comfort me, while they malign, terrify, and persecute me. And let these my persecutors be disgraced, perplexed, terrified, and fearfully destroyed.

Ver. 1. The key to this difficult passage seems to be ch. 19. 5, where the Jews are charged with sacrificing their children to Baal. May it not, accordingly, be paraphrased thus:—'The sin of Judah is written with a pen of iron (in blood), and with the point of a diamond (or flint, some hard species of stone formed into a sacrificial knife, as was common with the heathen); it is graven upon the tables of their (the people's hard) hearts (from which natural affection has been obliterated, and upon the horns ye priests of your altars (to which horns the helpless victims are bound) when they (the people) commemorate their (sacrificed) children at their altars and their groves,' &c.? C.

Ver. 6. A salt land. Equivalent to barren land; for though several, perhaps all, kinds of salt, act as a stimulant manure when applied in small quantity, yet, when largely mixed with earth, they destroy the vegetation of all except a few marine plants. The neighbourhood of the Dead Sea, some parts of Arabia Petræa, large districts of the African deserts, and of South America, are so full of salt as to be totally barren. C.

Ver. 18. This is not an imprecation of wrathful revenge, prompted by passion, but an appeal from man's injustice and cruelty to God's justice, mercy, and protection. See notes on Ps. [illegible].

Ver. 21. Their neck stiff. Jews and Christians have strangely assimilated in 'making their necks stiff' against the light and easy yoke of the Sabbath: (1) By degrading the fourth commandment from a moral to a mere ceremonial institution. (2) By pleading the absolute necessity of many public works being continued on that day. (3) By acting under human authority, and disregarding God's prohibition of labour. (4) By a view of the gain derivable from Sabbath traffic, under a pretended regard for public accommodation, convenience, and health. Doctrines, pleadings, and excuses to 'make void the law,' against which this prophecy directs alike the authority, ver. 20, the promises, ver. 24, and the threatenings, ver. 27, of the Almighty. See ver. 19–21, 24–27. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Sinful corruptions are deeply rooted in men's hearts, and fixed in their practice, though sin effectually robs us of everything valuable. There is great malignity and hurt in trusting to creatures. It draws our heart from God, the blessed ALL and IN ALL. But much satisfaction and success attend a solid dependence upon him alone as our God. Alas! what an unsearchable fund of all manner of deceiving and desperate wickedness is an unrenewed heart! But all is naked and open before the righteous Judge of all, and punisher of the wicked. And dreadful is the curse annexed to ill-gotten riches, as well as to resting on self-righteousness. Great is the esteem which saints have for the temple, the ordinances, the Christ of God. And while he is the hope, the praise, the healer, and the saviour of his people, he is the awful, but just, punisher of his and their enemies. A fearful portion of debasement, terror, and ruin shall earthly men, and apostates from God, receive at the last. When they become incorrigible, their damnation slumbereth not. And O the strength of indwelling corruption, that makes even precious prophets sinfully fret when they meet with much opposition in the execution of their office! Great is the mercy that God does not always employ them in the unpleasing messages of wrath. Alas! the folly and wickedness of nations—of Britain—in disregarding God's Sabbaths, when such important blessings to courts, kingdoms, and churches attend the careful sanctification, and such fearful miseries attend the profanation, of it!

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 14–18. Though no man will prefer the waters of a dirty puddle to those that come from the rocks of Lebanon, my people Israel have preferred to me the most filthy and useless idols, which, by their worship and votaries, seduce them into abominable courses, neither used by the saints of old, nor fit for them; and which will certainly issue in the dreadful desolation of their country, and the dispersion and rejection of their nation. Yet when Jeremiah delivers these messages of wrath, they contrive how to silence, reproach, disregard, ar i murder him: and boast that, in defiance of all his threatenings, they shall prosper, since they have the priests, statesmen, and prophets all on their side.

Ver. 8. I will repent. Repenting, in man, includes a turning from sin, with 'grief and hatred' of it; wherefore many are surprised to find repenting attributed to God: forgetting they are expressly told that 'God is not a man that he should lie: neither the son of man that he should repent.' Repenting, in God, implies not a change of mind—for in God 'there is no variableness'—it implies merely a change of relation between God and man, and a consequent change of God's dispensation towards him. To the sinful man or nation God's relation, as moral governor and judge, demands condemnation; to the penitent man or nation it as necessarily extends mercy and pardon. See note on Ex. 32. 14. C.

Ver. 21–23. Scott, than whom there is seldom a safer guide, observes upon this prayer: 'Perhaps there might be human infirmity mixed here on this trying occasion, especially as we must allow this to have been the case in other instances, comp. ch. 15. 15–18; 20. 10–18.' Now this, from such an authority, is an exceedingly dangerous supposition. Could the author have forgotten that the prophet was inspired? Could he have forgotten that as a prayer it must have been either of faith or of sense? If of sense, then of the will of man: if of faith, then of the Spirit of God? Could he have forgotten that the prayer was heard and the judgment poured out? Had he forgotten that the prophet, speaking by the Spirit and in the name of the Lord, merely delivers, in the form of a prayer, the sentence which God had commissioned him to pronounce upon an impenitent and abandoned generation? C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is proper that God should exercise an absolute care over men: and highly presumptuous is it in them to complain of his providence. Yet notwithstanding he is careful to show them the equity as well as the wisdom of his procedure; and he will at last make his glory to appear, and show that all our miseries, public and private, may be traced from our sins. How absurd and dangerous is apostasy from God to idols! and if men will persevere in their sins, they must expect no mercy at last. The wicked maliciously persecute, slander, and contemn the faithful servants of Christ. But fearfully shall God resent the injuries done to them as done to himself: and he that despises them must be held as one that hates and despises him that sent them.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 2. Valley of Hinnom, . . . east gate. The valley of Hinnom lay to the south, Jos. 15. 8. How then could the east gate be found there? This circumstance has given rise to many conjectures, new translations, and proposed emendations of the text. May not the difficulty be solved by attending to the following facts? (1) The ancient Hebrews and modern Orientals call every wind that blows between north and south from the eastward 'an east wind' not attending to the subdivisions of the compass, as maritime nations must. (2) The valley of Hinnom lying towards the south, Jerusalem might consequently contain the 'east gate' within any of its eastern points. C.

Ver. 5. To burn their sons, &c. From this it appears that 'causing their children to pass through the fire,' in honour of their idols, was not, as some have supposed, merely passing through so as to escape death, but an actual sacrifice of them as burnt-offerings to their horrid deities. The engravings on the ancient Etruscan tombs of Camparini exhibit the victims as exceedingly reluctant, and dragged by force to the altars. Lord! what is man, when he forsakes thee, and begins to worship and serve the creature rather than the Creator, who is blessed for ever! C.

Ver. 9. This awful prediction was begun to be fulfilled at the ST. STEPHEN'S GATE—WHERE ST. STEPHEN WAS STONED TO DEATH. [JEREMIAH, xvii:19.]—"Thus said the Lord unto me: Go and stand in the gate of the children of the people, whereby the kings of Judah come in, and by the which they go out, and in all the gates of Jerusalem." St. Stephen's Gate is known by the Christians of Jerusalem as the Gate of My Lady Mary, and by the Arabs as the Gate of the Tribes. It is on the east side of Jerusalem, and opens into the road leading across the valley of Kedron, and thence up the Mount of Olives to Bethany and Jericho. There are lions sculptured over it. One of the points which lends interest to Saint Stephen's Gate is the fact that near here in the Kedron valley Saint Stephen was martyred. Stephen was the first Christian martyr. In connection with his death, Saul of Tarsus first comes to view, who in after years was to be the great apostle of the Gentiles.

it again[4] another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it.

5 Then the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

6 O house of Israel, [e]cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the LORD. Behold, as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel.

7 At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to [g]pluck up, and to pull down, and to destroy it:

8 If[h] that nation, against whom I have pronounced, turn from their evil, [i]I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them.

9 And at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, [j]to build and to plant it:

10 If[k] it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then I will repent of the good wherewith I said I would benefit them.

11 ¶ Now, therefore, go to, speak to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, [l]I frame evil against you, and devise a device against you: [m]return ye now every one from his evil way, and make your ways and your doings good.[5]

12 And they said, [o]There is no hope; but we will walk after our own devices, and we will every one do the imagination of his evil heart.

13 Therefore thus saith the LORD, [p]Ask ye now among the heathen, who have heard such things: the [q]virgin of Israel hath done a very horrible thing.

14 Will[r] a man leave [6]the snow of Lebanon which cometh from the rock of the field? or shall the cold flowing waters that come from another place be forsaken?[7]

15 Because[s] my people hath forgotten me, they have burned incense to [t]vanity, and they have caused them to stumble in their ways from the [u]ancient paths, [v]to walk in paths, in a way not cast up;

16 To make their land [z]desolate, and a perpetual hissing: [y]every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished, and wag his head.

17 I[z] will scatter them as with an east wind before the enemy; [a]I will show them the back, and not the face, in the day of their calamity.

18 ¶ Then said they, [b]Come, and let us devise devices against Jeremiah; [c]for the law shall not perish from the priest, nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the [8]prophet: [d]come, and let us smite him with[9] the tongue,[1] and let us not [e]give heed to any of his words.

A.M. cir. 3399. B.C. cir. 605.

19 Give[g] heed to me, O LORD, and hearken to the voice of them that contend with me.

20 Shall[h] evil be recompensed for good? for they [i]have digged a pit for my soul. Remember [j]that I stood before thee to speak good for them, and to turn away thy wrath from them.

21 Therefore [k]deliver up their children to the famine, and pour out their blood[2] by the force of the sword; and let their wives be bereaved of their children, and be widows; and let their men be put to death; let their young men be slain by the sword in battle.

22 Let[l] a cry be heard from their houses, when thou shalt bring a troop suddenly upon them; [n]for they have digged a pit to take me, and hid snares for my feet.

23 Yet, LORD, thou knowest all their counsel against me [o]to slay me:[3] forgive[p] not their iniquity, neither blot out their sin from thy sight; but let them be overthrown before thee: deal thus with them in the time of thine anger.

CHAPTER XIX.

Under the type of breaking a potter's vessel is foreshowed the desolation of the Jews for their sins.

THUS saith the LORD, Go, and get [a]a potter's earthen bottle,[1] and take of [b]the ancients of the people, and of the ancients of the priests,

2 And go forth unto [c]the valley of the son of Hinnom, which is by the entry of the [2]east gate,[3] and [d]proclaim there the words that I shall tell thee;

3 And say, [e]Hear ye the word of the LORD, O kings of Judah, and inhabitants of Jerusalem; Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; [g]Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, the which whosoever heareth, his ears shall tingle.

4 Because[h] they have forsaken me, and have estranged this place,[4] and have burned incense in it unto other gods, [i]whom neither they nor their fathers have known, nor the kings[5] of Judah, [j]and have filled this place with the blood of innocents;

5 They have built also the high places of Baal, to burn their sons with fire for burnt-offerings unto Baal, [k]which I commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it into my mind:

6 Therefore,[l] behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that this place shall no more be called Tophet, nor, The valley of the son of Hinnom, but, The valley of slaughter.

7 And [n]I will make void the counsel[6] of Judah and Jerusalem in this place; and [o]I will cause them to fall by the sword before their

3 'East gate' is a wrong translation. It is wrong etymologically; for even taking the root to be cheres, 'the sun,' the proper rendering would be 'sun-gate.' It is also wrong topographically; for the valley of Hinnom lies south of the city, and could not therefore be said to be 'by the entry of the east gate.' The word however seems to me to be from another root, and its proper rendering is, 'the pottery gate.' The potter's field lay on the bank in the valley of Hinnom, south of the city.—P.

* Each of these statements was perfectly true in itself; each wrong in the application. For the 'law shall perish' from the ignorant, the worldly, the superstitious, and idolatrous priest; and counsel shall depart from them that count themselves wise and are fools: and the word shall depart from the false and presumptuous prophet, who speaks in the Lord's name what the Lord has not commanded him to speak.

Babylonish captivity, La. 4. 10: it reappeared at the siege of Jerusalem by Vespasian and Titus; and similar instances occurred in the time of Hadrian. See Josephus, De Bell. Jud. vi. 3, 4. C.

Ver. 13. Upon whose roofs. The roofs of the Jewish houses were flat and surrounded by a battlement. The inhabitants ascended to them to walk, sometimes to sleep, at other times, as places of retirement, to pray; and idolaters chose them as places for burning incense to the sun, moon, and stars, which they worshipped as gods. C.

REFLECTIONS.—By methods unnumbered the Lord tries to awaken ignorant, stupified, and self-hardened sinners to repentance, that their ruin may be prevented, or at least appear wholly owing to themselves. And it is proper that rulers in church and state should be warned with peculiar faithfulness and solemnity: and warnings had need to be again and again repeated. Dreadful are the effects of sin upon nations and churches: and often those who have been noted for sinning are made no less noted for suffering: and all attempts to avoid God's ruinous strokes prove fruitless or worse.

CHAPTER XX. Ver. 7–10. Contrary to my own inclination thou hast persuaded me to undertake this enemies, and by the hands of them that seek their lives; and their [p]carcases will I give to be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth.

8 And[q] I will make this city desolate, and an hissing: every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished and hiss, because of all the plagues thereof.

9 And I will cause them to eat the [r]flesh of their sons, and the flesh of their daughters, and they shall eat every one the flesh of his friend, in the siege and straitness wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them.

10 Then [s]shalt thou break the bottle in the sight of the men that go with thee,

11 And shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [t]Even so will I break this people, and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole[7] again; and they shall [u]bury them in Tophet, till [v]there be no place to bury.[8]

12 Thus will I do unto this place, saith the LORD, and to the inhabitants thereof, and even make this city as [9]Tophet:[1]

13 And the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah, shall be defiled[2] as the place of Tophet, because of all the houses [z]upon whose roofs they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven, and have poured out drink-offerings unto other gods.

14 Then came Jeremiah from Tophet, whither the LORD had sent him to prophesy; and he stood [y]in the court of the LORD's house, and said to all the people,

15 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, [z]I will bring upon this city, and upon all her towns, all the evil that I have pronounced against it; because they have hardened their [3]necks, [a]that they might not hear my words.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Pashur, smiting Jeremiah, receiveth a new name, and a fearful doom. 7 Jeremiah complaineth of contempt, 10 of treachery, 14 and of his birth.

NOW Pashur,[a] the son of Immer the priest, who was also chief governor in the house of the LORD, heard that Jeremiah prophesied these things.

2 Then Pashur [b]smote Jeremiah the prophet, and put him in the stocks[1] that were in the high gate of Benjamin, which was by the house of the LORD.

3 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Pashur brought forth Jeremiah out of the stocks. Then said Jeremiah unto him, The LORD hath not [c]called thy name Pashur, but Magor-missabib.[2]

4 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will make thee [d]a terror to thyself, and to all thy friends; and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies, and [e]thine eyes shall behold it: and [g]I will give all Judah into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall carry them captive into Babylon, and shall slay them with the sword.

5 Moreover, I [h]will deliver all the [3]strength of this city, and all the labours thereof, and all the precious things thereof, and all the treasures of the kings of Judah will I give into the hand of their enemies, which shall spoil them, and take them, and carry them to Babylon.

6 And[i] thou, Pashur, and all that dwell in thine house, shall go into captivity: and thou shalt come to Babylon, and there thou shalt die, and shalt be buried there, thou, and all thy friends, [j]to whom thou hast prophesied lies.

7 ¶ O LORD, thou hast [4]deceived me,[5] and I was deceived; thou art stronger than I,[6] and hast prevailed: [k]I am in derision daily, every one mocketh me.

8 For since I spake, I cried out, [l]I cried violence and spoil; because[7] the word of the LORD [m]was made a reproach unto me, and a derision, daily.[8]

9 Then I said, I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name: but [o]his word was in mine heart[9] as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and I could not stay.

10 ¶ For [p]I heard the defaming of many, fear on every side. [q]Report, say they, and we will report it. All my familiars[1] watched[r] for my halting, saying, Peradventure he will be enticed,[2] and we shall prevail against him, and we shall take our revenge on him.

11 But [s]the LORD is with me as a mighty terrible one; therefore [t]my persecutors shall stumble, and they shall not [u]prevail; they shall be greatly ashamed; for they shall not prosper: their [v]everlasting confusion shall never be forgotten.

12 But, O LORD of hosts, that triest the righteous, and seest the reins and the heart, [z]let me see thy vengeance on them: [y]for unto thee have I opened my cause.

13 Sing[z] unto the LORD, praise ye the LORD; for he hath delivered the soul of the poor from the hand of evil-doers.

14 ¶ Cursed[a] be the day wherein I was born: let not the day wherein my mother bare me be blessed.[3]

1 The meaning of the word Tophet is disputed. It may be derived from a Hebrew root which signifies 'to spit,' and would thus mean 'a loathsome place;' but it is more probably derived from topheth, the 'oven' or 'fire-place,' in which children offered in sacrifice to Molech were burned, and would then signify 'place of burning.' In this latter sense the analogy between it and Jerusalem would be very striking, Jerusalem was burned by the Babylonians and by the Romans.—P.

* The book of Jeremiah is to a large extent fragmentary. A great number of detached pieces are put together which have no logical connection with each other. This is one of them. Ver. 14-18 form a striking contrast to what immediately precedes. We cannot see anything to call forth such a strong expression of the bitterness of his soul. In sentiment and structure the passage bears a strong resemblance to Job 3.3-12. It is a singular fact, and it tends to throw some light upon these remarkable words, that such expressions of feeling are common in the East to this day. One hears them frequently, but they are never understood literally. They are poetical, and intended to express in language of high imagery the intense feelings of sorrow and bitterness which wring the heart.—P.

office, and hast disappointed me of the comforts which I expected in it. By thy powerful arguments and authority thou didst overrule me in it; yet have I met with nothing but derision and persecution. For since I began to deliver thy messages, I have prophesied of nothing but miseries to befal my people; and on that account all my messages have been made matter of derision and reproach to me; I therefore resolved to prophesy no more: but I found myself inwardly tormented with challenges of conscience and frowns from God, till I again delivered his messages. Though with fear I knew that I was everywhere calumniated as seditious, false, and dangerous to the state, and mine enemies were ready to spread the most malignant aspersions, in order to procure my disgrace or death; and even my relations and intimates did all they could to insnare me.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Zedekiah sendeth to Jeremiah to inquire the event of Nebuchadrezzar's war. 3 Jeremiah foretelleth a calamitous siege and miserable captivity. 8 He counselleth the people to fall to the Chaldeans, 11 and upbraideth the king's house.

THE [a]word[1] which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, when king Zedekiah [b]sent unto him Pashur the son of Melchiah, and Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, saying,

2 Inquire,[2] I pray thee, of the LORD for us; for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon [c]maketh war against us; if so be that the LORD will deal with us [d]according to all his wondrous works, that he may go up from us.

3 ¶ Then said Jeremiah unto them, Thus shall ye say to Zedekiah:

4 Thus saith the LORD God of Israel; Behold, I[e] will turn back the weapons of war that are in your hands, wherewith ye fight against the king of Babylon, and against the Chaldeans, which besiege you without the walls, and [g]I will assemble them into the midst of this city.

5 And[h] I myself will fight against you with an outstretched hand, and with a strong arm, even in anger, and in fury, and in great wrath.

6 And [i]I will smite the inhabitants of this city, both man and beast: they shall die of a great pestilence.

7 And afterward, saith the LORD, [j]I will deliver Zedekiah king of Judah, and his servants, and the people, and such as are left in this city from the pestilence, from the sword, and from the famine, into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of those that seek their life: [k]and he shall smite them with the edge of the sword; [l]he shall not spare them, neither have pity, nor have mercy.[3]

8 ¶ And unto this people thou shalt say, Thus saith the LORD; [m]Behold, I set before you the way of life, and the way of death.

9 He that [o]abideth in this city shall die by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth out, and falleth to the Chaldeans that besiege you, he shall live, and his life shall be unto him for a prey.

10 For[p] I have set my face against this city for evil, and not for good, saith the LORD; [q]it shall be given into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire.

11 ¶ And touching the house[4] of the king of Judah, say, Hear ye the word of the LORD;

12 O house of David, thus saith the LORD, [r]Execute[5] judgment in the morning, and [s]deliver him that is spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor, [t]lest my fury go out like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

13 Behold, [u]I am against thee, O [6]inhabitant of the valley,[7] and rock of the plain,[8] saith the LORD; which say, [v]Who shall come down against us? or who shall enter into our habitations?

14 But I will punish[9] you [z]according to the fruit of your doings, saith the LORD: and I will kindle a fire in [y]the forest thereof, [z]and it shall devour all things round about it.[1]

* The message in this chapter has been confounded with that in ch. xxxvii., and as the narratives differ, they have been urged as contradictory. But the least attention will show that they relate to events clearly distinct. (1) Jeremiah had been imprisoned in the 'high gate of Benjamin,' by order of Pashur alone, and delivered the next day, ch. 20. 2, 3. (2) This message came to Jeremiah at the very commencement of the war, and of the siege of Jerusalem, ver. 2, 4, and only requested the prophet to 'inquire of the LORD.' (3) When the message in ch. xxvii. was sent, the Chaldeans had continued the siege till the Egyptian army had come up against them, ch. 37. 5. (4) The request of that message was that the prophet should 'pray unto the Lord,' ver. 3. (5) Jeremiah was at that time free; and his subsequent imprisonment was not by Pashur, but by the princes; and not in the 'high gate of terror upon every side. There can be little doubt that Pashur was one of those degenerate priests who had turned from the LORD to Baal, and took such offence at Jeremiah for his faithful denunciation of idolatry, as the Pharisees conceived against our Lord for his faithful rebukes of their hypocrisy. Nor is it improbable, from considering the import of his self-assumed name, that Pashur and his associates may have covertly introduced idolatry under the specious plea of an extension of universal liberty. C.

Ver. 10. The defaming. Such misrepresentations of the prophet's words as the false witnesses afterwards gave of the words of our Lord, Mat. 26. 60, 61, and such erroneous interpretation as the high-priest pronounced when he and his fellow-judges voted him guilty, Mat. 26. 63–66. C.

Ver. 12. This prayer, for such it is, and not a prediction, and every other of a similar kind, can be fully vindicated, not merely on the ground of the prophet's inspiration, but by the internal fact that the prophet does not say 'my,' but 'thy vengeance'—a vengeance, a vindication and enforcement of justice, which, however severe, must be in strict conformity with the principles and exercise of that 'mercy which endureth for ever,' Ps. 136. 1, &c. C.

Ver. 14. Cursed be the day wherein I was born. Brown Patterson, whose notes to the work of his venerable relative are generally most judicious, has here referred to the reasonableness of 'taking into account' the 'poetical and rhetorical embellishment' of the passage, during the interpretation of it, and enters a caveat against its being 'used as a model for our own feelings in reference to our birth,' &c. And in this admission and caveat there are undoubtedly many who would concur. But surely such interpreters must forget (1) that 'Thus saith the LORD,' ver. 4, &c., speaking by his inspired prophet! and, if inspired for one part, surely inspired for all. And if not for all, where does inspiration end and begin? (2) They must forget, that even though there is much that is called 'poetical and rhetorical embellishment,' it is the embellishment of the Spirit of God, and requires no drawback for its interpretation. (3) They must forget that 'these things were written for our ensamples,' our 'models:' and that the only caveat necessary is, that we take care rightly to understand 'the mind of the Spirit'—'the mind of Christ'—speaking by the prophet, and imitate, not in our own spirit, but in God's. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How heartily the wicked, especially among the clergy, hate the faithful ministers of Christ! They who boldly remonstrate against the wickedness of an abandoned generation must scarcely expect the common formalities of justice. But God can soon make those who would frighten his prophets a terror to themselves. And they who attempt to stop their mouth do but hasten their own doom. It is never safe for ministers to promise themselves much comfort on earth. Neither the wisdom of the serpent, nor the harmlessness of the dove, will be able to preserve them from reproach and derision. Nay, ridicule and contempt are the common weapons of the ungodly against the preachers of truth. And it is no small pain to a faithful soul to hear God's messages treated with levity and contempt. To faint in the Lord's way, or to wish that we had never entered into it, because we meet with difficulties, is extremely weak and foolish. But it is an ease for burdened souls to pour out their complaints before the Lord: even that which is terrible in him turns out to their comfort. And when they avenge not themselves, but commit their cause to him, he will compass them about with songs of expected, and afterwards enjoyed, deliverance. But, alas! how inconstant are the frames of the best on earth. Now they mount up to heaven in excellency; but soon descend to the depths of weakness and guilt. Alas! what vanity and vexation of spirit fill up human life! But absurd is sinful passion when allowed to ramble. And it is dangerous to have an unbridled tongue while our passions are strong.

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 9. For a prey. As something snatched from the great 'spoilers'—the famine, the pestilence, and the sword. C.

Ver. 12. Execute judgment in the morning. Not in an evasive manner, but speedily; not by bribes, the ordinary course of eastern despotism, but by a faithful enforcement of the 'judgments' of God. C.

Ver. 14. Forest thereof. An allusion to the kindling of fires in forests by lightning, by the friction of branches in storms, by negligence, or by malice. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God often honours his ministers when they think that their days are consumed in shame. And they who would not take God's direction for de-

David, thou, and thy servants, and thy people that enter in by these gates;

3 Thus saith the LORD, [c]Execute ye judgment and righteousness, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor: and do no wrong, do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow, neither shed innocent blood in this place.

4 For [d]if ye do this thing indeed, [e]then shall there enter in by the gates of this house kings sitting upon the throne of David,[2] riding in chariots and on horses, he, and his servants, and his people.

5 But [g]if ye will not hear these words, I swear [h]by myself, saith the LORD, that [i]this house[3] shall become a desolation.

6 For thus saith the LORD unto the king's house of Judah, Thou art [4]Gilead[5] unto me, and the head of Lebanon:[6] yet surely [j]I will make thee a wilderness, and cities which are not inhabited.

7 And [k]I will prepare destroyers against thee, every one with his weapons; [l]and they shall cut down thy choice cedars, and cast them into the fire.

8 And [m]many nations shall pass by this city, and they shall say every man to his neighbour, Wherefore hath the LORD done thus unto this great city?

9 Then they shall answer, [o]Because they have forsaken the covenant of the LORD their God, and worshipped other gods, and served them.

10 ¶ Weep[p] ye not for the dead,[7] neither bemoan him; but weep sore for [q]him that goeth away: for he shall return no more, nor see his native country.

11 For thus saith the LORD touching Shallum[8] the son of Josiah king of Judah, which reigned instead of Josiah his father, which went forth out of this place, He shall not return thither any more:

12 But he shall die in the place whither they have led him captive, and shall see this land no more.

13 ¶ Woe unto him[9] that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, and his chambers by wrong; that useth his neighbour's service without wages, and giveth him not for his work;

liverance from sin, would often gladly take it for escaping from trouble. But it is vain to hope that God will do that for us in our sin which he did for others in their integrity; or that anything will help us when he is our determined adversary; or that men will pity us when we have forfeited his compassion. An ignominious slavery, or a miserable death, is but a dreadful alternative. But it is best to give up the defence of our country when we can do nothing for its relief. It is but a disgrace for men to be descended of godly ancestors when they indulge themselves in impiety. When nations are in danger, princes ought without delay to reform themselves and their subjects: and ministers who faithfully admonish them to it, had need to be well furnished with faith and courage.

CHAPTER XXII. Ver. 11. Shallum. This is another name for Jehoahaz, who succeeded Josiah, 2 Ki. 23. 30: 2 Ch. 36. 1: but who was deposed in three months, and carried into Egypt, where he died, 2 Ki. 23. 34. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Ministers must be faithful and bold, and tell kings and courtiers of their sins, dangers, and duties, as well as others. It is only in keeping God's commandments that we can expect a great reward. He has always instruments duly prepared for destructive work as well as for building up. And men's sins are sometimes so plainly marked in their judgments, that even heathens can justify his procedure; for he never casts them off till they first cast off him. Dying saints may be justly envied, whilst living sinners are to be pitied. No education or example can change men's hearts; but it is a terrible aggravation of men's wickedness that it is contrary to their pious education. Proud and mischievous rebellion against God entails upon multitudes the most lasting shame and disgrace: nay, distinguished pride is generally followed by distinguished dishonour and misery, either in life or in death. It is extremely foolish to set our hearts upon that which can be easily taken from us, or made a curse to us. And none are more apt to appear mean, or to pretend piety under adversity, than those who boast highly amidst prosperity. It were well if what we suffer would bring us to a serious repentance. Sometimes INTERIOR OF OUR TENT AT NAZARETH—THE TENT IS STANDING NEAR THE GREEK CHURCH OF ANNUNCIATION, IN NAZARETH, THE TOWN WHERE OUR LORD SPENT MOST OF HIS LIFE. [JEREMIAH, xxiii:5-6.]—'Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS." We give as an illustration of this Scripture the interior of the tent used in Palestine by the parties who secured the pictures of the places of Bible events for this Self-Interpreting Bible. We give this picture here because it was taken in Nazareth where our tent was pitched on the evening of the 5th of May, 1894. It is situated near the Virgin's Fountain, and is not far from the Greek Church of Annunciation. Here in this neighborhood grew up the righteous Branch which Jeremiah declared God would raise to David.

27 But to the land whereunto they desire[1] to return, [t]thither shall they not return.

28 Is this man Coniah [i]a despised broken idol? is he a vessel wherein is no pleasure? wherefore are they cast out, [k]he and his seed, and are cast into a land which they know not?

29 O earth,[2] earth, earth, hear the word of the LORD:

30 Thus saith the LORD, [l]Write ye this man childless,[3] a man that shall not prosper in his days: for [m]no man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Jeremiah prophesieth a restoration of the scattered flock. 5 Christ shall rule and save them. 9 God's fearful judgments against false prophets, 33 and mockers of the true ones.

WOE be[a] unto the pastors[1] that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! saith the LORD.

2 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel against the pastors that feed my people, Ye[b] have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited[2] them: behold, I will visit upon you the evil of your doings, saith the LORD.

3 And [c]I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds; and they shall be fruitful and increase.

4 And [d]I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them; and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking, saith the LORD.

5 ¶ Behold, [e]the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth.

6 In[g] his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.[3]

7 Therefore, behold, the days come,[4] saith the LORD, that they shall no more say, The LORD liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt;

5 The prophecy is here of Israel generally, and their gathering from 'all countries.' It follows that this prophecy, however it commenced typically, yet remains to be fulfilled; and the Lord will accomplish his purpose, and verify all his promises, as he has realized his judgments. C.

9 ¶ Mine[j] heart within me is broken because of the prophets; all my bones shake: I am like a drunken man, and like a man whom wine hath overcome, [k]because of the LORD, and because of the words of his holiness.

10 For[l] the land is full of adulterers; for because of [7]swearing[8] the land mourneth; [n]the pleasant places of the wilderness are dried up, and their course[9] is evil, and their force is not right.

11 For[o] both prophet and priest are profane; yea, [p]in my house have I found their wickedness, saith the LORD.

12 Wherefore [q]their way shall be unto them as slippery ways in the darkness; they shall be driven on, and fall therein: for [r]I will bring evil upon them, even the year of their visitation, saith the LORD.

persons are exalted even to thrones that God may pour the more public and lasting disgrace upon them and theirs. Nor need the greatest to be confident, since they know not what debasement and misery await them and their seed. But it is hard to awaken sinners lost in sensuality and earthly-mindedness. And how sovereign is God in making men fruitful or childless, honoured or dishonoured, as he thinks fit!

CHAPTER XXIII. Ver. 5, 6. Behold, in the fulness of time the Son of God shall appear in a holy but debased human nature; who, as God's King set up in his church, shall, with astonishing success, reform the world, and destroy the wicked out of it. By him shall his spiritual Israel be delivered from their sin and misery, and blessed with all spiritual and eternal blessings. In his holiness of nature, obedience of life, and satisfactory sufferings, he shall fulfil for us a complete and everlasting righteousness; by the impartation of which to us for our justification, he shall render us perfectly righteous in law before God as our Judge, and thus secure the gradual sanctification of our nature and practice. 9, 10. I am grieved to see the false prophets deluding the people into wickedness; and I tremble at the fearful judgments which God, in his infinite holiness, hath denounced against them. For though the wrath of God has already begun to destroy the country, for the abounding wickedness of its inhabitants, they continue to employ their whole power and labour in promoting and encouraging it. 17–20. They encourage the wicked and profane to hope that the Lord will prosper and protect them in their sins; and pretend that themselves alone know his mind, and that no message of reproof or threatening deserves any credit. But a sudden and dreadful storm of judgment shall overtake and ruin them, which shall force them to regard and believe such threatenings. 30. Either they mimicked the true prophets in their language, to render their own predictions the more easily believed, or they laboured to prejudice the people against their messages. 35, 36. Ye shall hereafter speak with great reverence and regard concerning the Lord's Word; but now your irreverent speeches shall pull down judgments on your own heads; for ye have derided and misinterpreted the words of your own God, who lives and reigns over all.

Ver. 3, 4. This prophecy began to be fulfilled under Zerubbabel, Nehemiah, Ezra, &c., the commencement being the type of the completion. The gathering of 'the remnant out of all countries,' and the time when 'they shall fear no more,' are events still future, which the experience of the past renders probable: the Word of God, certain. C.

Ver. 6. Righteousness is exactly equivalent to obedience, Ro. 5. 17–19. This obedience (that is, obedience to the law of God, Ro. 5. 20, unreserved and complete: and there is, and there can be, no other) never was rendered unless by Christ, Ro. 3. 10; comp. with 2 Co. 5. 21; Phi. 2. 8. But he being the WORD OF JEHOVAH, Ge. 15. 1–7, 18, 'God manifest in the flesh,' 'as many as (by faith) receive him,' can truly say, he is 'JEHOVAH OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.'—Note, It is not unimportant to observe, that the best Jewish expositors unite JEHOVAH with RIGHTEOUSNESS: and the most learned Christians so translate the passage. C.

Ver. 33. 'A burden,' signifies a calamitous prophecy. The question here is put by the speakers lightly, and in contempt of the often repeated and heavy denunciations against sin and sinners. As if they had said, What next? What new judgment that will never come?—Note, Lightness of speech, turning serious things into a jest, may amuse the thoughtless for an hour; but is

The LORD hath said, [a]Ye shall have peace; and they say unto every one that walketh after the imagination[6] of his own heart, No evil shall come upon you.

18 For [b]who hath stood in the counsel[7] of the LORD, and hath perceived and heard his word? [8] who[c] hath marked his word, and heard it?

19 Behold, [d]a whirlwind of the LORD is gone forth in fury, even a grievous whirlwind: it shall fall grievously upon the head of the wicked.

20 The anger of the LORD shall not return, until he have executed, [e]and till he have performed the thoughts of his heart: [9]in the latter days[9] ye shall consider it perfectly.

21 I[h] have not sent these prophets, yet they ran: I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied.

22 But [i]if they had stood in my counsel, and had caused my people to hear my words, [j]then they should have turned them from their evil way, and from the evil of their doings.

23 Am[1] I a God at hand,[2] saith the LORD, and not a God afar off?

false dreams, saith the LORD, and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies, and by their [8]lightness;[9] yet I sent them not, nor commanded them: therefore [y]they shall not profit this people at all, saith the LORD.

33 ¶ And when this people, or the prophet, or a priest, shall ask thee, saying, [z]What is the burden of the LORD? thou shalt then say unto them, What burden? I will even [a]forsake you, saith the LORD.

34 And as for the prophet, and the priest, and the people, that shall say, The burden of the LORD, I will even punish[1] that man and his house.

35 Thus[b] shall ye say every one to his neighbour, and every one to his brother, What hath the LORD answered? and, What hath the LORD spoken?

36 And the burden of the LORD shall ye mention no more; [c]for every man's word shall be his burden:[2] for ye [d]have perverted the words of the living God, of the LORD of hosts our God.

37 Thus shalt thou say to the prophet, What hath the LORD answered thee? and, What hath the LORD spoken?

38 But since ye say, The burden of the LORD; therefore thus saith the LORD, Because ye say this word, The burden of the LORD, and I have sent unto you, saying, Ye shall not say, The burden of the LORD;

39 Therefore, behold, [e]I, even I, will utterly forget you, and I will forsake you, and the city that I gave you and your fathers, and cast you out of my presence:

sure to bring its own punishment, by unfitting the understanding for serious realities, and hardening the heart against sympathy with human sorrows. Besides all which it underlies the sentence: 'I will ever punish that man and his house.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—At their own infinite hazard, rulers neglect to execute their office to the honour of God and the welfare of his people. But though they should not, he will at last see to these ends. And often he mercifully gathers his people after he has wrathfully cut off their rulers. The church's peace, happiness, and honour are not founded in the external pomp of her rulers, but in having Jesus Christ as her Prophet, Priest, and King. And his spiritual deliverances are more remarkable than the temporal ones granted to the Jewish nation. That sinners dishonour God and ruin themselves are very grievous considerations to gracious souls. But no guilt is so aggravated as that of profane clergymen. And nothing so emboldens and hardens sinners as when teachers, by their example or doctrine, encourage them in wickedness. No plague is more dangerous than clergymen who intrude into their office by the influence of patrons or church rulers, without any commission from Christ, or who preach another gospel, as if men's own works, however insignificant, could recommend them to the favour of God. It tends to render men quite irreligious and atheistical. And no preachers are so confident of their own abilities as evil and erroneous ones. If God call men to the ministry, he will not only qualify them for it, but give them some success in it. And while profane ministers ought to be detested by all, as the very offscourings of mankind, it is infinitely dangerous to sport with, or make by-words of, any part of the Scripture. God will honour and magnify his own Word in the ruin of the mockers and perverters of it.

CHAPTER XXIV. REFLECTIONS.—Greatly mysterious are the ways of God's providence. The most afflictive are often the most useful. The same dispensation is to some a blessing and to others a ruinous plague. And all ought to be taken as out of God's own hand. Exact is his knowledge of and care for had very naughty figs, which could not be eaten, they were so bad.[3]

3 Then said the LORD unto me, [e]What seest thou, Jeremiah? And I said, Figs; the good figs, very good; [g]and the evil, very evil, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

4 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

5 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Like these good figs, [h]so will I acknowledge them[4] that are carried away captive[5] of Judah, whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans [i]for their good.

6 For [j]I will set mine eyes upon them for good, and [k]I will bring them again to this land: and I will build them, and not pull them down; and I will plant them, and not pluck them up.[6]

7 And [l]I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the LORD: and [m]they shall be my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me with their [o]whole heart.

8 ¶ And as the evil [p]figs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil; surely thus saith the LORD, So will I give Zedekiah the king of Judah, and his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem, that remain in this land, and them that [q]dwell in the land of Egypt;

9 And I will deliver them to [r]be removed[7] into all the kingdoms of the earth for their hurt, to be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt and a curse, in all places whither I shall drive them.

10 And [s]I will send the sword, the famine, and the pestilence, among them, till they be consumed from off the land that I gave unto them and to their fathers.

But has it been fulfilled when it promised to 'build and not pull down; to plant, and not pluck up'? Have not these very men, in their descendants, been as a building laid in ruins, as a tree uprooted? True. But before this judgment came, in part, because 'blindness, in part, had happened to Israel' (Ro. 11. 25), God had gathered out of them 'a remnant, according to the election of grace' (Ro. 11. 5, 7), who became 'God's husbandry and God's building' (1 Co. 3. 9. Ep. 2. 21), a temple never to be pulled down (1 Co. 3. 16); a tree never to be plucked up (Ro. 11. 17,29). 2 The which Jeremiah the prophet spake [b]unto all the people of Judah, and to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying,

3 From the thirteenth year of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, even unto this day, that is, the three and twentieth year,[2] the word of the LORD hath come unto me, and I have spoken unto you, [c]rising early and speaking; [d]but ye have not hearkened.

4 And the LORD hath sent unto you all his servants[3] the [e]prophets, rising early and sending them; but ye have not hearkened, nor inclined your ear to hear.

5 They said, [g]Turn ye again now every one from his evil way, and from the evil of your doings, and dwell in the land that the LORD hath given unto you, and to your fathers [h]for ever and ever:

6 And [i]go not after other gods to serve them, and to worship them, and provoke me not to anger with the works of your hands; and I will do you no hurt.

7 Yet [j]ye have not hearkened unto me, saith the LORD; that ye might provoke me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt.

8 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, Because ye have not heard my words,

9 Behold, [k]I will send and take all the families of the north, saith the LORD, and Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, [l]my servant, and will bring them against this land, and against the inhabitants thereof, and against all these nations round about, and will utterly destroy them, and make them an astonishment, and an hissing, and perpetual desolations.

his people in the worst of times. It is he who, by his blessed grace, must renew our heart; and draw us to himself, as well as receive us with open arms to his favour, and to the enjoyment of all the privileges of his people. But, alas! what judgment, in time and eternity, must await impenitent transgressors! And when some are signally punished, others should learn to avoid their wickedness.

CHAPTER XXV. Ver. 18–25. Beginning at the most distant. The Egyptians, Philistines, Tyrians, Sidonians, Jews, Edomites, Moabites, Ammonites, Arabians, Syrians, dwelt westward of Babylon; and the Elamites or Persians and the Medes on the east side of it. (See Introduction, ch. iv. sect. 1–13.)

Ver. 9. My servant. Whether Nebuchadrezzar became God's servant in heart may be questioned: though his intimacy with Daniel, a man who would keep his religion no secret, together with the declaration of his faith, Da. 4. 34, 37, lead to the conclusion that he was a convert to the truth. Still both he and every potentate is the providential servant of the Most High, fulfilling his purposes of mercy or judgment on the nations they govern or destroy.—The word rendered 'perpetual' implies, Ex. 21. 6, no more than continuation till the jubilee. Like other words, it is modified, not by any change in itself, but by the nature of the subject treated of, and the other words with which it is combined. Here it may be understood as limited to continuation till 'the (prophetic) times of the restitution of all things,' Ac. 3. 21; or it may be taken absolutely and without limit; for the nations whom God did 'utterly destroy,' do now stand and will continue to stand, in the page of history, as 'perpetual' monuments of the 'desolations' occasioned by sin, Ps. 46. 8. C.

Ver. 12. When Jeremiah prophesied, Babylon was the queen of cities and the crown of empires. Situated on a noble river, in the centre of commerce and civilization, no city ever seemed more calculated for perpetual glory. But the Spirit of prophecy pronounced her doom: and all that now remains of 'this great Babylon,' is a few grave-like mounds, the burial-places of her palaces, and one solitary fragment of her idolatrous temple—the witness of God's unerring foreknowledge, and the monument of his righteous judgment. C.

Ver. 15. Drunk it. By a common mode of speech the ear is said to drink and to devour, when the mind, through eager curiosity, excited alarm, or other strong emotion, gives earnest heed to what is spoken. C.

Ver. 17. Cup. A full cup is a striking emblem, and consequently a common expression for prosperity; a bitter cup for adversity; a wine-cup, as productive of drunkenness, is an equally intelligible emblem of luxury, ending in irrationality, madness, and ruin. C.

Ver. 18. As it is this day. There is no reason to conclude that these words were added after their fulfilment. For as the prophet says he had 'made all nations drink,' he looks forward to the judgments as already accomplished, and speaks of the future as of the present, because he foresaw it as certain. C.

Ver. 20. Remnant. They are called 'the remnant,' because Ashdod had been besieged by Psammiticus, king of Egypt, during twenty-nine years; and when he at last took it, he found it reduced to a few living skeletons, the sole survivors of the ruin of their city. C.

Ver. 34. Shepherds. This warning address may be to rulers under the emblem of shepherds, who ought to lead and protect the flock; or it may be directed chiefly to those pastoral nations which had not adopted husbandry or manufactures, and whose kings and nobles were literally shepherds, their flocks and herds being their principal riches. See Job 1. 3. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's words, which concern all, ought to be publicly proclaimed. He keeps an exact account of every circumstance relative to our enjoyment and improvement of the means of grace. And they who declare his messages ought to be earnest and diligent in delivering them, that they may at least be free from the blood of all men; and all of them should insist upon the same leading truths of the gospel. But if God's messengers of peace be contemned, his messengers of wrath will soon follow, and make dreadful king of Babylon, and that nation, saith the LORD, for their iniquity, and the land of the Chaldeans, and will make it [s]perpetual desolations.

13 And I will bring upon that land all my words which I have pronounced against it, even all that is written in this book, which Jeremiah hath prophesied against all the nations.

14 For [t]many nations[9] and great kings[1] shall serve themselves of them[2] also: [u]and I will recompense them according to their deeds, and according to the works of their own hands.

15 ¶ For thus saith the LORD God of Israel unto me, Take the [v]wine-cup of this fury at my hand, [z]and cause all the nations, to whom I send thee, to drink it.

16 And they shall drink, [y]and be moved, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them.

17 Then[z] took I the cup at the LORD's hand, and made all the nations to drink,[3] unto whom the LORD had sent me:

18 To wit, [a]Jerusalem, and the cities of Judah, and the kings thereof, and the princes thereof, to[b] make them a desolation, an astonishment, an hissing, and a curse; [c]as it is this day;

19 Pharaoh[d] king of Egypt, and his servants, and his princes, and all his people;

20 And[e] all the mingled people,[4] and all the kings of the land of [g]Uz, and all the kings[5] of the land of the [h]Philistines, and Ashkelon, and Azzah, and Ekron, and the remnant of Ashdod,

21 Edom,[i] and [j]Moab, and the children of Ammon,

22 And [k]all the kings of Tyrus, and all the kings of Zidon, and the kings of the isles which are beyond the sea,[6]

23 Dedan,[l] and Tema, and Buz, and all that are [7]in the utmost corners,[8]

24 And all the kings of Arabia, [n]and all the kings of the mingled people that dwell in the desert,

25 And all the kings of Zimri, and all the kings of [o]Elam, and all the kings of the Medes, 26 And all the kings of the north,[9] far and near, one with another, and all the kingdoms of the world,[1] which are upon the face of the earth: and the king of [2]Sheshach[3] shall drink after them.

27 Therefore thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Drink[p] ye, and be drunken, and spue, and fall, and rise no more, because of the sword which I will send among you.

28 And it shall be if they refuse[4] to take the cup at thine hand to drink, then shalt thou say unto them, [q]Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Ye shall certainly drink.

29 For, lo, [r]I begin to bring evil on the city which is called by my name;[5] and [s]should ye be utterly unpunished?[6] Ye shall not be unpunished: [t]for I will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth, saith the LORD of hosts.

30 Therefore prophesy thou against them all these words, and say unto them, The LORD shall [7]roar[8] from on high, and utter his voice from his holy habitation; he shall mightily roar upon his habitation; [u]he shall give a shout, as they that tread the grapes,[9] against all the inhabitants of the earth.

31 A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth: [v]for the LORD hath a controversy with the nations; he will plead with all flesh: he will give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the LORD.

32 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, [z]evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth.

33 And[y] the slain of the LORD shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth: [z]they shall not be lamented, neither gathered, nor buried; they shall be dung upon the ground.

34 ¶ Howl,[a] ye shepherds,[1] and cry; and wallow yourselves in the ashes, ye principal of the flock: for the days of your slaughter[2] and of your dispersions are accomplished; and ye shall fall [b]like a pleasant [3]vessel.[4]

35 [c]And [5]the shepherds shall[d] have no way to flee, nor the principal of the flock to [6]escape.

36 A[e] voice of the cry of the shepherds, and an howling of the principal of the flock, shall be heard: for the LORD hath spoiled their [7]pasture.

37 And[g] the peaceable habitations are cut down, [h]because of the fierce anger of the LORD.

work. God does not usually strike without warning; but if we will not hear we must perish. When judgment begins at the house of God, it ordinarily makes fearful and overturning work among all, even the mightiest nations around, before it cease. That God, to whom all nations are accountable, can easily, by a small sip of his unbounded wrath, by a stroke of his sword, or the roaring of his voice, terrify, perplex, and destroy them, however numerous, powerful, or secure. And they who have plagued their neighbours, and especially the people of God, shall have their fill of vexation and misery at last.—Men who are ambitious of power generally become troublers and destroyers to the world around. But great earthly pomp and power are of very uncertain, and often of very short, continuance. And no sinners can either withstand or outrun the judgments of God. When wars are once kindled, the higher men are the more is their danger; and even cities of Judah, which [c]come to worship[1] in the LORD's house, [d]all the words that I command thee to speak unto them; diminish not a word:

THE KING'S CHAMBER—WHERE ONE OF THE EGYPTIAN PHARAOHS WAS BURIED. [JEREMIAH, XXV: 19.]—"Pharaoh king of Egypt, and his servants, and his princes, and all his people." The Pharaoh to whom Jeremiah refers is not Cheops who built the Great Pyramid for his tomb. Ezekiel's Pharaoh was the successor in after ages of Cheops. "Pharaoh" is a general term used by the ancient Egyptians to denote their ruler. The King's Chamber is near the heart of the Great Pyramid, the largest that was ever built. Cheops was the second king of the fourth dynasty, and according to Wallis Budge, reigned 3733 B. C. The name of this Pharaoh was found written in red ink upon blocks of stone inside the pyramid. The King's Chamber is lined with granite, and measures about thirty-five by seventeen by nineteen feet. The floor of the King's Chamber is abont one hundred and forty feet from the level of the base of the pyramid.

3 If[e] so be they will hearken and turn every man from his evil way, that I may repent me of the evil, which I purpose to do unto them because of the evil of their doings.

4 And thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD, [g]If ye will not hearken to me, to walk in my law, which I have set before you,

5 To[h] hearken to the words of my servants the prophets, whom I sent unto you, both rising up early,[2] and sending them, but ye have not hearkened;

6 Then will I make this house [i]like Shiloh, and will make this city [j]a curse[3] to all the nations of the earth.

7 So [k]the priests, and the prophets, and all the people, heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of the LORD.

8 ¶ Now it came to pass, when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking all that the LORD had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that [l]the priests, and the prophets, and all the people, took him, saying, Thou shalt surely die.

9 Why[m] hast thou prophesied in the name of the LORD, saying, This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant? [o]and all the people were gathered against Jeremiah [p]in the house of the LORD.

10 When [q]the princes of Judah heard these things, then they came up from the king's house unto the house of the LORD, and sat down in the entry[4] of the [r]new gate of the LORD's house.

11 Then [s]spake the priests and the prophets unto the princes, and to all the people, saying, This man is worthy to die;[5] for[t] he hath prophesied against this city, as ye have heard with your ears.

12 ¶ Then spake Jeremiah unto all the princes, and to all the people, saying, [w]The LORD sent me to prophesy against this house, and against this city, all the words that ye have heard.

13 Therefore now [v]amend your ways, and your doings, and obey the voice of the LORD your God; and the LORD will repent him of the evil that he hath pronounced against you.

many who had lived harmlessly share in the hardships. But if the ravages of war be so tremendous, what infinitely more fearful work must be the consciousness of having sinned away our opportunity to get to heaven for ever and ever! Let then wars and troubles, however distant, make me to hear and fear, and embrace his new covenant of peace offered in the gospel, that I may at last enter into that peaceful habitation, into which no fire or sword, no violence or destruction, can ever enter.

CHAPTER XXVI. REFLECTIONS.—God patiently waits, and earnestly calls men to repentance. The dispensations of his providence are just and even similar. And if men will not be subject to his command, they must be subjected to his curse, and the execution of it. If they will not be warned, they must be condemned. Profane clergymen never fail to hate and persecute such as are faithful for their kind warnings. But to be bold in preaching, and patient in suffering, is truly worthy of a minister of Christ. And no damage or death ought to make them in the least recede from God's truth. If they be faithful, it is at their infinite peril who persecute and murder them. It is proper that men should deter themselves, or others, from sin, by the irreparable mischief it will do to our souls. And it is the wisdom of the greatest to regard the admonitions of JEHOVAH. More justice may be expected from profligate civil judges than from abandoned clergy. And yet many wicked princes eagerly draw down the judgment of God upon their heads by the persecution of their faithful admonishers. But it is beyond their power to cut off God's ministers or worshippers till their testimony be finished: and whenever it pleases God he can, in the very worst of times, raise up protectors to his servants. Let us then always attend to our duty, and commit our safety to God, who has the hearts of all men in his hand, and can raise us up friends in the day of trial where we least expected to find them.

CHAPTER XXVII. Ver. 7. They served Nebuchadnezzar, and Evil-merodach his son, and Belshazzar his grandson: and then came the time fixed by God for the overthrow of the Chaldean monarchy, when the Medes, Persians, and their allies reduced it, and rendered the Chaldeans tributaries and slaves.

REFLECTIONS.—The whole earth is the Lord's, and he may dispose of it as he pleases. And since he puts little value upon it, he often gives most of it to the wicked; and soon he will call them to account for their use of his gifts. Civil dominion is far from being founded on either the reality or the appearance of saving grace. And they who have no shadow of a right to eternal life, may have a justifiable right to son of Shaphan was with Jeremiah, [p]that they should not give him into the hand of the people to put him to death.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Under the type of bonds and yokes he prophesieth the subduing of the neighbour kings unto Nebuchadnezzar. 8 He exhorteth them to yield, and not to believe the false prophets. 12 The like he doeth to Zedekiah. 19 He foretelleth the remnant of the vessels shall be carried to Babylon, and there continue until the day of visitation.

IN the beginning of the reign of [1]Jehoiakim[2] the son of Josiah king of Judah, [a]came this word unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD to me, [b]Make thee bonds and yokes, and put them upon thy neck,

3 And send them [c]to the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the Ammonites, and to the king of Tyrus, and to the king of Zidon, by the hand of the messengers which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah king of Judah;[3]

4 And command them to say unto their masters,[4] Thus saith [d]the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Thus shall ye say unto your masters;

5 I[e] have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power, and by my outstretched arm, and [g]have given it unto whom it seemed meet unto me.

6 And now [h]have I given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, [i]my servant; and [j]the beasts of the field have I given him also to serve him.

7 And[k] all nations shall serve him, and his son, and his son's son, until the very time of his land come;[5] and then many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of him.

8 And it shall come to pass, that the nation and kingdom which will not serve the same Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, and that will not put their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, that nation [l]will I punish,[6] saith the LORD, with the sword, and with the famine, and with the pestilence, until I have consumed them by his hand.

9 Therefore [m]hearken not ye to your prophets, nor to your diviners, nor to your dreamers,[7] nor[n] to your enchanters, nor to your sorcerers, which speak unto you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon:

10 For[p] they prophesy a lie unto you, to remove you far from your land; and that I should drive you out, and ye should perish.

11 But the nations that bring their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve[8] him, [q]those will I let remain still in their own land, saith the LORD; and they shall till it, and dwell therein.

CHAP. XXVII.

1 Or Zedekiah, ver. 3, 12, 20, or, the order was given under Jehoiakim, but not executed till under Zedekiah.

2 In several MSS., and in the Syriac and Arabic, it is 'Zedekiah,' which change ver. 3 seems to require; and this reading is supported by commentators of the highest rank. Still there seems an insuperable difficulty in the way, viz. Jehoiakim is specially described as 'the son of Josiah,' whereas Zedekiah was his brother, 2 Ki. 24. 17. Is it not, therefore, necessary to conclude that the authorized reading is correct? And may it not be explained thus? The word came to the prophet 'in the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim;' and it not only foretold the captivity, but the extinction or degradation of the line of Jehoiakim, and the elevation of Zedekiah, and the sending of the yokes and bonds, either actually or prophetically, by the ambassadors of the neighbouring states, who should come to congratulate him upon his accession to the throne of Judah? C.—There must be an error here in the text. Jehoiakim reigned eleven years. This prophecy and the command embodied in it were given to Jeremiah in the commencement of his reign, and consequently eleven years before his brother Zedekiah was placed upon the throne by Nebuchadnezzar. Yet in ver. 3 and again in ver. 12 of this chapter it appears that Zedekiah was the reigning monarch at the time of the prophecy. So also in ch. 28. 1, the same fact is expressly affirmed. We must conclude, therefore, that the name Jehoiakim has, by the error of some early copyist, been inserted instead of Zedekiah. An ancient MSS. with the Syriac and Arabic versions have the reading Zedekiah, which is adopted by some of the best critics.—P.

8 There are few objects about which men are more anxious than national independence and political liberty. few things more hateful to a nation than a foreign yoke. Of these desires and aversions God avails himself that he may illustrate and enforce the doctrine of divine foreknowledge and providential retribution—two doctrines that idolatrous nations totally disbelieve, and to which Christian nations too little attend. The one should lead to a careful study of prophecy, and observation of 'the signs of the times;' the other, to the conformity of all political principles and practices with the immutable laws of divine truth, justice, and mercy.—C.

1 The address to the nations was founded upon the permanence or loss of their possessions, ver. 11; that to Zedekiah upon false prophets. These were uniformly the rocks upon which Israel suffered shipwreck, their kings especially. See 1 Ki. 22. 6–40. Admitting JEHOVAH'S fore-knowledge, they did not 'try the spirits' that pretended to speak in his name. Loving idols and sins, they listened to the prophets that flattered their propensities, and counted those their enemies who were bold enough to tell them the truth.—C.

16 ¶ Also I spake to the priests, and to all this people, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Hearken not to the words of your prophets that prophesy unto you, saying, [y]Behold, the vessels of the LORD'S house shall now shortly be brought again from Babylon: for they prophesy a lie unto you.

17 Hearken[z] not unto them; serve the king of Babylon, and live: [a]wherefore should this city be laid waste?

20 Which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took not, when [e]he carried away captive Jeconiah, the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, from Jerusalem to Babylon, and all the nobles[3] of Judah and Jerusalem;

21 Yea, thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, concerning the vessels that [g]remain in the house of the LORD, and in the house of the king of Judah and of Jerusalem;

22 They shall be [h]carried to Babylon, and there shall they be [i]until the day that I visit them, saith the LORD: then [j]will I bring them up, and restore them to this place.

temporal enjoyments. They who in any respect serve God never lose by his service; and if we will not serve our Maker and Preserver, it is but just that we be forced to serve our enemies. It is very unsafe to struggle against his providence; for when he judges, he will overcome. When his judgments are abroad in the earth, we ought not to seek great things for ourselves, but to be thankful for little. And if his judgments are begun, it is better to alleviate the burden by submission, than to make it heavier by perverseness. Yea, though we should never see the deliverance of God's church, we ought never to despair of it: he will at

Judah, in the fourth [2]year,[3] and in the fifth month, that Hananiah the son of Azur [b]the prophet, which was of Gibeon, spake unto me in the house of the LORD, in the presence of the priests, and of all the people, saying,

2 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, I have broken the [c]yoke of the king of Babylon:

3 Within two full years[4] will[d] I bring again into this place [e]all the vessels of the LORD's house that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took away from this place, and carried them to Babylon;

4 And I will bring again to this place Jeconiah[5] the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, with all the captives[6] of Judah, that went into Babylon, saith the LORD: for I will [g]break the yoke of the king of Babylon.

5 ¶ Then the prophet Jeremiah said unto the prophet Hananiah in the presence of the priests, and in the presence of all the people that stood [h]in the house of the LORD,

6 Even the prophet Jeremiah said, [7]Amen:[8] the LORD do so; the LORD perform thy words which thou hast prophesied, to bring again the vessels of the LORD's house, and all that is carried away captive, from Babylon into this place.

7 Nevertheless,[i] hear thou now this word that I speak in thine ears, and in the ears of all the people:

8 The prophets that have been before me and before thee of old, [j]prophesied both against many countries, [k]and against great kingdoms, of war, and of evil, and of pestilence.

9 The prophet which prophesieth of peace,[9] when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, [l]then shall the prophet be known, that the LORD hath truly sent him.

10 ¶ Then Hananiah the prophet took the yoke[n] from off the prophet Jeremiah's neck, and brake it.

11 And Hananiah spake in the presence of all the people, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Even so [o]will I break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon from the neck of all nations within the space of two full years. And the prophet Jeremiah [p]went his way.[1]

12 ¶ Then the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the prophet, after that Hananiah the prophet had broken the yoke from off the neck of the prophet Jeremiah, saying,

13 Go and tell Hananiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Thou hast broken the yokes of wood, but thou shalt make for them yokes of iron.[2]

14 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, I have put a yoke of iron upon the neck of all these nations, that they may serve Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and they shall serve him: [q]and I have given him the beasts of the field also.

15 ¶ Then said the prophet Jeremiah unto Hananiah the prophet, Hear now, Hananiah, [r]The LORD hath not sent thee; but thou makest this people to trust in a lie.

16 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will cast thee from off the face of the earth: this year [s]thou shalt die, because thou hast taught [3]rebellion[4] against the LORD.

17 So[t] Hananiah the prophet died the same year, in the seventh month.

3 From what year was it the fourth? Some think from the jubilee; but of this there is no intimation. May it not be estimated thus? Nebuchadnezzar conquered Judea, and rendered Jehoiakim tributary, from which period the principal computation of the seventy years' captivity commences. At the end of three years, however, Jehoiakim rebelled, when the invasion was renewed; and on the death of Jehoiakim, which occurred soon after, Jehoiachin succeeded, and reigned three months, and was succeeded by Zedekiah in the fourth year since the first subjugation of Judea, and of the first captivity.—C.

The prayer that follows, it is to be noted, only seeks the fact of the restoration, and makes no mention of the time; for the prophet knowing the mind of the Lord respecting the seventy years' captivity, could not pray, in faith, for Hananiah's period of two years, which he knew to be an unauthorized and false prediction.—C.

last, in wrath, remember mercy. Meanwhile, let us detest flattering clergy. Incapable of interceding for their welfare, these hurry nations and churches into utter destruction, and perish in misery, along with those whom they have deceived.

CHAPTER XXVIII. REFLECTIONS. — False teachers impudently dare to preach their other gospel, and speak lies in God's name. But what is the chaff to the wheat? Not majesty of style, not the inculcating of faith or repentance, but flattering hints of prosperity in sin, mark their discourses. Alas! how strangely were the Jews besotted, who, contrary to manifold warnings, believed such impostors as flattered them to their ruin! But falsehood, advanced with solemnity and confidence, often gains regard. And many dare to affirm that to be God's truth which shortly will be found a lie, to their own damnation. But the faithful servants of God must not strive; and if they are reviled, they must not revile again. God will, in his due time, vindicate their honour, and disgrace and punish their opposers. And none may expect heavier judgments than they who hinder the success of God's Word, and seek to prejudice men's minds against the faithful ministers of it. At last every one who ran into sacred offices unsent, or who preached his own inventions instead of the truths of Christ, shall reap the due reward of his wickedness.

CHAPTER XXIX. REFLECTIONS.—Letters of seasonable comfort or advice are a service to God and his church. Though God correct his people, he never breaks his promise with them. And the view of God as our God, and the appointer of our troubles, tends greatly to render us patient under them. In every condition we ought to make the best of what we have, though we should be far from having all we wish. They who behave meekly and quietly often meet with better treatment from strangers than they expected. And whatever hardships we have to endure in a country, we should pray for its welfare. When people love to be deceived, they readily find flatterers to their ruin. But they who trust the promises of God shall never be disappointed. No difficulties can hinder the execution of his purposes, or fulfilment of his promises, your daughters to husbands, that they may bear sons and daughters; that ye may be increased there, and not diminished.

7 And seek[7] the peace[8] of the city whither I have caused you to be carried away captives, and pray unto the LORD for it: for in the peace thereof shall ye have peace.

8 ¶ For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, [i]Let not your prophets and your diviners, that be in the midst of you, deceive you, neither hearken to your dreams which ye cause to be dreamed.

9 For they prophesy falsely[9] unto you in my name; I have not sent them, saith the LORD.

10 ¶ For thus saith the LORD, That after seventy[k] years be accomplished at Babylon I will visit you, [l]and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place.

11 For I know [m]the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the LORD, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an [o]expected end.[1]

13 And [r]ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me [s]with all your heart.

14 And[t] I will be found of you, saith the LORD; and [u]I will turn away your captivity, and I will gather you from all the nations, and from all the places whither I have driven you, saith the LORD; and I will bring you again into the place whence I caused you to be carried away captive.

15 ¶ Because[2] ye have said, The LORD hath raised us up [v]prophets in Babylon;[3]

16 Know that [x]thus saith the LORD of the king that sitteth upon the throne of David, and of all the people that dwelleth in this city, and of your brethren that are not gone forth with you into captivity;

17 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, I will send upon them the sword, the famine, and the pestilence, and will make them like vile figs, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

18 And I will persecute them with the sword, with the famine, and with the pestilence, [y]and will deliver them to be removed to all the kingdoms of the earth, to be[4] a curse, and an astonishment, and an hissing, and a reproach, among all the nations whither I have driven them:

19 Because[z] they have not hearkened to my words, saith the LORD, which I sent unto them by my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them; but ye would not hear, saith the LORD.

20 ¶ Hear[a] ye, therefore, the word of the LORD, all ye of the captivity, whom [b]I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon:

21 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, of Ahab the son of Kolaiah, and of Zedekiah the son of Maaseiah, [c]who prophesy a lie unto you in my name, Behold, I will deliver them into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall slay them before your eyes;

22 And of them shall be taken up [d]a curse by all the captivity of Judah which are in Babylon, saying, The LORD make thee like Zedekiah and like Ahab, whom the king of Babylon [e]roasted in the fire;[5]

23 Because they [g]have committed villany in Israel, and have committed adultery with their neighbours' wives, and have spoken lying words in my name, which I have not commanded them; [h]even I know, and am a witness, saith the LORD.

24 ¶ Thus shalt thou also speak to Shemaiah the Nehelamite,[6] saying,

25 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, Because thou hast [i]sent letters in thy name unto all the people that are at Jerusalem, and to [j]Zephaniah[7] the son of Maaseiah, the priest, and to all the priests, saying,

26 The LORD hath made thee priest in the stead of [k]Jehoiada the priest, that ye should be officers in the house of the LORD, for every man that is [l]mad,[8] and maketh himself a prophet, [m]that thou shouldest put him in prison, and in the stocks.

8 Since our Lord was accused of being mad, no one need be surprised that Jeremiah under the Old Testament, and Paul under the New, should both have been so calumniated, Jn. 10. 20. Mark 3. 21. And, as it is easier to invent a falsehood than to answer an argument; and, as many will at all times be found more willing to listen to an evil report than patiently to examine evidence; and, as in true religion there must be many things strange to the ears, and above the apprehension of worldly men, the continuance of such calumnies and accusations, down to the present time, cannot excite the wonder of any acquainted with the world and its ways; with the malice and the wiles of Satan and his emissaries.—C.

beyond the due time. And his promises should excite, not supersede, our earnest prayers. By prayer we go forth to meet the accomplishment of promises. And it is when our supplications are fervent, cordial, and persevering, that we may expect gracious returns. Alas! how often men mistake the messengers, the preachers, and prophets of Satan, for those of Jesus Christ, and credit them as such! But they who flatter men in sin are undoubtedly false prophets. And if men make themselves vile by their sins, God, in just judgment, will render them vile in their sufferings. If evil clergymen indulge themselves in secret wickedness, let them not wonder if God render them base before all the people on earth, and eternally lost in hell. They who would be faithful to souls, may expect to be treated by their unfaithful brethren as deceivers or madmen: persecuting zeal, under pretence of regard to the honour of God, will extend its murderous influence to the utmost; and very often church power is employed in tormenting her best friends. But God often renders those friendly to his faithful servants of whom it could scarcely have been expected; while their persecutors are quickly overwhelmed with ruin; and they that would not wait the due season of God's favours, lose their share in them.

CHAPTER XXX. Ver. 3. Israel and Judah. The promise is distinctly made both to Israel, or the ten tribes that separated from Rehoboam, and Judah, or the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, including most of the tribe of Levi. Now, though Judah was restored under Zerubbabel and his friends, Israel, or the ten tribes, never were. Indeed, their present residence is either totally unknown, or matter of continued question. Some believe them to be the modern Affghans; others, the American Indians; others, the Nestorian Christians in the neighbourhood of the Caspian Sea, &c. But, wherever they may be, they are yet to 'return and possess the land' that God gave to their fathers. C.

Ver. 11. Full end. Not necessarily an extermination of persons, but a 'full end' of their power and glory. This event has been exemplified in the Assyrian, Medo-Persian, Grecian, and Roman empires. And, strange as it may appear, the descendants of Jacob possess at this moment a name and visible being, and exercise a power in the financial, and by consequence in the political, affairs of the world, possessed by no representative of those mighty and extinct monarchies. So literally verified is this prophecy, that, while the mightiest empires have been dissolved and come to 'a full end,' a people comparatively few and feeble retain their name, their laws, their identity, nay, their power; and shadow out, even in their dispersion, the glory that awaits them when 'Jacob shall return and be in rest.' C.

Ver. 12. Incurable. The word has been translated 'desperate;' and it has also been explained as signifying 'incurable' by human means. And this exposition is countenanced by ver. 17, in which health and healing are promised by God himself. Still there is a sense in which the bruise (of sin) may justly be called 'incurable;' for, in truth, the 'old man' is not healed, but 'mortified;' the 'body of sin' is not renovated, but 'destroyed.' 'Old things pass away, and all things become new,' Ro. 6. 6; 8. 13: 2 Co. 5. 17. C.

Ver. 16. Shall be devoured. The Babylonians were 'devoured' by the Medes and Persians, they again by the Grecians; and they by the Romans. And it abides an historical and incontrovertible fact, that each of these empires has fallen, or been 'devoured,' just in proportion to their cruelty or kindness to the Jewish church. The cruel Babylonian empire has been utterly exterminated. The Persians restored Israel, and Persia still survives. C.

Ver. 19. Merry. Not the 'mirth of fools,' which is as the 'crackling of thorns,' but the voice of thanksgiving for mercies, and of spiritual joy in the victories of grace.—Note, Religion is much injured by any undue gloominess of religious men. No doubt there are times when it is impossible to look upon sinners without sorrow. Yet, as 'there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth,' the children of God may always find cause to 'make (truly) merry,' Ps. 100. 1, 2: Lu. 15. 7, 10. C.

Ver. 24. The latter days. Marked not by any chronology, but by historical description of facts. Thus they are noted, Da. 2. 28, as the days during, and subsequent to, the subversion of the fourth monarchy: and in Ac. 2. 17 the 'last days,' which seem to be identical with the 'latter days,' are dated from the miraculous outpouring of the Spirit of God in tongues and other miraculous gifts at Pentecost. C.

27 Now, therefore, why hast thou not [c]reproved [r]Jeremiah of Anathoth, which [q]maketh himself a prophet to you?

28 For therefore he sent unto us in Babylon, saying, [r]This captivity is long: build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them.

29 And [s]Zephaniah the priest read this letter in the ears of Jeremiah the prophet.

30 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

31 Send[t] to all them of the captivity, saying, Thus saith the LORD concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite, [u]Because that Shemaiah hath prophesied unto you, and I sent him not, and he caused you to trust in a lie;

32 Therefore thus saith the LORD, [v]Behold, I will punish Shemaiah the Nehelamite, and his seed: he shall not have a man to dwell among this people; neither shall he behold the good that I will do for my people, saith the LORD; because[x] he hath taught rebellion[9] against the LORD.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 God showeth Jeremiah the return of the Jews. 4 After their trouble they shall have deliverance. 10 He comforteth Jacob. 18 Their return shall be gracious. 23 Wrath shall fall on the wicked.

THE word[a] that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Thus speaketh the LORD God of Israel, saying, [b]Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book.[1]

3 For, lo, the days come, saith the LORD, that[c] I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith the LORD; [d]and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

4 ¶ And these are the words that the LORD spake concerning Israel and concerning Judah.

5 For thus saith the LORD, We have heard a[e] voice of trembling, of fear, and not of peace.[2]

6 Ask ye now, and see whether a man[3] doth travail with child? wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, [4]as a woman in travail,[5] and all faces are turned into paleness?

7 Alas![g] for that day is great,[6] so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob's trouble;[7] but [h]he shall be saved out of it.

8 For it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD of hosts, [i]that I will break his yoke from off thy neck,[8] and will burst thy bonds, and strangers shall no more serve themselves of him:[9]

9 But[j] they shall serve the LORD their God, and David[1] their king, whom I will raise up unto them.

10 ¶ Therefore [k]fear thou not, O my servant Jacob, saith the LORD; neither be dismayed, O Israel: for, lo, [l]I will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and [m]shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid.

11 For [o]I am with thee, saith the LORD, to save thee: though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, [p]yet will I not make a full end of thee: but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished.

12 For thus saith the LORD, [q]Thy bruise is incurable, and thy wound is grievous.[2]

13 There[r] is none to plead thy cause, that thou mayest be bound up:[3] thou[s] hast no healing medicines.

14 All[t] thy lovers have forgotten thee; they seek thee not: for [u]I have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy, with the chastisement of a cruel one, for the multitude of thine iniquity; because thy sins were increased.

15 Why [v]criest thou for thine affliction? thy sorrow is incurable [x]for the multitude of thine iniquity; because thy sins were increased, I have done these things unto thee.

16 Therefore[4] all they that devour thee [y]shall be devoured; and all thine adversaries, every one of them, shall go into captivity; and they that spoil thee shall be a spoil, and all that prey upon thee will I give for a prey.

17 For [z]I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the [5]LORD; [a]because they called thee an outcast, saying, This is Zion, whom no man seeketh after.

18 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, Behold, [b]I will bring again the captivity of Jacob's tents, and have mercy on his dwelling-places; [c]and the city shall be builded upon her own [6]heap,[7] and the palace[8] shall remain after the manner thereof.

19 And[d] out of them shall proceed thanksgiving, and the voice of them that make merry: and [e]I will multiply them, and they shall not be few; [g]I will also glorify them, and they shall not be small.

20 Their[h] children also shall be as aforetime, and their congregation shall be established before me, and [i]I will punish all that oppress them.[9]

21 And their nobles[1] shall be of themselves, and their governor shall proceed from the midst of them;[2] and [j]I will cause him to draw [3]near, and he shall approach[4] unto me: for who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? saith the LORD.

1 This is one of the strongest evidences of the plenary inspiration of Scripture. 'Write all the words that I have spoken to thee:' they were the words of God, not of man; they were not to be left to the uncertainty of human memory, they were to be written. They were designed also to serve a certain specific purpose. Almost every little section in this book begins with some phrase which embodies the same truth, that the words recorded are the words of God —P.

REFLECTIONS.—God's promises ought to be carefully preserved, propagated, considered, and improved. Sin often makes for men a hell upon earth. Very sore trials and miseries often precede the most remarkable deliverances. And diligence in God's service is the proper fruit of his salvations. But there is no true serving of him but in receiving and serving his Son Jesus Christ, our mystical David. No profession, however plausible, can secure impunity in sin. Nay, though our heaviest afflictions are far lighter than our sins deserved, yet the sins of professors, and even of saints, are often most sharply corrected. But it is only incurable lusts that make incurable troubles. Let God's church be ever so fearfully deserted and despised, he will in due time deliver her. Let therefore her true children give no way to disquieting fears or hopeless sorrows. Never is her deliverance nearer than when all refuges but God have entirely failed her, and all her 22 And ye shall be [k]my people, and I will be your God.

23 ¶ Behold, the [l]whirlwind of the LORD goeth forth with fury, a continuing[5] whirlwind; it shall fall[6] with pain upon the head of [m]the wicked.

24 The[o] fierce anger of the LORD shall not return, until he have done it, and until he have performed the intents of his heart: [p]in the latter days ye shall consider it.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 The restoration of Israel. 10 The publication thereof. 15 Rahel, mourning, is comforted. 18 Ephraim, repenting, is brought home again. 22 Christ is promised. 27 God's care over the church. 31 His new covenant. 35 The stability, 38 and amplitude of the church.

AT the [a]same time,[1] saith the LORD, will I be the God [b]of all the families of Israel, and they[c] shall be my people.

2 Thus saith the LORD, [d]The people which were left of the [2]sword [e]found grace in the wilderness; even Israel, when [g]I went to cause him to rest.

3 The LORD hath appeared of old[3] unto me,[4] saying, Yea, [h]I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with loving-kindness have I drawn thee.[5]

4 Again[6] I[i] will build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel: thou shalt again be adorned with thy [j]tabrets,[7] and shalt go forth in the dances of them that make merry.

5 Thou[k] shalt yet plant vines upon [l]the mountains of Samaria: the planters shall plant, and shall eat them[8] as common things.

6 For there shall be [n]a day, that [o]the watchmen [p]upon the mount Ephraim shall cry, [q]Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the LORD our God.[9]

7 For thus saith the LORD, [r]Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye, and say, [s]O LORD, save thy people, the remnant of Israel.

8 Behold, [t]I will bring them from the north country, [u]and gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child [v]and her that travaileth with child together: [x]a great company shall return thither.

9 They shall come [y]with weeping, [z]and with supplications[1] will I lead them: [a]I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters [b]in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble; for[c] I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first-born.

10 Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare it [d]in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will [e]gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock.

When Samaria became the capital of the ten tribes it also became the chief seat of idolatry, Ho. 8. 5, 6; and, though afterwards partially converted to the true God, 2 Ki.17. 28–41, there still remained a grievous antipathy between the Jews and Samaritans, John 4. 9, of which the prophet now foretells the happy end.—C.

4 This prediction is interpreted by the evangelist of the massacre of the children at Bethlehem by Herod, Mat. 2. 17, 18, at which time it was literally fulfilled. For the prophet does not figuratively represent Rachel, the wife of Jacob, as arising from her grave to lament, but every bereaved mother as a Rachel, that is, as a 'sheep' (for so the word signifies) bleating after her lamb when seized by the ravenous and ventriless wolf. No doubt the prediction had been previously fulfilled by Nebuzaradan (Je.40.1), but the prediction did not relate to one event, but embraced a whole series of events, in every one of which it is equally exemplified and fulfilled.—C.

12 Therefore[h] they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodness of the LORD, for wheat, and for wine, and for oil, and for the young of the flock, and of the herd: and [i]their soul shall be as a watered garden; and they [j]shall not [2]sorrow any more at all.

13 Then[k] shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together: [l]for I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow.

14 And [n]I will satiate the soul of the priests with fatness,[3] and my people shall be satisfied with my goodness, saith the LORD.

15 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, [o]A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rahel weeping for her children, refused to be comforted for her children, because they [p]were not.[4]

16 Thus saith the LORD, [q]Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: [r]for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the LORD; and [s]they shall come again from the land of the enemy.

17 And[t] there is hope in thine end, saith the LORD, that thy children shall come again to their own border.

allies and friends appear disposed to hurt her. If Jesus rise up to the prey, he will work great things for her deliverance. And to his person, incarnation, covenant engagements, and fulfilment of them, ought we to look through all temporal or spiritual blessings. And while he destroys his and our enemies, his kindness and relations to, or work for us, ought to engage our hearts in his worship and service.

CHAPTER XXXI. Ver. 1–6. I will manifest myself to the Hebrew tribes and gospel church as their God, and will cause them to acknowledge, worship, and serve me, as my people; as I formerly did in the 24 And [m]there shall dwell in Judah itself, and in all the cities thereof together, husbandmen, and they that go forth with flocks.

25 For [n]I have satiated the weary soul, and I[p] have replenished every sorrowful soul.

26 Upon this [q]I awaked, and beheld; and my sleep was sweet unto me.[7]

27 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I [r]will sow the house of Israel, and the house of Judah, with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast.

28 And it shall come to pass, that like as I have watched[s] over them, to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict; [t]so will I watch over them, to build, and to plant, saith the LORD.

29 ¶ In those days they shall say no more, The[u] fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

30 But [v]every one shall die for his own iniquity: every man that eateth the sour grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

31 ¶ Behold, the [z]days come, saith the LORD, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah;

32 Not[y] according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day that [z]I took them by the hand, to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant [a]they brake, although I was [b]an husband unto them,[8] saith the LORD;

[9] Several points should be kept clearly before the mind in the interpretation of this remarkable and cheering prophecy—1. The covenant spoken of is the covenant of grace under Christ the Messiah, and revealed in the gospel. 2. The persons with whom this covenant, as here mentioned by Jeremiah, was to be made, are the Jews: not the spiritual seed of Abraham, but his natural seed. This is evident from ver. 31, 32. 3. The blessings of this new covenant are to be given them as a nation. As a nation, i.e. the great body of them—they are to be God's people, and he is to be their God. 4. Arabian desert, on the way to Canaan, when first I espoused the Israelites to myself as my peculiar people, and bestowed on them my ordinances and miraculous favours, after I had delivered them from the murderous cruelty of Pharaoh and of the Amalekites; for that ancient love manifested to them is neither ceased nor weakened. I will yet establish your government in both church and state; and ye shall have great ground of rejoicing, on account of both temporal and spiritual benefits. And ministers and others shall stir up their companions to join the church and attend the ordinances of God. 7–9. For, to the infinite joy and comfort of all the friends of the Jews, or of the gospel church, I will marvellously deliver them, and conduct them, however unfit in themselves, to their own land, or to the new-covenant state; render them penitent and prayerful, and in the most affectionate manner supply them with everything necessary. 10–14. All the nations around shall know and be affected with the marvellous salvation, temporal and spiritual, which I will work for them; they themselves shall, with great joy, repair to the temple and the ordinances of the gospel, in order to praise me for my diversified kindness. Universal shall be the joy and prosperity of all ranks; ministers and people shall be plentifully supplied, and be mutual blessings one to another. 15–17. The terrible mourning occasioned by the captivity in Babylon, the slaughter of the infants at Bethlehem, or rejection of the Jewish nation, shall be turned into joy, by the restoration of the Benjamites and other Jews, and by the accession of multitudes to the gospel church. 18–20. Deeply penitent for their sins, and earnestly desirous of spiritual blessings, shall the Jews return from Babylon, and especially from their present dispersion; and graciously will I receive them into favour, and abundantly bless them. 21–26. Return with the utmost care and despatch to your country, and erect marks by the way to direct such as may follow you: yea, though for your sinful apostasies ye have been long tossed to and fro, prepare for a return to your country, where the Messiah shall be born; and after your return, great shall be your reformation in righteousness and holiness; numerous shall be your flocks of cattle, and as numerous your worshippers of God; for I will refresh and supply you with every good thing.—Upon this Jeremiah awaked, and was delighted with the comfortable revelations which had been made to him in his dream or vision. 27–30. I will exceedingly multiply themselves and their cattle; and will manifest myself as eager to restore and bless them as ever I seemed to destroy them. Nor shall they have any more reason to complain that they are punished for their fathers' iniquities, but every one shall suffer for his own. 31–34. And I will renew my covenant with them in a more abundantly gracious form than I did at Sinai, and which they have so often transgressed by their idolatry and other wickedness, notwithstanding my kindness to them. But freely bestowing myself upon them as their God, adopting them as my people, and forgiving all their iniquities, I will clearly enlighten the minds of multitudes in the knowledge of the gospel, and renew their hearts, and dispose them to a holy and cheerful obedience to all my commandments.

Ver. 22. A woman shall compass a man. Pearson, Gill, and other learned expositors, interpret this expression of the miraculous conception of Christ. Boothroyd translates it 'a woman shall put to flight the mighty man;' and, with Willet, Gataker, and others, considers it an expressive mode of saying, that 'the weak and timid woman shall terrify and conquer the strong and courageous man.' See ver. 11. C.

Ver. 27. When, in healthfulness, peace, and prosperity, both men and cattle shall multiply as the corn. This promise acquires peculiar emphasis when it is remembered that, at present, many districts of Judea are nearly uninhabited. See Wylie's Modern Judea, p. 306. C.

Ver. 34. Since a time will come when 'they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, saying, Know the Lord,' and that because 'all shall have come to know him,' it follows that it is the right and duty of 'every man' to teach his neighbour; and that the right never ceases, and the duty never relaxes, but in proportion as the necessity ceases by the universal diffusion of religious knowledge in principle and practice. C.

Ver. 37. Until man can measure infinity in heaven above, or penetrate to the centre of the earth beneath, I will still, notwithstanding their ingratitude and rebellion, preserve a 'remnant' of Israel, a seed for the revival of the whole, 'according to the election of grace.' C.

Ver. 38. The prophecy includes the restoration of Jerusalem on earth to her former dimensions and glory, as the emblem of the 'heavenly Jerusalem,' the 'city that hath foundations,' and 'the kingdom that cannot be moved.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Thrice happy are the families which have God for their God! Remembrance of our own and the church's former deliverances is of great use to prevent despondency under long and sore troubles. But all our comfort and holiness must flow from God's everlasting love, fixed on and exercised towards us. It is pleasant when those that were chief rebels against God become his most zealous subjects and servants. But if he build up his church, and restore to us the ordinances of his grace, all must issue to the praise of his glory. And praises to him for mercies bestowed must be attended with supplications for what he has promised. When he intends to deliver, no distance, no weakness, no paucity, no grief, no perilous passage, can stop or even retard his designs. If he calls us to follow him, he will either find or make us a plain way; nor will he allow us to want any necessary supply. Great is the goodness of God observable in common providences, but especially in new-covenant blessings. Thrice happy are they whose souls are richly supplied by the Holy Ghost from the all-containing fulness of God, and who taste his goodness in everything they receive. It is not the death, but the justly apprehended loss, of our relations, that should disquiet us; and solid hopes of the happy issue of troubles will gate toward the east, shall be [r]holy unto the LORD; [s]it shall not be plucked up, nor thrown down, any more for ever.

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 Jeremiah, being imprisoned by Zedekiah for his prophecy, 6 buyeth Hanameel's field. 13 Baruch must preserve the evidences, as tokens of the people's return. 16 Jeremiah in his prayer complaineth to God. 26 God confirmeth the captivity of Judah for their sins, 36 and promiseth a gracious return.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD [a]in the tenth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, which was the eighteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar.

2 For then the king of Babylon's army besieged Jerusalem: [b]and Jeremiah the prophet was shut up [c]in the court of the prison, which was in the king of Judah's house.

3 For [d]Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up, saying, [e]Wherefore dost thou prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD, [g]Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it;

4 And [h]Zedekiah king of Judah shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him mouth to mouth, and his eyes shall behold his eyes;

5 And he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be until [i]I visit him, saith the LORD: [j]though ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper.

6 ¶ And Jeremiah said, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

7 Behold, Hanameel, the son of Shallum thine uncle, shall come unto thee, saying, Buy thee my field that is in [k]Anathoth; for the right[1] of redemption[1] is thine to buy it.

8 So Hanameel, mine uncle's son, came to me in [m]the court of the prison, according to the word of the LORD, and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin: for the right of inheritance is thine, and the redemption is thine; buy it for thyself. Then[2] I knew that this was the word of the LORD.

9 And I bought the field of Hanameel, my uncle's son, that was in Anathoth, [o]and weighed him the money, even seventeen shekels of silver.[3]

10 And [p]I subscribed the evidence,[4] and sealed it, and took witnesses, and [q]weighed him the money in the balances.

11 So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed [r]according to the law and custom, and that which was open.[5]

12 And I gave the evidence of the purchase unto [s]Baruch the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel mine uncle's son, [t]and in the presence of the witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison.

13 ¶ And I charged Baruch before them, saying,

14 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open, and put them in an earthen vessel,[6] that they may continue many days:

15 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, [u]Houses and fields and vineyards shall be possessed again in this land.

16 ¶ Now when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, [v]I prayed unto the LORD, saying,

17 Ah, Lord GOD! behold, [x]thou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched-out arm, and [y]there is nothing too hard for thee:[7]

18 Thou showest [z]loving-kindness unto thousands, and recompensest the iniquity of the fathers into the bosom of their children after them: [a]the great, the mighty God, the [b]LORD of hosts, is his name,

19 Great in counsel, and mighty in [8]work: for thine [c]eyes are open upon all the ways of the sons of men; [d]to give every one according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings:

20 Which[e] hast set signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, even unto this day, and in Israel, and among other men: and [g]hast made thee a name, as at this day;

21 And[h] hast brought forth thy people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs, and with wonders, and with a strong hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with great terror;

22 And[i] hast given them this land, which thou didst [j]swear to their fathers to give them, a land flowing with milk and honey:

23 And they came in, and possessed it; [k]but they obeyed not thy voice, neither walked in thy law: they have done nothing[9] of all that thou commandedst them to do; [l]therefore thou hast caused all this evil to come upon them.

24 Behold the [1]mounts,[2] they are come unto the city to take it; and [m]the city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans that fight against it, because of the sword, and of the famine, and of the pestilence: and what thou hast spoken [o]is come to pass; and, behold, thou seest it.[3]

1 The estate of a Jewish family could never be alienated. If, therefore, a man, through poverty, or intending to emigrate, was obliged to sell his property, he must offer it to his next of kin; and even though he should leave sold to another, this kinsman, if absent at the time of sale, might, on his return, claim the land at its value. This is called the right of the kinsman (Le. 25. 25), and in the year of jubilee the whole returned to the original owner.–C.

9 The meaning is, that, as a people, they had 'done nothing' according to God's requirement. Individuals at all times, and at some times many, had served God in humility and faithfulness; but the nation, never.—Note. It is no doubt true that religion is a matter between every man's conscience and his God; but it is equally true that religion is a matter between every nation and its king. And this is one great truth that the rulers and people of all nations are slow to learn—all having hitherto been willing and determined to distinguish between things [s]morally wrong, but politically right'—a distinction that never can be admitted by a Christian so long as he believes JESUS to be King of kings, Re. 19.16.—C.

3 Jerusalem was besieged by the Chaldeans at the time when this prophecy was uttered, and the symbolic purchase made. It was now the tenth year of Zedekiah's reign, and the siege began in the tenth month of the ninth year. Hence the reference in this verse to the 'mounts' erected outside the city, on which doubtless the engines of war were placed. Famine, too, began already to be felt in the city, and pestilence was raging.–P.

make us bear them patiently. True repentance is a deep and thorough work; and renders a sinner very loathsome and wicked in his own view. Nor do sins of youth appear small under its influence. But all turning to God must be produced by his own Spirit in us; who introduces his grace, by making us to perceive gospel truths. And God is ever ready to give his most rebellious children a kind reception when penitent. His mercy cannot forbear working for them while he frowns; and at last it must break forth in unnumbered and everlasting blessings. But what an encouragement to faith and repentance is the incarnation and work of our Redeemer!—Thrice happy are societies and souls where righteousness towards men, and piety towards God, are closely connected. Refreshing is that sleep in which men are entertained with comfortable promises from God. And no prospect is more pleasant to gracious souls than the spiritual 25 And thou hast said unto me, O Lord GOD, Buy thee the field for money, and take witnesses; for[4] the city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

26 ¶ Then[p] came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying, 27 Behold, I am the LORD, the [q]God of all flesh: [r]Is there any thing too hard for me?

28 Therefore thus saith the LORD, [s]Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the Chaldeans, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall take it.

29 And the Chaldeans, that fight against this city, shall come [t]and set fire on this city, and burn it, with the houses upon whose roofs they have offered incense unto Baal, and poured out drink-offerings unto other gods, to provoke me[5] to anger.

30 For[u] the children of Israel, and the children of Judah, have only done evil before me from their youth:[6] for the children of Israel have only provoked me to anger with the work of their hands, saith the LORD.

31 For[v] this city hath been to me as a provocation of mine anger,[7] and of my fury, from the day that they built it, even unto this day, that I should [z]remove it from before my face;

32 Because[y] of all the evil of the children of Israel, and of the children of Judah, which they have done to provoke me to anger, [z]they, their kings, their princes, their priests, and their prophets, and the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

33 And they have turned unto me [a]the [8]back,[9] and not the face: [b]though I taught them, rising up early and teaching them, yet they have not hearkened to receive instruction.

34 But they [c]set their abominations in the house, which is called by my name, to defile it.[1]

35 And [d]they built the high places of Baal, which are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Molech, which I commanded them not, neither came it into my mind, that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin.[2]

36 ¶ And now therefore[3] thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning this city, whereof ye say,[4] It[e] shall be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence;[5]

37 Behold, [g]I will gather them out of all countries whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them to [h]dwell safely:[6]

38 And[i] they shall be my people, and I will be their God;

39 And I will [j]give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me for ever,[7] for[k] the good of them, and of their children after them:

40 And I will make an [l]everlasting [8]covenant with them, that [m]I will not turn away [g]from them to do them good; but [o]I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me.

41 Yea, [p]I will rejoice over them to do them good, and I [q]will plant them in this land assuredly[1] with my whole heart, and with my whole soul.

42 For thus saith the LORD, [r]Like as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, [s]so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them.[2]

43 And [t]fields shall be bought in this land, whereof [u]ye say, It is desolate[3] without man or beast; it is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

44 Men[v] shall buy fields for money, and subscribe evidences, and seal them, and take witnesses [z]in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, and in the cities of the mountains, and in the cities of the valley, and in the cities of the south: [y]for I will cause their captivity to return, saith the LORD.

flourishing of God's church.—How delightful is it to have JEHOVAH rejoicing over us to do us good! And no wonder sin against him be bitterness in its latter end. But infinitely gracious is his covenant, and suited in form, in matter, in order, and in firmness, to our every need. And while all things in nature are pregnant with important instructions and comforts, it is holiness, connected with outward privileges, that renders them truly steadfast and durable.

CHAPTER XXXII. Ver. 3. Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up. Zedekiah presents a melancholy, but common, example of anger against the messenger of unwelcome news, or the offerer of good advice. If, instead of treating him with harshness and cruelty, Zedekiah had asked for an evidence of his divine commission, Jeremiah could have easily satisfied him by referring to his prophecy against Pashur and his friends, ch. 20. 6, and that against Hananiah, ch. 28. 16, 17; both of which had received such evident fulfilment as to put the commission of the prophet beyond all dispute. C.

Ver. 10. One kind of money was in uncoined gold or silver ingots, another in thin rolls that could be easily cut, and both required to be weighed. But there is no reason to conclude that all Jewish money was, at this period, uncoined; for the arts had long ago made great progress in the East. The weighing is rather indicative of a period of fraudulence which required constant watchfulness against minute deductions from the value of the coin. C.

Ver. 27. Is there any event beyond my power? Did I not give this land to Israel? Can I not convey it to the Chaldeans? And, when the fulness of the time is come, can I not restore it again to my renewed people? C.

Ver. 32. Jerusalem. Jerusalem, though belonging partly to the tribe of Judah, and partly to the tribe of Benjamin, was a city common to all the tribes, and might therefore represent the common character of the whole people, particularly those classes by whom the nation was governed—the rulers, the prophets, priests, lawyers, and merchants. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How obstinately men persist in persecution, and other wickedness, even when the Lord is punishing them for it! No afflictions can drag men from their lusts. By what strange tokens God confirms his own oracles! An exact honesty, prudent discretion, and a firm dependence on the promise and providence of God, ought to meet together in all our civil transactions.—The more honourable views we have of God and his mercies, the more humble and penitent will be our views of our own and others' rebellion against him. And the former experiences of God's people ought to encourage us, even when his providence seems to contradict his promises. When we have God's orders, we have nothing to do but obey, and trust him with the issue. And if we are in the dark concerning his dispensations, we may humbly beg his instructions. No crimes are too horrid for apostate professors to commit, and no judgments too severe to punish them. Deep carnal security ordinarily ends in deep despair; but blessed mornings of deliverance, conversion, and reformation frequently succeed long and dark nights of trouble. And unchangeable is their HOUSE OF ANANIAS, DAMASCUS — SITE OF THE HOUSE OF ANANIAS, WHO WAS DIRECTED TO INQUIRE FOR SAUL AT THE HOUSE OF JUDAS IN DAMASCUS. [JEREMIAH, xxxiii: 17, 18.]—"For thus saith the Lord. David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel; Neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt offerings, and to kindle meat offerings, and to do sacrifice continually." Reference is made to these verses by St. Paul in Romans, xii: 1, and Romans, xv: 16, and by Peter in I. Peter, ii: 5, and by St. John in Revelations, i: 6. Jesus Christ was the man who was to set forever upon the throne of the house of Israel, and the ministers were to be the priests who were to offer burnt offerings and to kindle meat offerings, and to do sacrifice continually. We give a picture of the house of Ananias in Damascus, said to stand upon the site of the house of Ananias, related to St. Paul at the time of his conversion. St. Paul was the leader of the living, everlasting Christian priesthood.

10 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, Again there shall be heard in this place, which [s]ye say shall be desolate without man and without beast, even in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, that are desolate without man, and without inhabitant, and without beast,[1] state, stable and permanent their holiness and happiness, and cordial their harmony, who have God for their God, and the performer of all things in and for them.

CHAPTER XXXIII. Ver. 8. And I will cleanse. How wonderful! They shall be 'cleansed from all their iniquity,' by the very blood which their wicked fathers murderously shed: for it is 'the blood of Jesus,' and that alone, 'that cleanseth from all sin,' 1 Jn. 1. 7. REFLECTIONS.—God's power and goodness in creation and providence should encourage us to believe his promises; and fervent prayer is an excellent means of obtaining divine and marvellous instructions. Dreadful is the ruin procured by sin! but where sin abounded, grace can much more abound. Saving instructions and gracious forgiveness must introduce all other new-covenant favours. No case on this side hell is so deplorable but God's mercy can relieve from it. And the greater the salvation which he works, the more will he be glorified in it. Yea, all the abundant joys of his people, after their nights of grief, will tend to his praise. But it is Jesus Christ alone that is the substance of all divine favours, that communicates sweetness, value, and usefulness to them; and notwithstanding all opposition and contempt, his kingdom

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 Jeremiah prophesieth the captivity of Zedekiah and the city. 8 The princes and the people having dismissed their bond-servants, contrary to the covenant of God, afterward re-assume them. 12 Jeremiah, for their disobedience, giveth them and Zedekiah into the hands of their enemies.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, [a]when Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and all his army, and all the kingdoms of the earth of his dominion,[1] and all the people, fought against Jerusalem, and against all [b]the cities thereof, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Go and speak to Zedekiah king of Judah, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD, [c]Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire.

3 And [d]thou shalt not escape[2] out of his hand, but shalt surely be taken, and delivered into his hand; and thine eyes[3] shall behold the eyes of the king of Babylon, and he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth,[4] and thou shalt go to Babylon.

4 Yet hear the word of the LORD, O Zedekiah king of Judah; Thus saith the LORD of thee, Thou[e] shalt not die by the sword;

5 But thou shalt die in peace: and [g]with the burnings[5] of thy fathers, the former kings which were before thee, so shall they burn odours for thee; and [h]they will lament thee, saying, Ah, lord! for I have pronounced the word, saith the LORD.

6 Then Jeremiah the prophet [i]spake all these words unto Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem,

7 When the king of Babylon's army fought against[j] Jerusalem, and against all the cities of Judah that were left, against [k]Lachish, and against Azekah: for [l]these defenced cities remained of the cities of Judah.

8 ¶ This is the word that came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, after that the king Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people which were at Jerusalem, to proclaim [m]liberty unto them;

9 That every man should let his man-servant, and every man his maid-servant, being an Hebrew or an Hebrewess, go free; that none should [o]serve himself of them, to wit, of a Jew his[p] brother.

10 Now, when all the [q]princes, and all the people which had entered into the covenant, heard that every one should let his man-servant, and every one his maid-servant, go free, that none should serve themselves of them any more, then they obeyed,[6] and let them go.

The Talmudists deny the burning of the bodies, considering it as a heathen, and not a Jewish custom; but that the Jews did occasionally, at least, burn dead bodies, is certain from 1 Sa. 31.2. 6 God's law required that, when a Hebrew servant had served six years, he should go free upon the seventh, Ex.21.2, De. 15. 12. A law of which the wisdom and humanity of the divine institution are equally obvious; a law, not of slavery, but apprenticeship, so that the retiring servant might be master of his business, and so enabled to provide for himself in a state of freedom.—C.

the servants and the handmaids, whom they had let go free, to return, and brought them into subjection for servants and for handmaids.

12 ¶ Therefore the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, I made a covenant with your fathers [s]in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondmen, saying,

14 At[t] the end of seven years, let ye go every man his brother an Hebrew, which hath been sold[8] unto thee; and when he hath served thee six years, thou shalt let him go free from thee: but [u]your fathers hearkened not unto me, neither inclined their ear.

15 And [v]ye were now[9] turned, and had done right[1] in my sight, in proclaiming liberty every man to his neighbour: and [x]ye had made a covenant before me in the house which is called by my name:[2]

16 But ye turned, and [y]polluted[3] my name, and caused every man his servant, and every man his handmaid, whom he had set at liberty at their pleasure, to return, and brought them into [z]subjection, to be unto you for servants and for handmaids.

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Ye have not hearkened unto me, in proclaiming liberty, every one to his brother, and every man to his neighbour: behold, [a]I proclaim a liberty[4] for you, saith the LORD, to the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine; and I will make you to be removed[5] into all the kingdoms of the earth.

18 And[b] I will give the men that have transgressed my covenant, which have not performed the words of the covenant which they had made before me, when they [c]cut the calf in twain, and passed between the parts thereof,[6]

19 The[d] princes of Judah, and the princes of Jerusalem, the eunuchs,[7] and the priests, and all the people of the land, which passed between the parts of the calf;[8]

20 I will even give them into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life: and [e]their dead bodies shall be for meat unto the fowls of the heaven, and to the beasts of the earth.

21 And[g] Zedekiah king of Judah and his princes, will I give into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life, and into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which are [h]gone up from you.

Ver. 20. Them that seek their life. The Scripture history gives no direct account of the origin of this deadly antipathy of the Babylonians against the Jews. But when it is recollected that Babylon and Egypt were rival kingdoms—commercial rivals in the trade to the E. with fire: and I will make the cities of Judah a desolation [k]without an inhabitant.

CHAPTER XXXV.

1 By the obedience of the Rechabites to their father's command, 12 Jeremiah condemneth the disobedience of the Jews. 18 God blesseth the Rechabites for their obedience.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, [a]in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying,[1]

2 Go unto the house of the [b]Rechabites,[2] and speak unto them, and bring them [c]into the house of the LORD, into one of the chambers, and give them wine to drink.

3 Then [d]I took Jaazaniah the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habaziniah, and his brethren, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites;

4 And I brought them into the house of the LORD, into the [e]chamber of the sons of [g]Hanan, the son of Igdaliah, a man of God, which was by [h]the chamber of the princes, which was above the chamber of Maaseiah, the son of Shallum, the [i]keeper of the door:[3]

5 And I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups, and I said unto them, [j]Drink ye wine.[4]

6 But they said, We will drink no wine: for [k]Jonadab the son of Rechab, our father, commanded us, saying, [l]Ye shall drink no wine, neither ye nor your sons for ever:

7 Neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have any: but all your days ye shall dwell in tents; [m]that ye may live many days in the land where ye be [n]strangers.[5]

8 Thus have we [p]obeyed the voice of Jonadab the son of Rechab, our father, in all that he hath charged us, to drink no wine all our days, we, our wives, our sons, nor our daughters;

9 Nor to build houses for us to dwell in; neither[q] have we vineyard, nor field, nor seed:

10 But we have [r]dwelt in tents, and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us.[6]

11 But it came to pass, when [s]Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, [t]Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the army of the Syrians: so we dwell at Jerusalem.

12 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Go and tell the men of Judah, and [u]the inhabitants of Jerusalem, [v]Will ye not receive instruction to hearken to my words? saith the LORD.

14 The words of Jonadab the son of Rechab, that he commanded his sons not to drink wine, are performed; for unto this day they drink none, but obey their father's commandment: notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, rising early [w]and speaking; but ye hearkened not unto me.

15 I[x] have sent also unto you all my servants the [y]prophets, rising up early[7] and sending them, saying, [z]Return ye now every man[8] from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers; but ye [a]have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto me.

16 Because the sons of Jonadab the son of Rechab have performed the commandment of their father, which he commanded them; [b]but this people hath not hearkened unto me:

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel, [c]Behold, I will bring upon Judah, and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, all the evil that I have pronounced against them: [d]because I have spoken unto them, but they have not heard; and I have called unto them, but they have not answered.

18 ¶ And Jeremiah said unto the house of the Rechabites, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, [e]Because ye have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepts, and done according unto all that he hath commanded you;

19 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, [g]Jonadab the son of Rechab shall [g]not want a man to stand before me for ever.

1 All the prophecies from ch.xxvi. belong to the reign of Zedekiah, and are consequently posterior to this chapter and the following, which, together with ch. xlv., were delivered in the days of Jehoiakim. There is, however, no reason to conclude that the prophecies were not arranged with order and design. On the contrary they appear to be introduced here to enforce the prophecies against Zedekiah, who had no dread of captivity, by the recollection of the captivity of Jehoiakim, and the spoliation of the temple, 2 Ch. 36. 6, 7. Their rules forbade architecture and husbandry, and confined them to pasturage and tents. They had now, however, fled to Jerusalem to avoid the depredations of the Chaldean army.—C.

* The land of Judea being all allotted to the tribes, Jonadab easily foresaw that if his posterity applied themselves to husbandry, and obtained fixed habitations, their permanent improvements would excite cupidity in the original owners, and so produce either quarrels, or the final expulsion of his descendants. He therefore confines them to pasturage, which, so long as any part of the country remained unoccupied, would render them acceptable tenants, who might profitably occupy the land for the present, and could at any time be removed if it were required by the tribes with whom they might sojourn.—C.

8 The proper office of a prophet, an apostle, a minister of the word, is to call upon 'all men,' upon 'every man,' everywhere to 'repent and believe the gospel.' The commission of the Lord is never confined to a congregation or a single church; such limitation may be convenient, but is sadly narrow and sectarian. The commission of the Lord accredits his servant to all churches, to every man he meets, to every fellow-subject, to every fellow-creature, to every saint whom he is to comfort, to every sinner whom he is to reprove, and to invite to Jesus for pardon and salvation.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—God mixes his judgments here with mercy, even to the wicked. It is a great advantage for kings and others to have faithful ministers to tell them the fatal consequences of their sins, that they may repent and live. And it is well if captivity and imprisonment lead to true reformation. God's compassion towards us ought to influence our compassion towards our inferiors and neighbours. But reformations occasioned by fear and danger are seldom sincere and lasting. The most solemn vows will not long restrain them whose hearts are not right with God. But if his reprieves from judgment be abused, he will quickly proceed to execution. None ever hardened their hearts against him and prospered. And broken vows especially hasten his fearful judgments. If men will not subject themselves to his law, he must subject them to his wrath and curse. If judgments depart from us before we are humbled, they will return with redoubled force. And promising beginnings, to which the end does not correspond, only produce more aggravated guilt and surer destruction.

CHAPTER XXXV. Ver. 19. 'To stand before me' denotes attendance on the person and service of a prince, 1 Ki. 10. 8. And as it appears that some of the Rechabites, or Kenites, returned from the captivity, 1 Ch. 2. 55, it has been inferred that they were admitted into some office about the temple. All, however, that is necessarily implied in the phrase is the perpetuation of the family of Rechab. And of this fact there seems the most unquestionable evidence. Benjamin of Tudela professes to have found them in Arabia in great prosperity. Niebuhr obtained information of the Beni Kheiber inhabiting the mountains on the north-east of Medina, and holding no intercourse with the other Jews. And Joseph Wolf learned from Rabbi Mose Secot at Jerusalem, that, in his opinion, the Beni Kheiber were the Rechabites, who firmly adhere to the precepts of the son of Jonadab, have neither house, nor field, nor vineyard, and observe the law of Moses by tradition (Missionary Journal, 1824, p. 257, 261.. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Never let us be ashamed of the honest employment of our ancestors, however mean.

against[e] all the nations, from the day I spake unto thee, from the days of Josiah,[3] even unto this day.[4]

3 It[g] may be[5] that the house of Judah will hear all the evil which I purpose to do unto them; that they may return every man from his evil way, that I may [h]forgive their iniquity and their sin.

4 Then Jeremiah called [i]Baruch, the son of Neriah: and Baruch [j]wrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the LORD, which he had spoken unto him, upon a [k]roll of a book.

5 And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I[l] am shut up:[6] I cannot go into the house of the LORD:

6 Therefore go thou, and [m]read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of the LORD, [o]in the ears of the people, in the LORD's house upon the [p]fasting day: and also thou shalt read them in the ears of all Judah that [q]come out of their cities.

7 It may be[7] they will present their supplication[8] before the LORD, and will return every one from his evil way: for [r]great is the anger and the fury that the LORD hath pronounced against this people.

8 And Baruch the son of Neriah [s]did according to all that Jeremiah the prophet commanded him, reading in the book the words of the LORD in [t]the LORD's house.

9 And it came to pass, in the fifth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, that they [u]proclaimed a fast before the LORD to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people that came from the cities of Judah unto Jerusalem.

10 Then [v]read Baruch in the book the words of Jeremiah in the house of the LORD, in the chamber[9] of Gemariah the son of Shaphan the scribe,[1] in the higher court, at the [w]entry[2] of the new gate of the LORD's house, in the ears of all the people.[3]

11 ¶ When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of [y]Shaphan, had heard out of the book all the words of the LORD,

12 Then he went down into the king's house, into the scribe's[4] chamber; and, lo, [z]all the princes sat there, even Elishama the scribe, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, and Elnathan the son of Achbor, and Gemariah the son of Shaphan, and Zedekiah the son of Hananiah, and all the princes.

13 Then Michaiah [a]declared unto them all the words[5] that he had heard, when Baruch read the book in the ears of the people.

14 Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come. So Baruch the son of Neriah [b]took the roll in his hand, and came unto them.

15 And they said unto him, Sit down now, and read it in our ears. So Baruch read it in their ears.

16 Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, [c]they were afraid[6] both one and other, and said unto Baruch, We will surely tell the king of all these words.

17 And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, how didst thou write all these words at his mouth?

18 Then Baruch answered them, [d]He pronounced all these words unto me with his mouth, and I wrote them with ink[7] in the book.

19 Then said the princes unto Baruch, [e]Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah, and let no man know where ye be.

20 ¶ And they went in to the king into the court, but they laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the scribe, and told all the words in the ears of the king.

21 So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll: and he took it out of Elishama the scribe's chamber: and Jehudi [g]read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of all the princes which stood beside the king.

22 Now the king sat in the [h]winter-house, in the ninth month: and there was a fire on the hearth burning before him.[8]

23 And it came to pass, that when Jehudi had read three or four leaves,[9] he [i]cut it[1] with the penknife, and cast it into the fire that was on the hearth, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that was on the hearth.

24 Yet they were not afraid, nor [j]rent their garments, neither the king, nor any of his servants that heard all these words.

25 Nevertheless, Elnathan, and Delaiah, and Gemariah, [k]had made intercession to the king

7 The Jews, no doubt, engraved many of their records upon tablets of various kinds. But it is also evident that 'ink' was familiar to them even in the days of Moses. See Nu. 5. 23. And it is noteless than wonderful that any one acquainted with the remains of ancient Egypt could have supposed the Israelites ignorant of ink and writing. Ezekiel mentions the 'ink-horn' as familiar in his time, ch. 9. 2, 3, 11. Winckelmann and others have shown that the ink of the ancients was a species of paint, differing little if anything from what is still employed by many Orientals. It is usually composed of lampblack, or powdered charcoal, gum, and water; its consistence is nearly the same as modern printers' ink; and the pen is usually a pointed reed.—C.

Fireplaces and chimneys are unknown in many of the warmer regions of Asia; and when fire is required in winter a chafing-dish or brazier of wood, charcoal, or other combustible is introduced. So it was here. The original Hebrew does not intimate that the king sat before the fire, but that the fire was brought before the king.—'There was set before him a hearth with burning coals' (Blayney).—Note, To what a sad use does a sinful heart pervert the comforts God bestows! It is grievous to endure cold; God bestows the warmth of a fire, and man employs it to burn the message and testimony of Almighty God!—C.

And let us prudently accommodate ourselves to our place, rank, and condition; but never live above it. Humility and contentment in obscurity are often the best policy and surest protection. If we be strangers in this world, we should abstain from fleshly lusts, and treat the objects of sense with a gracious and generous disdain. The more we are confirmed in so doing, temptation will have the less force. The more mortified we are to this world, the more meet we are for the next, and the more willing shall we be to go to it; nay, we are the more meet for suffering here. But no rules of external discipline ought to exclude a dispensation when necessity requires. To neglect proper means of safety is to tempt God. It is superlatively absurd and wicked to refuse doing as much in obedience to God as we would be ready to do in obedience to a progenitor who is long since dead, and can never remind us of our obligation; and such as are guilty may expect judgment, sure, however slow. But while sinners are ruined, the temperate and obedient are often preserved in this world. And often such as live soberly on small estates have the most numerous and flourishing families. Nay, temperance, and mortification to this world, do much befriend the exercises of piety, and help to transmit the observance thereof to posterity, as their principal honour.

CHAPTER XXXVI. REFLECTIONS.—A serious and believing consideration of the certain and fatal consequences of our sin promotes a cordial repentance; and in all their work ministers ought to endeavour at the conversion of sinners from their evil ways. For this the writing of God's Word is designed; and all the writing or repeating of sermons must be directed to the same. Such as truly discern the need of repentance will supplicate God for it. But there may be great pretences, even to extraordinary devotion, while men continue enemies to the power of it. And national fasts, without national reformation, will never turn away national judgments. When we profess to be supplicating for mercy, it is very useful to be faithfully told of our sins and our duty; and we ought to com-that he would not burn the roll; but he [l]would not hear them.

26 But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son of Hammelech,[2] and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, [m]to take Baruch the scribe, and Jeremiah the prophet: [o]but the LORD hid them.[3]

27 ¶ Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah, [p]after that the king had burned the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying,

28 Take[q] thee again another roll, and write in it all the [r]former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burned.

29 And thou shalt say to Jehoiakim king of Judah, Thus saith the LORD, Thou hast burned this roll, saying, [s]Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast?

30 Therefore thus saith the LORD of Jehoiakim king of Judah, [t]He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David; and his dead body shall be cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost.[4]

31 And I [u]will punish[5] him, and his seed, and his servants, for their iniquity; and [v]I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them: but they[w] hearkened not.

32 ¶ Then took Jeremiah another roll, and gave it to Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah; who[y] wrote therein, from the mouth of Jeremiah, all the words of the book[6] which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burned in the fire: and there were added besides unto them many like words.[7]

CHAPTER XXXVII.

1 The Egyptians having raised the siege of the Chaldeans, king Zedekiah sendeth to Jeremiah to pray for the people. 6 Jeremiah prophesieth the Chaldeans' certain return and victory. 11 He is taken up for a fugitive, beaten, and put in prison. 16 He assureth Zedekiah of the captivity. 18 Entreating for his liberty, he obtaineth some favour.

AND king [a]Zedekiah, the son of Josiah, reigned instead of Coniah the son of Jehoiakim, whom Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon [b]made king in the land of Judah.[1]

2 But [c]neither he, nor his servants, nor the people of the land, did hearken unto the words of the LORD, which he spake by the [2]prophet Jeremiah.

3 And [d]Zedekiah the king sent Jehucal the son of Shelemiah, and Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, to the prophet Jeremiah, saying, [e]Pray now unto the LORD our God for [3]us.

4 Now Jeremiah came in and went out among the people; for [g]they had not put him into prison.

5 Then [h]Pharaoh's army was come forth out of Egypt: and when the Chaldeans that besieged Jerusalem heard tidings of them, they [i]departed from Jerusalem.

6 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto the prophet Jeremiah, saying,

7 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Thus shall ye say to the king of Judah, [j]that sent you unto me to inquire of me; [k]Behold, Pharaoh's army, which is come forth to help you, shall return[4] to Egypt into their own land.

8 And [l]the Chaldeans shall come again, and fight against this city, and take it, and burn it with fire.

9 Thus saith the LORD, [n]Deceive not yourselves,[5] saying, The Chaldeans shall surely depart from us: for they shall not depart.

10 For, though ye had smitten the whole army of the Chaldeans that fight against you, and there remained but wounded[6] men among them, [o]yet should they rise up every man in his tent, and burn this city with fire.[7]

11 ¶ And it came to pass, that when the army of the Chaldeans was broken[8] up from Jerusalem for fear of Pharaoh's army, 12 Then Jeremiah went forth out of Jerusalem to go into the land of Benjamin, to separate himself[9] thence in the midst of the [1]people.

13 And when he was in the gate of Benjamin, a captain of the ward was there, whose name was Irijah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Hananiah: and he took Jeremiah the prophet, saying, [q]Thou fallest away to the Chaldeans.

14 Then said Jeremiah, It is false,[2] I fall not away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not to him: so Irijah took Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes.

3 A call for intercessory prayer is no proof either of the faith or repentance of him that calls for it. It is possible to have just such confidence in prayer as the ignorant and superstitious often have in amulets and charms. Such was evidently the case with Zedekiah, for 'neither he nor his servants, nor the people of the land, did hearken unto the words of the Lord by Jeremiah,' and yet they expect that God will hear Jeremiah for them, while they refuse to hear God.—Note, Intercessory prayer for the sick is undoubtedly an ordinance of God (Ja.5.14,15), both for the healing and forgiveness; but it is carefully to be observed, that the apostle places the personal prayer of the sick himself before the intercessory, ver. 13. 'Is any among you afflicted (in any manner, sickness included), let him pray.' 'Is any sick (a special affliction), let him send for the elders, and let them pray over him.' In dealing with the sick this is a matter that requires much tenderness, but much faithfulness; for the heart is deceitful and souls are precious.—C.

municate to others those divine truths which have been peculiarly affecting to ourselves. God's ministers should lay hold on every opportunity, private or public, for teaching and warning their hearers. And there is need of very close dealing, as, by delay or otherwise, sinners will do all they can to evade convictions, or to shake them off. Nay, hardened sinners, especially in high stations, stick at nothing to disgrace the oracles of God, to destroy his messengers, and discover their own determinate resolution to continue in sin. And while they, who for God's cause boldly put their life in their hands, are wonderfully protected, they who contend with God, and obstinately resist his counsels, do only treasure up for themselves wrath against the day of wrath. By contending with his curses, they but prepare heavier ones for themselves; and silent accomplices in guilt may look for a share in the punishment.

CHAPTER XXXVII. Ver. 15. Eastern prisons are not public buildings, but a part of the house of the criminal judge. And such confinement in private houses was common in great Britain down to a period comparatively modern. The city of Aberdeen still contains the private dwelling in which Rutherford was imprisoned: and many continue to look upon it with great 'searchings of heart,' and deep musings both on the past and the present. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Hard are their hearts who can both see and feel the judgments of God without being humbled. And often they who in health and prosperity despised Christ's ministers, entreat their counsels and prayers in a day of distress. Many would gladly be rid of their sufferings who have no heart to part with their sins. And often they use the intermissions, or slow progress, of God's judgments to harden themselves, while they easily credit the flatteries and lies which their corrupt inclinations wish to be true. Even Satan could not deceive men if they deceived not themselves. No created help can avail but as God pleases; and no created power can withstand the weakest instruments in his hand. When we have no call from God to stay, it is prudent to retire into privacy, and shun the evils which we foresee. But the purest characters and conduct may be blackened with the vilest aspersions; and every lie, however improbable, is easily believed against a man obnoxious for his piety and reproofs. And if passion and prejudice ascend the chair of the magistrate, we need not expect any justice

Jeremiah, and smote him, and put him in prison in[s] the house of Jonathan the scribe; for they had made that the prison.

16 ¶ When Jeremiah was entered into the dungeon, and into the [3]cabins,[4] and Jeremiah had remained there many days;

17 Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took him out; and the king asked him secretly[5] in his house, and said, [t]Is there any word from the LORD? And Jeremiah said, There is: for, said he, [u]thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon.

18 Moreover, Jeremiah said unto king Zedekiah, [v]What have I offended against thee, or against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison?

19 Where[6] are now your prophets which prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon [y]shall not come against you, nor against this land?

20 Therefore hear now, I pray thee, O my lord the king: let my supplication, I pray thee, be accepted[6] before thee; that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, [z]lest I die there.[7]

21 Then Zedekiah the king commanded that they should commit Jeremiah into [a]the court of the prison, and that they [b]should give him daily a piece of bread out of the bakers' street, [c]until all the bread in the city were spent. [d]Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

1 Jeremiah, by a false suggestion, is put into the dungeon of Malchiah. 7 Ebed-melech, by suit, getteth him some enlargement. 14 In a secret conference he counselleth the king by yielding to save his life. 24 By the king's instructions he concealeth the conference from the princes.

THEN Shephatiah[a] the son of Mattan, and Gedaliah the son of Pashur, and Jucal the son of Shelemiah, and Pashur the son of Malchiah, [b]heard the words that Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people, saying,[1]

2 Thus saith the LORD, [c]He that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live; for he shall have his life for a prey, and shall live.

3 Thus saith the LORD, This city shall surely be given into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which shall take it.

4 Therefore [d]the princes said unto the king, We beseech thee, let this man be put to death; for [e]thus he weakeneth the hands of the men of war that remain in this city, and the hands of all the people, in speaking such words unto them; for this man seeketh not the welfare[2] of this people, but the hurt.

5 Then Zedekiah the king said, [g]Behold, he is in your hand: for the king is not he that can do any thing against you.

6 Then took they Jeremiah, and cast him into the [h]dungeon[3] of Malchiah the son of Hammelech,[4] that was in the court of the prison: and they let down Jeremiah with cords. And in the dungeon there was no water, but mire; so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.[5]

7 ¶ Now when Ebed-melech [i]the [6]Ethiopian, one of the [j]eunuchs which was in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremiah in the dungeon, the king then [k]sitting[7] in the gate of Benjamin,

8 Ebed-melech[l] went forth out of the king's house, and spake to the king, saying,

9 My lord the king, these men [m]have done evil in all that they have done to Jeremiah the prophet, whom they have cast into the dungeon; and he is like to[8] die for hunger in the place where he is; [e]for there is no more bread in the city.

10 Then[p] the king commanded Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Take from hence [q]thirty men with thee,[1] and take up Jeremiah the prophet out of the dungeon, before he die.

11 So Ebed-melech took the men with him, and went into the house of the king under the treasury, and took thence old cast clouts, and old rotten rags, and let them down by cords into the dungeon to Jeremiah.

12 And Ebed-melech the Ethiopian said unto Jeremiah, [q]Put now these old cast clouts and rotten rags under thine arm-holes under the cords.[2] And Jeremiah did so.

13 So they drew up Jeremiah with cords, and took him up out of the dungeon: and [r]Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

14 ¶ Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took Jeremiah the prophet unto him into the [3]third entry that is in the house of the LORD: and the king said unto Jeremiah, [s]I will ask thee a thing; hide nothing from me.

15 Then Jeremiah said unto Zedekiah, If I declare it unto thee, [t]wilt thou not surely put me to death? and if I give thee counsel, wilt thou not hearken unto me?[4]

16 So Zedekiah the king sware secretly unto Jeremiah, saying, [u]As the LORD liveth, [v]that made us this soul,[5] I will not put thee to death, neither will I give thee into the hand of [z]these men that seek thy life.

1 In forming an estimate of the unbelieving disregard shown by the princes and people to the word of the Lord by Jeremiah, it is necessary to observe the argument from patriotism they were able to allege against his advice to submit to the Chaldeans—the high, and not undeserved reliance they placed upon their military courage—and, strange to say, the dependence they placed upon the miraculous protection of that God whose laws they disregarded. See, for illustration, Josephus' Antiq.—C.

The description of this prison is sufficiently horrible, and it wonderfully contrasts with modern Christian efforts to secure comparative comfort to prisoners, in food, health, and sleep; and, as far as possible, to convert every prison into a school of reformation, instead of a seat of cruelty. That it is necessary, for the sake of truth, to call these efforts modern, is cause of humiliation—that these efforts have been, at last, successfully made, is cause of thankfulness to God. 5 The dungeon was doubtless an old cistern in which the water was exhausted. Jerusalem abounds in cisterns. In every large house there are two or three of them. Generally the only opening is a circular hole at the top, in the crown of the arched roof, through which the bucket is let down for water. A more horrible prison could scarcely be imagined; and a very brief confinement in such a place would have been fatal.—P.

It is the best of men that have to suffer most for conscience' sake. But God can provide them relief from whence they little expected it. If men will cheerfully, but prudently, expose their life for God, he will take care that they shall be no losers, but their very affliction be the mean of substantial blessing. But they who will not regard God's calls to repentance, need not expect messages of peace. And they who have wilfully shut their eyes to their danger, deserve to be upbraided with their folly.

CHAPTER XXXVIII. REFLECTIONS.—It is better to submit to the rebukes of Providence than to contend with them. If we cannot have our liberties, let us never throw away our lives. And let God's ministers act faithfully and friendly, though impenitent sinners should reward them with hatred and murder. It forebodes ill when magistrates are daily growing worse [compare ch. xxvi. xxxiv. xxxvi.]; when great men weakly yield to their inferiors in the cause of God and truth; and when they who have a friendship for 17 Then said Jeremiah unto Zedekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the [v]God of hosts, the [z]God of Israel, [a]If thou wilt assuredly go forth unto the king of Babylon's princes, then thy soul shall live, and this city shall not be burned with fire; and thou shalt live, and thine house:

18 But [b]if thou wilt not go forth to the king of Babylon's princes, then shall this city be given into the hand of the Chaldeans, and they shall burn it with fire, and thou shalt not escape out of their hand.

19 And Zedekiah the king said unto Jeremiah, [c]I am afraid of the Jews that are fallen to the Chaldeans, lest they deliver me into their hand, and they mock me.[6]

20 But Jeremiah said, They shall not deliver thee. Obey, [d]I beseech thee, the voice of the LORD, which I speak unto thee: so it shall be well unto thee, and thy [e]soul shall live.

21 But if thou [g]refuse to go forth, [h]this is the word that the LORD hath showed me:

22 And, behold, all the women that are left[7] in the king of Judah's house, shall be brought forth to the king of Babylon's princes; and those[i] women shall say, Thy [j]friends[8] have set thee on, and have prevailed against thee: thy feet are sunk in the [k]mire, and they are [l]turned away back.

23 So[m] they shall bring out all thy wives and thy children to the Chaldeans; and thou shalt not escape out of their hand, but [o]shalt be taken by the hand of the king of Babylon: and thou shalt cause[9] this city to be burned[1] with fire.

24 ¶ Then said Zedekiah unto Jeremiah, Let no man know of these words, and thou shalt not die.

25 But if [p]the princes hear that I have talked with thee, and they come unto thee, and say unto thee, Declare unto us now what thou hast said unto the king, hide it not from us, and we will not put thee to death: also what the king said unto thee:

26 Then thou shalt say unto them, I[2] presented my supplication before the king, that he would not cause me to return to Jonathan's house, to die there.

27 Then came all the princes unto Jeremiah, and asked him: and he told them according to all these words that the king had commanded.[3] So they left off speaking with[4] him: for the matter was not perceived.

28 So Jeremiah [q]abode in the court of the prison until the day that Jerusalem was taken: and he was there when Jerusalem was taken.

Nebuchadnezzar had established his headquarters there, and a more fitting place could not have been selected. It is surrounded by a fertile plain, it has an unfailing supply of pure water, and it commands the three great highways from the north to Palestine and Egypt. By taking the eastern side of Anti-Lebanon, he could easily reach Damascus; by marching down the open valley of Cœle-Syria, he could enter Palestine at Dan; and by passing round the northern end of Lebanon through the 'entrance of Hamath,' he had access to all Phœnicia and the coast.—P.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

1 Jerusalem is taken. 4 Zedekiah is made blind, and sent to Babylon. 8 The city laid in ruins, 9 and the people carried captive. 11 Nebuchadrezzar's charge for the good usage of Jeremiah. 15 God's promise to Ebed-melech.

IN the [c]ninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the tenth month, came Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon and all his army against Jerusalem, and they besieged it.

2 And in the eleventh year[1] of Zedekiah, in the [b]fourth month, the ninth day of the month, the city was broken up.[2]

3 And [c]all the princes of the king of Babylon [d]came in, and sat in the middle gate, even [e]Nergal-sharezer, Samgar-nebo, Sarsechim, Rab-saris, Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, with all the residue of the princes of the king of Babylon.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, [g]that when Zedekiah the king of Judah saw them, and all the men of war, then they fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the king's garden, by the gate [h]betwixt the two walls; and he went out the way of the plain.[3]

5 But [i]the Chaldeans' army pursued after them, and [j]overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho: and when they [k]had taken him, they brought him up to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon to Riblah,[4] in the land of Hamath, where he gave judgment upon him.[5]

6 Then the king of Babylon slew [l]the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before his eyes: also the king of Babylon slew all the nobles of Judah.

7 Moreover, [n]he put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him with chains,[6] to carry him to Babylon.

8 ¶ And the Chaldeans [o]burned the king's house, and the [p]houses of the people, with fire, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem.

9 Then Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard,[7] carried[q] away captive into Babylon the remnant[8] of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to him, with the rest of the people that remained.

10 But Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, [r]left of the poor of the people, which had nothing, in the land of Judah, and gave them vineyards and fields at the same time.[9]

11 ¶ Now Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon [s]gave charge concerning Jeremiah to[1] Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard, saying,

12 Take him, and look well to him,[2] and [t]do him no harm, but do unto him even as he shall say unto thee.

his faithful servants will not own it as they might in time of need, when perhaps their enemies attempt privately to murder them. But, lo, how God cares for them, and raises up and emboldens friends beyond expectation! How early Ethiopia stretches out her hands to God! And what sense of justice and piety is found in a Gentile, living amidst the most degenerate professors! With speed and compassion we ought to relieve the distressed; and with great meekness and earnestness should ministers instruct such as oppose themselves, and render good for evil. Nor is a readiness to die in the cause of truth inconsistent with every prudent precaution to preserve ourselves. Sinners fondly desire that God would alter his purposes or threatenings for their sake, even when they continue deaf to his admonitions, and refuse submission, the only real means of deliverance. They often deter themselves from duty by fears trifling and groundless; and that which they seek to avoid by sin is brought on them by the justice of God; and by sinning to avoid shame, they often bring both sin and ruin upon them-

15 ¶ Now[a] the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, [b]while he was shut up in the court of the prison, saying,

16 Go and speak [c]to Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; [d]Behold, I will bring my words upon this city for evil, and not for good; and they shall be accomplished in that day [e]before thee.

17 But [g]I will deliver thee in that day, saith the LORD; and thou shalt not be given into the hand of the [h]men of whom thou art afraid.

18 For I will surely deliver thee, and thou shalt not fall by the sword, [i]but thy life shall be for a prey unto thee: [j]because thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the LORD.

CHAPTER XL.

1 Jeremiah, being set free by Nebuzar-adan, goeth to Gedaliah. 7 The dispersed Jews resort unto him. 13 Johanan, revealing Ishmael's conspiracy, is not believed.

THE [a]word[1] that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, after that [b]Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had let him go from [c]Ramah, when he had taken him, being bound in chains[2] among all that were carried away captive of Jerusalem and Judah, which were carried away captive unto Babylon.

2 And the captain of the guard took Jeremiah, and said unto him, [d]The LORD thy God hath pronounced this evil upon this place.[3]

3 Now the LORD hath brought it, and done according as he hath [e]said: because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed his voice, therefore this thing is come upon you.

4 And now, behold, I loose thee this day from the chains which were[4] upon thine hand. If it seem good unto thee to come with me into Babylon, come, and I will look well unto thee:[5] but if it seem ill unto thee to come with me into Babylon, forbear: behold, [g]all the land is before thee: whither it seemeth good and convenient for thee to go, thither go.

5 Now, while he was not yet gone back, he said, Go back also to [h]Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Judah, and dwell with[*] him among the people; or [i]go wheresoever it seemeth convenient unto thee to go. So the captain of the guard [j]gave him victuals and a reward, and let him go.

6 Then went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, to [k]Mizpah;[6] and dwelt with him among the people that were left in the land.

7 ¶ Now when all [l]the captains of the forces which were in the fields,[7] even they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and of the [m]poor of the land, of them that were not carried away captive to Babylon;

8 Then they came to Gedaliah to [o]Mizpah, [p]even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and [q]Johanan and Jonathan the sons of Kareah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth, and the sons of Ephai the [r]Netophathite, and Jezaniah the son of a [s]Maachathite, they and their men.

9 And Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, [t]sware unto them, and to their men, saying, [u]Fear not to serve the Chaldeans: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you.

10 As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah, to serve[8] the Chaldeans[9] which will come unto us: but ye, [v]gather ye wine, and summer fruits, and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities that ye have taken.

11 Likewise, when all the Jews [z]that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them [1]Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan;

12 Even [y]all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer fruits very much.

13 ¶ Moreover, Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were in the fields, came to Gedaliah to Mizpah,

3 Nebuchadrezzar would no doubt hear from the deserters the nature of Jeremiah's prophecy and advice, and hence this kind treatment may be readily accounted for. As an acknowledged or reputed prophet of the LORD, he may also have felt for him a respect that his unbelieving countrymen did not feel.—C.

4 Nebuzar-adan having been directed (ver. 1) to allow Jeremiah perfect freedom, his choosing to return to the miserable remnant of paupers (ver. 10) that Nebuchadrezzar had left, is every way worthy of admiration, ch. 40. 4. Such a generous sacrifice would have glorified a philosopher—shall it fail of due honour when exhibited in a prophet!—C.

selves and their subjects. To avoid shame, they will not avow before men the regard which their conscience obliges them to have for the faithful servants of God; nay, to preserve their reputation before wicked men, they will risk their eternal salvation. We had need then to be wise as serpents, as well as harmless as doves. And though we must never tell a lie, yet we must not tell all that we know to every impertinent inquirer.

CHAPTER XXXIX. Ver. 2. The city was broken up. The walls being breached by battering-rams, the city sacked, and the inhabitants driven away or made prisoners.—Note, By a barbarous common consent, called 'a law of nations,' certainly, however, not a law of God, a city whose garrison has bravely held out till it is taken by storm, is delivered up to plunder. In such cases the infuriated soldiery are let loose from all restraint, their officers lose all control, and the city is literally 'broken up' by the hands of merciless destroyers. Lord, hasten the time when they shall 'beat their swords into ploughshares, and men shall learn war no more!' C.

Ver. 4. Betwixt the two walls. The Chaldeans had taken the city, but the citadel of Zion, in the south-west, was still, most probably, in the hands of Zedekiah. 'Betwixt the two walls' may accordingly mean that part of Zion to the north where the walls of the city and citadel approached; and the passage was, most likely, the way to the royal gardens in the vale of Gihon. The Jews have a tradition that the escape was by a subterraneous passage reaching to Jericho: and that the king would have escaped but that a hind, hunted by the Chaldeans, took refuge in the cave where the passage ended just as the king was emerging, and that he was thus miraculously made prisoner by the exulting Chaldeans. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how the families of the north sit in the gates of Jerusalem, and the lords of the heathen where their gods had been worshipped! God's judgments fearfully convince such as would not believe his threatenings. And fruitless are all attempts to flee from his judgment. But it will be awfully piercing to see our children murdered or lost through our obstinacy in sinning; and shut up at last in spiritual and eternal darkness through our obstinate ignorance of God's will! Marvellous, but just, are the changes and retributions of Providence; and the ruin of oppressors is the rise of the oppressed. God comforts his people, while the wicked are tormented; and heathens deliver them when hypocrites persecute them: yea, even prisons protect and mark them out for particular favours. Nor shall a cordial kindness to God's servants in trouble ever pass without distinguished honour and reward; and he will suit his comforts to the fears and griefs of his people. None that trust in him shall ever perish or be confounded.

CHAPTER XL. REFLECTIONS.—Heathens sometimes honour God and his ministers more than many

14 And said unto him, Dost thou certainly know that Baalis the king of the Ammonites hath[x] sent Ishmael the son of Nethaniah to slay thee?[2] But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not.[3]

15 Then Johanan the son of Kareah spake to Gedaliah in Mizpah secretly, saying, Let me go, I pray thee, and I will slay Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and no man shall know it: wherefore should he slay thee, that all the Jews which are gathered unto thee should be scattered, and the remnant in Judah perish?

16 But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam said unto Johanan the son of Kareah, [a]Thou shalt not do this thing: for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.

CHAPTER XLI.

1 Ishmael, having treacherously killed Gedaliah and others, purposeth with the rest to flee unto the Ammonites. 11 Johanan recovereth the captives, and mindeth to flee into Egypt.

NOW it came to pass in the [a]seventh[1] month, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, [b]of the seed royal, and [c]the princes of the king, even ten[2] men, with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, to Mizpah; and there they did [d]eat bread[3] together in Mizpah.

2 Then arose Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and [e]smote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, with the sword, and slew him, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land.

3 Ishmael also slew [g]all the Jews that were with him, even with Gedaliah at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the men of war.

4 And it came to pass, the second day after he had slain Gedaliah, and no man [h]knew it,[4]

5 That there came certain from [i]Shechem, from [j]Shiloh, and from [k]Samaria, even fourscore men, having their beards shaven, and their clothes rent, and having cut[5] themselves, with offerings[l] and incense in their hand, to bring them to the [6]house[7] of the LORD.

6 And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth from Mizpah to meet them, [8]weeping[9] all along as he went: and it came to pass, as he met them, he said unto them, Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam.

7 And it was so, when they came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah [n]slew them, and cast them into the midst of the pit, he, and the men that were with him.

3 This unbelief was just what was to be expected in a man of Gedaliah's character Himself unconscious of malice or deceit, he cannot imagine it possible in another. The most virtuous are always the least suspicious; and though they may occasionally suffer from misplaced confidence, they enjoy a peace of mind to which conscious guilt and a suspicious temper must always be strangers. The man of a 'sprinkled conscience,' and a 'pure heart,' is untroubled by fear, and dies but once; the guilty and the suspicious are always in dread and death.—C.

9 Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of the men, whom he had slain because of[4] Gedaliah, was it which [p]Asa[5] the king had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah filled it with them that were slain.

10 Then Ishmael carried away captive [q]all the residue of the people that were in Mizpah, even the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Mizpah, whom Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had committed to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah carried them away captive, and departed [r]to go over to the Ammonites.[6]

11 ¶ But when [s]Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, heard of all the [t]evil that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had done,

18 Because of[3] the Chaldeans: for they were professors. It will at last appear that God is faithful, and sin ruinous. And all loss sustained for God will be made up in the end. If his servants have hardships when sinners have liberty, they will obtain liberty when sinners shall be in misery.—What honour God puts on the son of Jeremiah's late protector, ch. 26. 24! But short glimmerings of prosperity often introduce fearful strokes of adversity. It is only the deputies and servants of heaven's great Monarch who are secured in complete and lasting protection. O what baseness and barbarity can human minds contrive and perpetrate! Great men have need to be cautious of their own preservation, as well as charitable concerning their neighbours. But of little worth are earthly honours, which but tempt miscreants to murder us.

CHAPTER XLI. REFLECTIONS.—By the most unexpected and unnatural means God can punish men who have ripened themselves in wickedness. And a righteous God can make the malice, the baseness, the barbarity of the most hardened monsters in iniquity to glorify himself and ruin his enemies. Misery, death, and despair often meet men when, where, and whence, they least expected. And not the laws of God or men, but covetousness, frequently makes sinners to abstain from crimes. The most unnatural criminals may for a time escape punishment from men. And groundless fear, real or pretended, often leads men into ruinous guilt.

CHAPTER XLII. REFLECTIONS.—Ministers have need to be men of fervent prayer, faithfulness, and intimacy with God. And if people would profit by their ministers' prayers, they should seriously attend to their preaching. We can never be sincere with God if we do not obey his will so far as it is known to us.

afraid[4] of them, because Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, [d]whom the king of Babylon made governor in the land.

CHAPTER XLII.

1 Johanan desireth Jeremiah to inquire of God, promising obedience to his will. 7 Jeremiah assureth him of safety in Judea, 13 but of destruction in Egypt. 19 He reproveth their hypocrisy, in asking counsel of God, which they meant not to follow.

THEN all the captains of the forces, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and [a]Jezaniah the son of Hoshaiah, and all the people from the least even unto the greatest, [b]came near,

2 And said unto Jeremiah the prophet, Let, we beseech thee, our supplication be accepted[1] before thee, and [c]pray for us unto the LORD thy God, even for all this remnant; (for we are left but[d] a few of many, as thine eyes do behold us;)

3 That the LORD thy God [e]may show us the way wherein we may walk, and the thing [g]that we may do.[2]

4 Then Jeremiah the prophet said unto them, I have heard you; behold, I [h]will pray unto the LORD your God according to your words; and it shall come to pass, that [i]whatsoever thing the LORD shall answer you, I will declare it unto you; I will keep nothing back from you.

5 Then they said to Jeremiah, The LORD be a[j] true and faithful witness between us; if we do not even according to all things for the which the LORD thy God shall send thee to us.

6 Whether [k]it be good, or whether it be evil, we will obey the voice of the LORD our God, to whom we send thee; [l]that it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of the LORD our God.

7 ¶ And it came to pass, after ten[3] days, that the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah.

8 Then called he [m]Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces which were with him, and all the people, from the least even to the greatest,

9 And said unto them, [o]Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto whom ye sent me to present your supplication before him;

10 If ye will still abide in this land, then will[p] I build you, and not pull you down; and I will plant you, and not pluck you up; for [q]I repent[4] me of the evil that I have done unto you.

11 Be[r] not afraid of the king of Babylon, of whom ye are afraid; be not afraid of him, saith the LORD: for I am with you to save you, and to deliver you from his hand.

12 And I will show mercies unto you, [s]that he may have mercy upon you, and cause you to return to your own [5]land.[6]

9 The divine promises to the Jews, here as elsewhere, are conditional. Unbelief was the grand source of all their sins as a nation. They would not trust in God. No amount of persuasion, no amount of past experience alike of judgment and mercy, would induce them to yield to him implicit obedience, and rely on his promises. CHAPTER XLIII.

1 Johanan discrediting Jeremiah's prophecy, carrieth Jeremiah and others into Egypt. 8 Jeremiah prophesieth by a type the conquest of Egypt by the Babylonians.

AND it came to pass, that when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking unto all the people all the words of the LORD their God, for which the LORD their God had sent him to them, even all these words,

2 Then spake [1]Azariah[2] the son of Hoshaiah, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and all [a]the proud men,[3] saying unto Jeremiah, Thou speakest [b]falsely: the LORD our God hath not sent

But what a cloak of religion will hypocrites put on to serve a particular turn! They will avouch God as their God, and make great pretences to unreserved readiness to obey his will in all things. How strange it is that he should return such dissemblers so plain, so gracious, an answer! But his mercy is the foundation of all our hopes and happiness. He can turn the hearts of kings to favour or to hate us as he pleases. And they who carefully obey his will may humbly expect

THE SPHINX—A MONUMENT WHICH HAS BEEN STANDING THROUGHOUT THE WHOLE OF OLD TESTAMENT TIMES, AND IS THUS A SILENT WITNESS OF ALL THAT IS RECORDED IN THE BIBLE. [JEREMIAH, xlii: 13, 14.]—"But if ye say, We will not dwell in this land, neither obey the voice of the Lord your God, saying, No; but we will go into the land of Egypt, where we shall see no war, nor hear the sound of the trumpet, nor have hunger of bread; and there will we dwell." By words like these Jeremiah was seeking to keep the remnant of Judah from going into Egypt out of fear of the king of Babylon. But the words of the prophet fell on unwilling ears, and in spite of all his efforts they went down into Egypt. But this remnant of Judah found to their cost that Jeremiah was right. The king of Babylon invaded Egypt also, and the remnant of Judah that fled from Babylon's king into the land of Egypt were consumed there by the sword and famine. We give as an illustration of this Scripture, the Sphinx which was the silent witness of the events here recorded.

thee to say, Go not into Egypt to sojourn there:

3 But [c]Baruch the son of Neriah setteth thee on against us, for to deliver us into the hand of the Chaldeans, that [d]they might put us to death, and carry us away captives into Babylon.

4 So Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, and all the people, [e]obeyed not the voice of the LORD, [g]to dwell in the land of Judah.

5 But [h]Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, took all the remnant of Judah, that were returned from all nations whither they had been driven, to dwell in the land of Judah;

6 Even men, and women, and children, and the king's daughters, and every person that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had left with Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, and [i]Jeremiah the prophet, and Baruch the son of Neriah.

7 So [j]they came into the land of Egypt: for they obeyed not the voice of the LORD. Thus came they even to [k]Tahpanhes.

8 ¶ Then [l]came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah in Tahpanhes, saying,

9 Take[m] great stones in thine hand, and hide them in the clay in the brick-kiln,[4] which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house in Tahpanhes, in the sight of the men of Judah;

10 And say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, [o]I will send and take Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant, and will set his throne upon these stones that I have hid: and he shall spread his royal pavilion over them.[5]

11 And when he cometh, [p]he shall smite the land of Egypt, and deliver [q]such as are for death to death; and such as are for captivity to captivity; and such as are for the sword to the sword.

12 And I will kindle a fire [r]in the houses of the gods of Egypt; and he shall burn them, and carry them away captives: and he shall array[6] himself with the land of Egypt, as a shepherd putteth on his garment;[7] and he shall go forth from thence [s]in peace.

13 He shall break also the images[8] of [9]Beth-shemesh,[1] that is in the land of Egypt; and the houses of the gods of the Egyptians shall he burn with fire.

The sun was a (if not the) chief god of the Egyptians, and the principal seat of his worship was at On (which signifies 'light' or 'sun'), a celebrated city of Lower Egypt, called by the Greeks Heliopolis. The priest of On was one of the greatest personages in the country, and to his daughter Joseph was married. The site of Beth-shemesh or Heliopolis, is about ten miles north-east of Cairo, and beside it is a fountain still called Ain esh-Shems, 'fountain of the sun.'—P.

1 Jeremiah expresseth the desolation of Judah for their idolatry. 11 He prophesieth their destruction, who commit idolatry in Egypt. 15 The obstinacy of the Jews. 20 Jeremiah threateneth them for the same, 29 and for a sign foretelleth the ruin of the king of Egypt.

THE word[a] that came to Jeremiah concerning all the Jews which dwell in the land of Egypt, which dwell at [b]Migdol,[1] and at [c]Tahpanhes,[2] and at [3]Noph,[4] and in the country of [5]Pathros,[6] saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Ye have seen all the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, and upon all the cities of Judah; and, behold, this day [d]they are a desolation, and no man dwelleth therein;[7]

3 Because[e] of their wickedness which they have committed, to provoke me to anger, in that they went to burn incense, and to serve other gods, whom they knew not, neither they, ye, nor your fathers.

4 Howbeit [g]I sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early, and sending them, saying, Oh, do not this [h]abominable thing that I hate.

5 But[i] they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to [j]burn no incense unto other gods.

6 Wherefore my fury and mine anger [k]was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem: and they are wasted and desolate, as at this day.

7 Therefore now thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel, [l]Wherefore commit ye this great evil against [m]your souls, to cut off from you man and woman, child and suckling, out of[8] Judah, [o]to leave you none to remain;

8 In that [p]ye provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye be gone to dwell, that ye might cut yourselves off, and that ye [q]might be a curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth?

9 Have ye forgotten [r]the wickedness[9] of your fathers, and the wickedness of the kings of Judah, and the wickedness of their wives, and your own wickedness, and the wickedness of your wives, which they have committed in the land of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem?

10 They are not humbled[1] even unto this day, [s]neither have they [t]feared, nor walked in my law, nor in my statutes, that I set before you, and before your fathers.

his blessing. But it is madness to dissemble with a God of truth, who searches our hearts; or to quit our station, especially in his holy land, because we find trouble in it. If we think to escape suffering by sinning, we only rush upon the thick bosses of his buckler. If we make him our enemy, we shall find him a consuming fire wherever we go; and that upon which we most set our hearts will prove most fatal to us. If we make ourselves vile by our sins, he will make us viler by his judgments.

REFLECTIONS.—Pride is among the most awful sins—a root of infidelity, and a sure road to ruin. They who are full of ill designs themselves, ordinarily reproach the true friends of their church and nation as traitors. They who hate to conform themselves to the Scripture, are ready to deny the divinity of it. And they who wish to contradict the ends of a gospel ministry, study to put it under an ill name. Proud men hate contradiction; and if they cannot obtain consent, they will force compliance, and even drag those who fear God along with them. But a sinful flight from God's judgments only hastens them upon us, and renders them heavier; and even draws down his wrath upon such as receive us into their friendship. And, very contrary to their intentions, he makes one nation a scourge to another.

CHAPTER XLIV. Ver. 6. There are those who object against the ascription of 'fury and anger' to God. The objections would disappear if they were not viewed as human passions, but as sources of the divine judgments. The ruin and desolation of idolatrous lands are visible facts; the justice that

HEAD OF THE PROCESSION OF THE FESTIVAL OF THE MAH 'MAL. [JEREMIAH, xliv : 8.]—"In that ye provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye be gone to dwell." It has been characteristic of Egypt in all ages to burn incense unto other gods than the true God. The festival of the Mah 'Mal is perhaps the best illustration we could have of the recent form of idolatry in this land so intimately connected with the Israelites, and from whom God's peculiar people seemed to have learned most of the errroneous forms of religion which brought upon them the judgments of Jehovah. The Mah 'Mal is a litter, built of wood in pyramidal form, and is hung by embroidered fabrics. These hangings or coverings accompany the litter in the annual pilgrimage to Mecca, and are intended for the interior sanctuary of the Mosque at that holy Moslem city.

11 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I [u]will set my face against you for evil, and to cut off all Judah.

12 And [v]I will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and they shall all be consumed,[2] and fall in the land of Egypt; they shall even be consumed by the sword and by the famine: they shall die, from the [x]least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine; and they shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach.

13 For I will punish[3] them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence:

14 So that none of the remnant of Judah, which are [y]gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the which they have a desire[4] to return to dwell there; [z]for none shall return but such as shall [a]escape.[5]

15 ¶ Then [b]all the men which knew that their wives[6] had burned incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying,

16 As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the LORD, [c]we will not hearken unto thee.

17 But we will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth[d] forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the queen[7] of heaven, and to pour out[8] drink-offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: for [e]then had we plenty of victuals,[9] and were well, and saw no evil.

18 But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine.

19 And when we[1] burned incense to the queen of heaven, and poured out drink-offerings unto her, did we make her cakes to worship her, and pour out drink-offerings unto her,[2] without our [3]men?[4]

20 ¶ Then Jeremiah said unto all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to all the people which had given him that answer, saying,

21 The incense that ye burned in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye, and your fathers, your kings, and your princes, and the people of the land, [g]did not the LORD remember them, and came it not into his mind?

6 The women, it would seem, had been principally engaged in this species of idolatry, but not without the concurrence of their husbands. We have not seen the women in determined rebellion before. Here, however, they make common cause with their rebellious spouses, and boldly defend their flagrant idolatry.—I.

22 So that the LORD [h]could no longer bear, because of the evil of your doings, and because of the abominations which ye have committed, therefore is your land [i]a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, as at this day.

23 Because[j] ye have burned incense, and because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD, nor [k]walked in his law, nor [l]in his statutes, nor [m]in his testimonies; therefore [o]this evil is happened unto you, as at this day.

24 Moreover,[p] Jeremiah said unto all the people, and to all the women, Hear the word of the LORD, all [q]Judah that are in the land of Egypt;

25 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, Ye and your wives [r]have both spoken with your mouths, and fulfilled with your hand, saying, We will surely perform our vows[5] that we have vowed, to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto her: ye will surely [s]accomplish your vows, and surely perform your vows.

26 Therefore hear ye the word of the LORD, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt; Behold, [t]I have sworn by my great name, saith the LORD, that [u]my name shall no more be named[6] in the mouth of any man of Judah, in all the land of Egypt, saying, The Lord GOD liveth.

27 Behold, [v]I will watch over them for evil, and not for good; and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt shall be [x]consumed by the sword, and by the famine, until there be an end of them.

28 Yet[y] a small number that escape the sword shall return out of the land of Egypt into the land of Judah; and all the remnant of Judah, [z]that are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall know whose words shall stand, mine or theirs.[7]

29 ¶ And this shall be [a]a sign unto you, saith the LORD, that I will punish you in this place, that ye may know that my words shall surely stand against you for evil:

30 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, [b]I will give Pharaoh-hophra[8] king of Egypt into the hand of his enemies,[9] and into the hand of them that seek his life, [c]as I gave Zedekiah king of Judah into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon his enemy, and that sought his life.

1 This utterance belongs in point of time to ch. xxxvi., but is introduced here as an example and encouragement to the few that did still 'sigh and cry for all the abominations that were done in the land.' This, and similar dislocations throughout this book, are not to be considered as evidences that the arrangement of the several parts was without any principle of order. The principle is obvious: it is not time, but instruction.—C.

inflicts them, sets forth and measures 'the fury and anger' of the Lord.—C.

Ver. 7. This is a very remarkable remonstrance:—'Why do ye commit great wickedness against yourselves?' The Jews are represented as their own worst enemies, as their own executioners in fact. How can this be? God's law is clear. The nation that rebels against him shall perish. The Jews knew the law. Yet they deliberately rebelled. They had repeated experience of it in their own past history; yet that did not restrain them. They rebelled again more grievously than before, and by that rebellion necessarily entailed upon themselves the judgment here referred to. P.

had written these words in a book at the mouth of Jeremiah, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah, king of Judah, saying,

2 Thus[b] saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto thee, O Baruch;

3 Thou didst say, [c]Woe is me now! for the LORD hath [d]added grief to my sorrow; I [e]fainted in my sighing, and I [g]find no rest.

4 Thus shalt thou say unto him, The LORD saith thus, [h]Behold, that which I have built will I [i]break down, and that which I have planted I will pluck up, even this whole land.

5 And [j]seekest thou great things[2] for thyself? seek them not: [k]for, behold, I will [l]bring evil upon all flesh, saith the LORD; but thy life will I give unto thee [m]for a prey in all places whither thou goest.

These have been combined in one book, and the order may perhaps have been different in different copies; but this does not in any way affect the integrity and inspiration of each prophecy, or of the whole collectively. The one relates to the overthrow of the Egyptian army on the banks of the Euphrates; the other to the conquest of Egypt itself by the king of Babylon, which took place at a later period, sixteen years after the capture and destruction of Jerusalem. REFLECTIONS.—Dreadful is the malignity of sin; infinitely God hates it, and earnestly should his ministers warn against it. It is a dreadful token of a reprobate mind when, with judgments upon us or around us, we harden ourselves in sin, and a certain sign that almighty judgment is at hand to destroy us. They who will not be ruled by God's word, must be broken by his rod. And if men will prefer their own projects to God's promises and providence, it is just that they should meet with disappointments. No antiquity, authority, custom, or prosperity, can ever warrant what God forbids. And it is dreadful when the means which God uses to draw or drive us from our sins are perverted to harden us in them; or when those who should assist one another in the way to heaven are mutual tempters to and hardeners in sin. But God will effectually refute his obstinate opponents by the ruinous strokes of his wrath. Nor can a greater curse light upon sinners than to be given up to the devices of their own heart. Quickly will God ruin the created comforts and confidences which we put in his room. And indeed nothing is to us what we fancy it, but what he makes it.

CHAPTER XLV. REFLECTIONS.—Alas, how unwilling our hearts are to take up our cross and follow Christ! Very small difficulties are apt to discourage young beginners in the service of God. And often it is more their unbelieving fears than their real dangers that make them to complain. If we had less desire after and less expectation from creatures, and more faith in Christ's word and views of the spiritual nature of his kingdom, external events would trouble us less. While therefore God so exactly observes me, let me never seek my own more than the public welfare. Let me never seek great things here, where everything is less than nothing and vanity, and as uncertain as a shadow or a vapour. If God preserve and protect me in evil times, it is more than I deserve, or perhaps could expect.

CHAPTER XLVI. Ver. 1. There are here two prophecies. The first before a battle between the Egyptians and Babylonians near Carchemish, in which the Egyptians suffered a severe defeat. The second begins at ver. 13, and the desolation foretold took place in the 27th year of Jehoiakim's captivity, and the 16th after the destruction of Jerusalem, as may be collected from Eze. 29. 17, where Nebuchadnezzar's army receives a promise of the spoils of Egypt as wages for their fruitless toils and dangers in the siege of Tyre, which promise was fulfilled the same year. See Josephus' Antiq. b. x. c. 9; and Rollin's An. Hist. vol. i. b. i. C.

Ver. 9. The original words are Cush, Phut, and Lud, three nations who were allies of Egypt, Eze. 30. 5. The first, Arabians, near the Red Sea, east of Egypt (see 2 Ch. 21. 16; Is. 20. 3–5), but who seem also to have had settlements in Egypt itself, or in some adjoining district in Africa, situated higher on the Nile: see Is. 28. 1. The second, Libyans, west of Egypt. The third, the descendants of Lud, the son of Misraim, who settled in Egypt, Ge. 10. 13. These Lydians are to be distinguished from the Lydians of Asia Minor, familiar to history on account of the riches of Crœsus, their king, and who are supposed to be the descendants of Lud, the son of Shem, Ge. 10. 22. C.

Ver. 25. Multitude of No. 'No, or 'Amon No,' generally supposed to be the Egyptian Thebes. It stood on both sides of the Nile, about 300 miles from the sea. In time of war it could furnish 20,000 men and 200 chariots. It was taken and destroyed by the Assyrians, Na. 3. 8–10. It afterwards arose to still greater splendour, and is said to have extended to 52 miles in circumference. It was again reduced to ruins by Cyaxares of Persia, Eze. 30. 15, 16. It was partially rebuilt again, and finally destroyed by C. Gallus. Four villages now rise upon its ruins—perhaps the most magnificent in the world. Ruins that compel the traveller to gaze and wonder how man could become so brutal as to devastate such miracles of architecture and splendour—ruins which the believer points out to the infidel as evidences of divine revelation and abiding monuments of God's judgments upon idolatry. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God will reckon with sinners at last. And, alas, at what expense, and with what parade, they rush forward into their own destruction! When they think to magnify themselves by their wicked enterprises, he glorifies himself in blasting their designs and cutting them off. At infinite hazard do kings, in their pride, march multitudes into sudden death and damnation. And the more confident they are, the nearer is their ruin. No numbers, no armour, no

STATUE OF RAMESES II.—LYING IN THE CITY WHICH JEREMIAH SAID SHOULD BE WITHOUT INHABITANT. [JEREMIAH, xlvi:19.]—"O thou daughter dwelling in Egypt, furnish thyself to go into captivity: for Noph (Memphis) shall be waste and desolate without an inhabitant." Rameses II. was the "king who knew not Joseph." We see him now in limestone lying prostrate amid the ruins of the city he enriched and oppressed. The first in her glory, he is the last in her desolation. The prophecy is literally true, "Memphis shall be without an inhabitant." The companions of the once proud Rameses the Second now are the jackals, whose wierd howl lends a melancholy interest to the solemn moan of the palms, the only sentinels left to guard the proud Egyptian king. Tall, rank weeds grow about his mighty form, and lean their dying heads upon his cold and bloodless bosom. He is so quiet and harmless in his limestone form that the lizards play hide and seek on the surface of his vast face.

the LORD of hosts, Surely as [a]Tabor[4] is among the mountains, and as [b]Carmel by the sea, so shall[c] he come.

19 O thou [d]daughter dwelling in Egypt, furnish[5] thyself to go [e]into captivity: for Noph[6] shall be waste and desolate without an inhabitant.

20 Egypt is like [g]a very fair heifer,[7] but destruction cometh; it cometh [h]out of the north.

21 Also her hired men[8] are in the midst of her [i]like [g]fatted bullocks;[1] for [j]they also are turned back, and are fled away together: they did not stand, because [k]the day of their calamity was come upon them, and the time of their visitation.

22 The voice thereof shall go like[2] a serpent;[3] for they shall march with an army, [l]and come against her with axes, as hewers of wood.

23 They shall cut down her forest,[4] saith the LORD, though it cannot be searched;[5] because they are more [m]than the grasshoppers, and are innumerable.

24 The[o] daughter of Egypt shall be confounded; [p]she shall be delivered into the hand of the people of the north.

25 The LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saith, Behold, I will punish the multitude[6] of No,[7] and Pharaoh, and Egypt, [q]with their gods, and their [r]kings; even Pharaoh, and all them that trust in him:

26 And I will deliver them into the hand of those that seek their lives, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of his servants; and [s]afterward it shall be inhabited, as in the days of old, saith the LORD.[8]

27 ¶ But[t] fear not thou, O my servant Jacob, and be not dismayed, O Israel: for, behold, I will save thee from afar off, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and be in rest and at ease, and none shall make him afraid.

28 Fear thou not, O Jacob my servant, saith the LORD; for I am with thee: for [u]I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee; [v]but I will not make a full end of thee, but correct thee in measure; [w]yet will I not leave thee wholly unpunished.[9]

[9] The topographical allusions in this brief prophecy are deserving of note. Gaza and Ashkelon were chief cities of Philistia; and the latter was situated, as indicated in ver. 7, on the shore of the Mediterranean. Phœnicia and Philistia formed parts of the plain which runs along the whole coast of Syria and Palestine. The inhabitants too were descended from one common stock. Caphtor was the country from which the Philistines migrated before settling on the coast of Palestine. It appears to have been a province of Egypt; and probably Copt, the present name of the native Egyptians, may be a corruption of the ancient Caphtor.—P.

1 Or, the high place.
2 The reader will observe a close resemblance in both structure and language between this prophecy and that in Isaiah xv. and xvi. There is no reason to believe that Jeremiah copied from the older prophet. The fact seems to be, that as the Moabites now joined the Chaldeans in their invasion of Judæa, Jeremiah was divinely commissioned to repeat the prophetic judgment previously pronounced by Isaiah. Recent researches have shown that the prophecy has in every particular been fulfilled to the letter.—P.

CHAPTER XLVII.

The destruction of the Philistines.

THE word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet [a]against the Philistines, [b]before that Pharaoh smote Gaza.[1]

2 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, waters[2] rise up out of the north, and shall be an overflowing flood, and shall overflow the land, and all that is therein;[3] the city, and them that dwell therein: [c]then the men shall cry, and all the inhabitants of the land shall howl.

3 At the noise of the stamping of the hoofs of his [d]strong horses, at [e]the rushing of his chariots, and at the rumbling of his wheels, the fathers shall [g]not look back to their children for feebleness of hands;

4 Because of [h]the day that cometh to spoil all the Philistines, and to cut off [i]from Tyrus and Zidon every helper that remaineth; for the LORD will spoil the Philistines, [j]the remnant of the country[4] of [k]Caphtor.

5 Baldness[5] is come upon Gaza; Ashkelon is cut off with the remnant of their valley: how long [l]wilt thou cut thyself?

6 O[n] thou sword of the LORD, how long will it be ere thou be quiet? put up[6] thyself into thy scabbard; rest, and be still.

7 How can it[7] be quiet, seeing the LORD [o]hath given it a charge against Ashkelon, and against the sea shore? [8] there hath he [p]appointed it.[9] courage, no strength, no cunning, no wealth, no flight avails when God is the assailant and pursuer. Mighty armies make but a pitiful figure when he musters the host of their enemies to the battle. And noisy blusterers do least in a time of need. They who disappointed others are at last disappointed themselves. Alas! what desolations sin makes in the most populous and wealthy countries! Quickly is Egypt too hot for the Jews, who fled thither, and all her thousands of cities turned into ruinous heaps. Amidst external preparations it is necessary to prepare chiefly for trouble, captivity, death, and eternity. But great is his grace who seeks the salvation of the church and people in the worst of times, and even grants partial deliverances to the wicked.

CHAPTER XLVII. Ver. 1. Pharaoh. Whether this was Pharaoh-necho, or Pharaoh-hophra, is uncertain. It is equally uncertain at what time; the fact alone is known, and all mere conjecture is useless.—Gaza was a very ancient city, Ge. 10. 10, and being the frontier town of Palestine towards Egypt, was strongly fortified. By Joshua it was assigned to the tribe of Judah, who gained possession of it soon after his death, Ju. 1. 18. The Philistines regained the possession, during which it became the scene of some of the most memorable acts of Samson. Being regained by David, it continued subject to his successors for 150 years; and, after successively falling into the hands of the Assyrians, Egyptians, Chaldeans, and Persians, it withstood Alexander of Macedon a siege of two months, and was, when captured, barbarously razed to the ground. Gaza appears never to have been rebuilt, and is described shortly after the days of our Lord as a desert place, Ac. 8. 26. Another city of the same name was erected near the ancient site, which still remains a place of considerable importance, and contains about 5000 inhabitants. C.

Ver. 2. Waters are here, as elsewhere, used as an emblem of an 'enemy coming in like a flood,' Is. 59. 19. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God exactly foresees the miseries of the most strong and flourishing states. And the strongest holds are of no avail against the justice of a threatening, an holy God. He effectually reckons with the spiteful or treacherous enemies of his people at last; and if he be against us, who can be for us? The more we trust to creatures for help, the more sad disappointments we shall meet with in a time of need. Yea, great distress may make us even to forget we have our darling babes, or to wish they had never been born. But, notwithstanding the confusions of war, every stroke shall be overruled of God, and none can stop it till it has finished its work.

CHAPTER XLVIII. Ver. 1. Moab. So called from Moab the son of Lot. It is bounded on the west by the Dead Sea, on the south by Midian, on the north by the river Arnon, and on the VIEW EAST FROM THE ACROPOLIS—SHOWING THE HILL WHERE ST. PAUL PREACHED. [JEREMIAH, xlviii.]—In the year 588 B. C., Jeremiah was prophesying the conquest of Egypt by the Babylonians. At the same time in Greece Solon of the family of Nelidae had come to great influence by the recapture of Salamis and by his share in the first sacred war against Crisa and Cirrha whose inhabitants had robbed the temple of Apollo in Delphi. It was during this time that Solon was writing the constitution and laws for the citizens of Athens. Standing upon the Acropolis and looking east toward Hymettus, we see the natural features of the country which surrounded Athens in the time of Jeremiah. It is interesting to place ourselves in the time of the prophet and look toward Greece, for this classical country is regarded as one of the lands of the Bible. From Greece some 200 years after Jeremiah, Alexander the Great came and conquered Palestine.

5 For in the going up of Luhith continual weeping[7] shall go up; for in the going down of Horonaim the enemies have heard a cry of destruction.

6 Flee, save your lives,[8] and be like the heath[9] in the wilderness.[1]

7 ¶ For because [c]thou hast trusted in thy works, and in thy treasures, thou shalt also be taken;[2] and [3]Chemosh[4] shall go forth into captivity, with his [g]priests and his princes together.

8 And the spoiler[5] shall come upon every city, [h]and no city shall escape; the valley also shall perish, and the plain[6] shall be destroyed, as the LORD hath spoken.

9 Give[i] wings unto Moab, that it may flee and get away: for [j]the cities thereof shall be desolate, without any to dwell therein.[7]

10 Cursed[k] be he that doeth the work of the LORD deceitfully,[8] and cursed be he that keepeth back his sword from blood.

11 ¶ Moab hath been at ease[9] from his youth, and he hath settled on his lees,[1] and hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel, neither hath he gone into captivity:[2] therefore his taste[3] remained[4] in him, and his scent is not changed.

12 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will send unto him [5]wanderers,[6] that shall cause him to wander, and shall empty his vessels, and break their bottles.

13 And[l] Moab shall be ashamed of Chemosh, as the house of Israel was ashamed of Beth-el[7] their confidence.

14 ¶ How say ye, [m]We are mighty and strong men for the war?

15 Moab is spoiled,[8] and gone up out of her cities, and his chosen[9] young men are gone down to the slaughter, saith [o]the King, [p]whose name is the LORD of hosts.

16 The calamity of Moab [q]is near[1] to come, and his affliction hasteth fast.

17 All[r] ye that are about him, bemoan him; and all ye that know his name, say, [s]How is the strong staff broken, and the beautiful rod!

18 Thou [t]daughter that dost inhabit Dibon, come down from thy glory, and sit in thirst; for the spoiler of Moab shall come upon thee, and he shall destroy thy strong holds.

19 O inhabitant[2] of [u]Aroer, stand by the way, and espy; [v]ask him that fleeth, and her that escapeth, and say, What is done?

is illustrated by the situation of Moab, and the habits of all the dwellers in Syrian border-land. Moab was bounded on the east by the great desert of Arabia; and to this day when any invading force enters the territory of a transjordanic people, if unable to meet them in the field, they pack up their goods, collect their flocks and herds, and retire into the desert. This is the course given to the Moabites by the prophet.—P.

The proper territory of Moab lay immediately upon the eastern border of the Dead Sea, bounded on the north by Ammon, and on the south by Edom; but in prosperous times, during the internal conflicts of Israel, the Moabites conquered the extensive plain extending east of Gilead as far as the southern border of Bashan. The Israelites were expressly forbidden to injure the Moabites, De. 2. 9; but this forbearance was repaid not only with inhospitality, but malice; for the Moabites hired Balaam to curse Israel, and joined with the Midianites in enticing them to sin, Nu. xxi. xxiv.; De. 23. 2. 43 Fear,[i] and the pit, and the snare, shall be upon thee, O inhabitant of Moab, saith the LORD.

44 He[j] that fleeth from the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that getteth up out of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for I will bring upon it, even upon Moab, [k]the year of their visitation, saith the LORD.

45 They that fled stood under the shadow of Heshbon, because of the force: but [l]a fire shall come forth out of Heshbon, and a flame from the midst of Sihon, and shall devour the corner of Moab, and the crown of the head of the tumultuous ones.[2]

46 Woe[m] be unto thee, O Moab! the people of Chemosh[3] perisheth: for thy sons are taken captives,[4] and thy daughters captives.

47 ¶ Yet[o] will I bring again the captivity of Moab in the latter days, saith the LORD. Thus far is the judgment of Moab.

CHAPTER XLIX.

1 The judgment of the Ammonites. 6 Their restoration. 7 The judgment of Edom, 23 of Damascus, 28 of Kedar, 30 of Hazor, 34 and of Elam. 39 The restoration of Elam.

CONCERNING[1] the[q] Ammonites, thus saith the LORD, Hath Israel no sons? hath he no heir? why then doth their [2]king [b]inherit [3]Gad, and his people [c]dwell in his cities?

2 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that [d]I will cause an alarm of war to be heard in Rabbah of the Ammonites; and it shall be a desolate heap, and her [4]daughters shall be burned with fire: then [e]shall Israel be heir unto them that were his heirs,[5] saith the LORD.

3 Howl,[g] O Heshbon; for [h]Ai is spoiled: cry, ye daughters of Rabbah, gird you with sackcloth; lament, and run to and fro by the hedges:[6] for[i] their king[7] shall go into captivity, and his priests and his princes together.

4 Wherefore[j] gloriest thou in the valleys, thy flowing valley,[8] O[k] backsliding[9] daughter? [l]that trusted in her treasures, saying, Who shall come unto me?

5 Behold, [m]I will bring a fear upon thee, saith the Lord GOD of hosts, from all those that be about thee; and ye [o]shall be driven out every man right forth; and none shall [p]gather up him that wandereth.

6 ¶ And [q]afterward I will bring again the captivity of the children of Ammon, saith the LORD.

7 ¶ Concerning[r] Edom, thus saith the LORD of hosts, Is wisdom no more in [s]Teman?[1] is [t]counsel perished from the prudent? is their wisdom vanished?

8 Flee[u] ye, turn back,[2] dwell [3]deep,[4] O inhabitants of Dedan; for I will bring [v]the calamity of Esau upon him, the time that I will visit him.

9 If [w]grape-gatherers come to thee, would they not leave some gleaning grapes? if thieves by night, they will destroy till they have [5]enough.

10 But I have made Esau [y]bare, I have uncovered his [z]secret places, and he shall not be able to hide himself: his [a]seed is spoiled, and his brethren,[6] and his neighbours, and he is [7]not.

country is a desert—a national monument of God's judgments upon national sins. See ver. 9. C.

Ver. 21. Holon, &c. These are the names of cities of Moab, some of them not elsewhere mentioned. It is stated by travellers that in no country of Europe are the towns and villages so numerous as the ruins that are scattered over Moab. C.

Ver. 26. Make ye him drunken—not 'with wine, wherein is excess;' for that is forbidden of God—but judicially condemn him to drink of the intoxicating draught of his own pride and vanity, ver. 29, and the cup of God's judgment against these rebellions of the heart. C.

Ver. 27. The people of one nation often take pleasure in deriding the people of another; and seem to think that by lowering their neighbours they are elevating themselves. The subject of this derision may be religion, government, poverty, dress, language, history, national peculiarities and habits, however inoffensive; nay, industry, riches, and comforts, can be turned into ridicule by those who envy what they are too ignorant or too idle to attain. The Moabites, by perverting history, seem to have ridiculed the Israelites as 'thieves,' and to have expressed that malignant joy at their disasters which is the surest evidence of a weak understanding and a bad heart: and the certain forerunner of that divine judgment against private or public malice which prophecy occasionally reveals as a warning, but which providence always inflicts as a part of God's uniform and unalterable government. C.

Ver. 30. His lies shall not so effect his evil purposes, nor enable him to gratify his malignant and causeless wrath. The probability is, that the Moabites had been active in misrepresenting the Jews to the Chaldeans. C.

Ver. 32. Thy plants are gone over the sea. Thy people are carried captive beyond the sea, but to what place is unknown; the word translated 'sea' being applicable to the ocean, the Mediterranean, the Red Sea, the Dead Sea, or to any considerable lake of fresh water. C.

Ver. 34. Three years old, as the date of maturity, and the consequent emblem of perfection, was the age required by JEHOVAH for every animal of the covenant-sacrifice with Abraham, Ge. 15. 9; of which sacrifice the 'heifer' was the first. It is therefore not probable that the allusion is, as Blayney supposes, to a heifer 'lowing after her lost calf'—for such instinctive language of maternal affection is not peculiar to any age; but to an animal devoted to sacrifice, as Moab was to divine judgment. C.

Ver. 36. There are two views of every national calamity. (1) As it is the effect of God's judgment. (2) As it is the work of Satan's malice. Viewed in the first aspect, the believer always acquiesces, frequently rejoices; viewed in the second, he always acquiesces, but often weeps. Thus our Lord wept over Jerusalem at the very moment he announced her doom. Thus the prophet condemns Moab for her sins, but weeps over the ruin her sins are about to accomplish. C.

Ver. 38. House-tops of Moab. The roofs of eastern houses being generally flat, the 'house-top' served as a principal apartment for the assembling of families. C.

Ver. 42. Magnified himself. Set up his own opinion—calling it 'reason'—in opposition to God's revelation; his idols, made by his own hands, in opposition to God's worship; and his own appetites and passions, in opposition to God's law. C.

Ver. 47. Whether this prophecy has yet received any accomplishment is uncertain; but, most probably, the humane policy of Cyrus would extend beyond the Jews to other captives. Its full accomplishment, however, is still future, and waits for the time when 'the kingdoms of this world shall (all) become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ,' Re. 11. 15. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God is the author and manager of all the awful judgments executed upon nations or persons. And with tremendous exactness, activity, and fury, his agents perform their work. Such as could not be ashamed out of their idolatry by his word must be made ashamed of it by his rod, and be convinced by experience that their idols cannot help them. Long outward prosperity is a snare to men's souls; and by it wicked men encourage themselves to more ungodliness. When men enjoy their good things here, they have none to expect in eternity. When God has borne long with sinful nations, they may expect calamities, surprising, terrible, lamentable, shameful, and complicated, but all of them righteous. And it is of infinite mercy if they issue not in everlasting destruction. Nor need presumptuous mockers of God and his people to wonder if their bands be made strong, or if their presumption become the prelude of their ruin.

CHAPTER XLIX.—Ver. 19, 20. Behold, Nebuchadnezzar shall invade your country, as furious as a lion driven from his den by the swelling of Jordan. He shall attack your strongest cities; and, acting under the direction and influence, of all embracing ambition and desire for glory he shall, without control, ravage your whole country.

Ver. 1. Why then doth their king inherit Gad? Rather, 'Why doth' Milcom 'inherit Gad?' Milcom was the chief idol of the Ammonites; see 1 Ki. 11. 5. The Gadites were carried captive into Assyria (2 Ki. 15. 29; 1 Ch. 5. 26), when, it is most probable, the Ammonites took possession of the vacant country. C.

Ver. 12. Whose judgment was not to drink. In every national calamity there is a number of the godly who suffer with the ungodly; and whom, though God may preserve, he yet severely tries by the judgments that fall upon their relatives and friends. See Eze. 14. 12–23. And thus it comes to pass that they 'whose 11 Leave thy fatherless children, [b]I will preserve them alive; and let thy widows trust in me.

12 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, [c]they whose judgment was not to drink of the cup have assuredly drunken; and art thou he that shall [d]altogether go unpunished? thou shalt not go unpunished, but thou shalt surely drink of it.

13 For I have [e]sworn by myself, saith the LORD, that [g]Bozrah shall become a desolation, a reproach, a waste, and a curse; and all the cities thereof shall be perpetual wastes.[8]

14 I have heard a [h]rumour from the LORD, and an ambassador is sent unto the heathen, saying, Gather ye together, and come against her, and rise up to the battle.

15 For, lo, [i]I will make thee small among the heathen, and [j]despised among men.

16 Thy[k] terribleness hath deceived thee, and the pride of thine heart, O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock,[9] that holdest the height of the hill: [l]though thou shouldest make thy nest as high as the eagle, I will bring thee down from thence, saith the LORD.

17 Also[m] Edom shall be a desolation; every one that goeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss at all the plagues thereof.

18 As[o] in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD, no man shall abide there, neither shall a son of man dwell in it.

19 Behold, he shall come up [p]like a lion[1] from [q]the swelling of Jordan against the habitation of the strong: but I will suddenly make him run away [2]from her;[3] and who is [r]a chosen man, that I may appoint over her? for [s]who is like me? and who will appoint me the time?[4] and who is [t]that shepherd[5] that will [u]stand before me?

20 Therefore hear the [v]counsel of the LORD, that he hath taken against Edom; and his purposes, that he purposed against the inhabitants of [w]Teman: surely [6]the least of the flock[7] shall draw them out;[8] surely he [y]shall make their habitations desolate with them.

21 The[z] earth is moved at the noise of their fall; at the cry, the noise thereof was heard in the Red sea.[9]

22 Behold, he shall come up and [a]fly as the eagle, and spread his wings over Bozrah: and at that day shall the heart of the mighty men of Edom be [b]as the heart of a woman in her pangs.

23 ¶ Concerning[c] Damascus: Hamath is confounded, and Arpad; for they have heard evil tidings; they are [1]faint-hearted:[2] there is sorrow on the sea;[3] it cannot be quiet.

24 Damascus is [d]waxed feeble, and turneth herself to flee, and fear hath seized on her: anguish and sorrows have taken her, as a woman in travail.

25 How is the [e]city of praise not left, the city of my joy!

26 Therefore[4] her[g] young men shall fall in her streets, and all the men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the LORD of hosts.

27 And I will kindle a [h]fire in the wall of Damascus, and it shall consume the palaces of [i]Ben-hadad.

28 ¶ Concerning[j] Kedar, and concerning the kingdoms[5] of [k]Hazor, which Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon shall smite, thus saith the LORD, [l]Arise ye, go up to Kedar, and spoil the men [m]of the east.[6]

29 Their[o] tents and their flocks shall they take away: they shall take to themselves their curtains, and all their vessels, and their camels; and they shall cry unto them, [p]Fear is on every side.

30 ¶ Flee,[q] get you far off,[7] dwell deep,[8] O ye inhabitants of Hazor, saith the LORD; for [r]Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath taken counsel against you, and hath conceived a purpose against you.

31 Arise, get you up unto the wealthy nation,[9] that [s]dwelleth without care, saith the LORD, which have neither gates nor bars, which [t]dwell alone.

32 And their camels [u]shall be a booty, and the multitude of their cattle a spoil; and [v]I will scatter into all winds them that are in the utmost corners;[1] and I will bring their calamity from all sides thereof, saith the LORD.

33 And Hazor[x] shall be a dwelling for [2]dragons, and a desolation for ever: there shall no man abide there, nor any son of man dwell in it.

34 ¶ The word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet against [3]Elam,[4] in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, saying, 35 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, I will break [y]the bow of Elam, the chief of their might.

36 And upon Elam will I bring [z]the four winds[5] from the four quarters of heaven, and (personal) judgment was not to drink,' have often 'assuredly drunken;' of which fact Jeremiah himself was a striking example, having drunk deeper than any of the bitter cup of his country's and his church's sorrow. C.

Ver. 16. Clefts of the rock. The land of Edom, or Idumea, is a country of lofty and precipitous rocks. The ruins of its proud and magnificent capital still remain: and language cannot express the astonishment of such travellers as have been able to explore them. The temples, mausoleums, and private dwellings, all excavated in 'the clefts of the rock,' give evidence of riches and labour to which no modern works in Europe afford any parallel. See Keith's Evidence of Prophecy, and Finden's Illustrations. Yet the once swarming city is desolate, 'neither doth a son of man dwell in it,' ver. 18. C.

Ver. 31. Have neither gates nor bars. Those Arabians who were rich in flocks, still the only riches of many countries, and who, dwelling in tents, had literally neither gates nor bars. Their deserts were their bulwarks: but judgment is now denounced, and they shall no longer escape the just punishment of their sins —pastoral luxury, covetousness, and robbery—which (at least the two last) still remain both the sin and the punishment of their descendants. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With strict jealousy God remarks the injuries done to his distressed people. And in very different forms he plagues and terrifies them who had plagued and terrified his saints; while the losses of the injured are repaid out of the unjust gains of the injurers. It is therefore vain for backsliders from God to indulge pleasure, or to trust in any created enjoyment. When God lays countries desolate, widows and children are peculiarly miserable. O how great is the kindness of God, that invites such to be trusted to his care! But it is impossible to avert or withstand his angry blow, since he can make his weakest instruments too brave and valiant for the mightiest opposer, and can pull men from the strongest fortifications. And if his dearer favourites or persons less guilty be BRIDGE OVER THE JORDAN—NEAR WHERE THE ISRAELITES WORSHIPPED THE EGYPTIAN CALF. [JEREMIAH, xlix : 19.]—"Behold, he shall come up like a lion from the swelling of Jordan against the habitation of the strong." This bridge is over the Hasbeiya branch of the Jordan. The bridge is said to date to the time of the Romans, but is thought to belong to a later date. It has a very solid look and is in need of repairs, and one peculiarity of the Turk is that nothing with which he has to do is ever repaired. The rock-paved roadway you see coming down to the bridge is the road along which we pass from the plain of Huleh to Cæsarea Philippi. This is a wild and picturesque place, and the river underneath is fitly represented by Jeremiah in the sentence "the swelling of the Jordan." The Jordan here dashes down the steep descent, covering the shrubbery on the banks with its spray. It passes in a channel nearly 200 feet deep.

38 And I will set my throne[6] in Elam, and will destroy from thence the king and the princes, saith the LORD.

1, 9, 21, 35 The judgment of Babylon. 4, 17, 33 The redemption of Israel.

THE word that the LORD spake [a]against Babylon, and against the land of the Chaldeans, by[1] Jeremiah the prophet.

2 Declare[b] ye among the nations, and publish, and set up[2] a standard;[3] publish, and conceal not: say, Babylon is taken, [c]Bel is confounded, Merodach[4] is broken in pieces; her idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces.

3 For [d]out of the north[5] there cometh up a nation against her, which [e]shall make her land desolate, and none shall dwell therein: they shall remove, they shall depart, both man and beast.

4 ¶ In[g] those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, [h]the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, [i]going and weeping: they shall go, and [j]seek the LORD their God.

5 They [k]shall ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward, saying, Come, and let us [l]join ourselves to the LORD [m]in a perpetual covenant[6] that shall not be forgotten.

6 My people hath been [o]lost sheep; their shepherds[p] have caused them to go astray, they have[q] turned them away on the mountains: they have [r]gone from mountain to hill, they have forgotten their [s]resting-place.[7]

But by whatever name the original Elamites are now known, or wheresoever they may now be captive, God gives them promise of restoration, which, after the example of his promise to the Jews, seems to indicate, not merely conversion to the gospel, but a return to their ancient dwellings.—C.

8 This has been the very language of those (so called) Christian countries in which the Jews have, in former times, been persecuted. Their persecution, whether in the form of assault or robbery, was counted no crime, because the Jews had been guilty of crucifying the Lord, and their persecutors believed or feigned themselves authorized by Providence to inflict retributive punishment. punished, it is in vain for us to hope for an escape. Yea, if he continue his hand on us, we can never recover from our ruins, but must be dreadful and lasting monuments of his justice.—All earthly joy, pomp, power, or bravery in the day of his wrath, do but render our ruin more dreadful. Nor can the most securely situated or the most inoffensive escape from his anger. The most retired are forced into the open world, and made to share in the common misery. And God often wonderfully debases nations before he signally advances them.

CHAPTER L. Ver. 4. In those days. That is, during the days of Babylon's desolation. That desolation still continues, and the conversion and restoration of Israel is still future: but the visible ruin of Babylon is not more certain than the fulfilment of the promise of God to his people Judah and Israel. C.

Ver. 13. Wholly desolate. 'The abundance of the country has vanished as clean away as if the besom of desolation had swept it from north to south,—the whole land from the outskirts of Babylon to the farthest stretch of sight, lying a melancholy waste. Not a habitable spot appears for countless miles' (Sir R. K. Porter's Travels; see Rich, Keith, &c.)—Note, He that would interpret the awful phrase 'wrath of the Lord,' will find a most intelligible exposition in comparing the histories of ancient and modern Babylon. The picture will present conquest pursued, pride inflated, idolatry established, luxury indulged, slavery maintained, mercy forgotten, and ruin, utter ruin, inflicted in return by the hand of a righteous God! C.

Ver. 19. Israel. The distinction between Judah and Israel is not to be overlooked. Judah was restored under Zerubbabel, Ne. 1.—Israel never returned. But God has given the promise, and it will yet be fulfilled. See ver. 33. C.

Ver. 20 Satan, as the 'accuser,' will seek for their iniquity, as he did for iniquity in Job, but it shall not be found; because 'they shall have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.' See He. 8. 8–12. C.

Ver. 40. Let the infidel compare the ancient with the modern state of Babylon, and the whole with this prophecy—not a description vague and general, but specific and particular—and then let him acknowledge that 'the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy,' and remain an infidel no longer. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Certain but dreadful is the ruin of arrogant sinners, and especially those who oppress or murder the people of God. How unstable are all earthly things! The Medes and Persians, whom the Chaldeans had but lately subdued, now tread their conquerors under their feet. And no idols, no princes, no counsellors, no diviners, no armies, no lofty walls or deep rivers, no wealth or bravery can protect them from the weakest foe. The measure which they had meted out to others is meted out to them again, pressed down and running over. And their fearful judgments exactly correspond to their horrid iniquities.—But in what fearful things in righteousness doth God answer the prayers of his people! Yet certain is their deliverance, their restoration to fellowship with God, to safety, comfort, and full forgiveness. And if we begin to be tenderly affected under God's corrections, it is a token that our merciful deliverance is near. In promoting a good cause, it is good to be zealously affected, and to be among the first to lead the way. It is highly honourable to return to God and our covenant obligations to him. And happy is it when the cruel insults and upbraiding of our enemies are exchanged for the smiles, the vindications of our God. And when our hath devoured him, and last this Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones.[2]

18 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, [v]as I have punished the king of Assyria.[3]

19 And[z] I will bring Israel again to his habitation, and he shall feed on [y]Carmel and Bashan, and his soul shall be satisfied upon mount Ephraim and [z]Gilead.

20 In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, [a]the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and [b]there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found: for I will pardon them whom [c]I reserve.

21 ¶ Go[d] up against the land of Merathaim,[4] even against it, and against the inhabitants of [e]Pekod:[5] waste and utterly destroy after them, saith the LORD, and do [g]according to all that I have commanded thee.

22 A [h]sound of battle is in the land, and of great destruction.

23 How[i] is the hammer[6] of the whole earth cut asunder and broken! how is Babylon become a desolation among the nations!

24 I[j] have laid a snare for thee, and thou art also taken, O Babylon, and thou wast not aware: thou art found, and also caught, because thou hast[k] striven against the LORD.[7]

25 The[l] LORD hath opened his armoury, and hath brought forth the weapons of his indignation: for this [m]is the work of the Lord GOD of hosts in the land of the Chaldeans.

26 Come[o] against her from the utmost[8] border, open her [p]storehouses; [r]cast her[1] up as heaps, and destroy her utterly: let nothing of her be left.

27 Slay all her bullocks;[2] let them go down to the slaughter: woe unto them! for [q]their day is come, the time of their visitation.[3]

28 The[r] voice of them that flee and escape out of the land of Babylon, to declare in Zion the vengeance of the LORD our God, the vengeance of his [s]temple.[4]

29 Call[t] together the archers against Babylon: all ye that bend the bow, camp against it round about; let none thereof escape: [u]recompense her according to her work; according to all that she hath done, do unto her: for [x]she hath been proud against the LORD, against the Holy One of Israel.

30 Therefore[z] shall her young men fall in the streets, and all her men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the LORD.

4 This remarkable prophecy has been fulfilled. The site of Babylon is now occupied by heaps of rubbish, dry beds of ancient canals, vast mounds of crumbling brick, mingled with fragments of glass and pottery. The soil is nitrous and destroys vegetation, rendering the region 'a naked and melancholy waste, re-echoing only the dismal sounds of the owl and jackal, of the hyena and lawless robber.' So terribly desolate is the place, so completely has the great city been swept away, that its site was long a mystery. Now that it has been identified, modern research has tended more and more to illustrate the prophetic judgments.—P.
5 At the second taking of Babylon Darius ordered 3000 principal men to be crucified on account of their revolt.—C.

31 Behold, I am against thee, [v]O thou most proud,[5] saith the Lord GOD of hosts: [z]for thy day is come, the time that I will visit thee.

32 And[a] the most proud[6] shall stumble and fall, and none shall raise him up: and I [b]will kindle a fire in his cities, and it shall devour all round about him.

33 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [c]The children of Israel and the children of Judah were oppressed together; and all that took them captives held them fast; they refused to let them go.

34 Their[d] Redeemer is strong; the LORD of hosts is his name; he shall [e]throughly plead their cause, that he may [g]give rest to the land, and disquiet the inhabitants of Babylon.

35 ¶ A sword is upon the Chaldeans, saith the LORD, and upon the inhabitants of Babylon, [h]and upon her princes, and upon her wise men.

41 Behold,[s] a people shall come from the north, and a great nation, and many kings shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth.

42 They[t] shall hold the bow and the lance; [u]they are cruel,[5] and will not show mercy: [x]their voice shall roar like the sea, and they shall ride upon horses, every one put in array, like a man to the battle, against thee, O daughter of Babylon.

CHAPTER LI. Ver. 13. Thou Babylon, situated upon the great river Euphrates, and who rulest over many nations, the wealth of which thou hast collected by thy conquests, now the time fixed by God for the increase of thy wealth is finished. 38–46. Their mad roaring at their drunken and idolatrous revels shall be turned into fearful howlings: and while they are inflamed with wine the Persians shall murder them, their king, and their princes. At their idolatrous festival in honour of their god Sheshach, shall Babylon be surprised by multitudes of irresistible enemies, and at last become quite desolate, and a fen or lake.—And while their idols shall be destroyed by the Persians, who hate images, the spoils which they took from the

CHAPTER LI.

1 The severe judgment of God against Babylon in revenge of Israel. 59 Jeremiah delivereth the book of this prophecy to Seraiah, to be cast into Euphrates, in token of the perpetual sinking of Babylon.

THUS saith the LORD, Behold, [a]I will raise up against Babylon, and against them that dwell in the midst[1] of them [b]that rise up against me, a [c]destroying wind;[2]

2 And will send unto Babylon [d]fanners, that shall fan her, and shall empty her land: for in the day of [e]trouble they shall be against her round about.

3 Against him that bendeth [g]let the archer bend his bow, and against him that lifteth himself up in his brigandine:[3] and [h]spare ye not her young men; destroy ye utterly all her host.

4 Thus the slain shall fall in the land of the Chaldeans, and they that are [i]thrust through in her streets.

5 For[j] Israel hath not been forsaken, [k]nor Judah of his God, of the LORD of hosts; [l]though their land was filled with sin against[4] the Holy One of Israel.

6 Flee[m] out of the midst of Babylon, and deliver every man his soul; be not cut off in her iniquity: for this is [o]the time of the LORD's vengeance; he will render unto her a recompense.

7 Babylon hath been a [p]golden cup in the LORD's hand, that [q]made all the earth drunken: the nations have drunken of her wine; therefore the nations are mad.

8 Babylon is [r]suddenly fallen and destroyed: howl[s] for her; [t]take balm for her pain, if so be she may be healed.

9 We would have healed Babylon,[5] but she is [u]not healed: [v]forsake her, and let us go every one into his own country: for [x]her judgment reacheth unto heaven, and is lifted up even to the skies.

10 The LORD hath brought forth our righteousness:[6] come, and let us declare in Zion the work of the LORD our God.

* This does not seem to be 'ironical advice to Babylon,' as it has been represented, but rather encouragement to Cyrus and Darius to persevere until they had 'set up the (Persian) standard on the walls of Babylon'—a mode of expression almost universal on the taking of a fortress. This appears the more probable, as the city was taken by Cyrus by means of an ambush and night attack.—C.

41 How is [z]Sheshach[8] taken! and how is the praise of the whole [a]earth surprised! how is Babylon become an astonishment among the nations!

42 The[b] sea[9] is come up upon Babylon: she is covered with the multitude of the waves thereof.

43 Her[c] cities are a desolation, a dry land, and a wilderness, a land wherein no man dwelleth, neither doth any son of man pass thereby.

48 Then[o] the heaven and the earth, and all that is therein, shall sing for Babylon: for [p]the spoilers shall come unto her from the north, saith the LORD.

iniquities, it has so long lain in rubbish, and God been so much reproached on that account.

Ver. 7. The prosperity that God graciously bestowed upon Babylon, the nations admired; the luxury into which her prosperity betrayed her, the nations imitated; the idolatry into which her vain imagination fell, the nations adopted; in her drunkenness they became drunken, and in her ruin they were overwhelmed. C.

Ver. 10. Our righteousness. The righteousness, the sole righteousness of God's people, is the 'righteousness of God, which is by faith of Jesus Christ, unto all and upon all them that believe,' Ge. 15. 6; Ps. 14. 5; Ro. 3. 21, 22; 5. 17–21; 10. 4. Through faith in Messiah, God's elect were preserved even in Babylon; and even Nebuchadnezzar and Belshazzar acknowledged 'the LORD their Righteousness,' Da. 4. 34–37; 6. 23, comp. 20. C.

Ver. 19. The Portion. God is called the 'portion'—the parof her strength, yet [z]from me shall spoilers come unto her, saith the LORD.

54 A[a] sound of a cry cometh from Babylon, and great destruction from the land of the Chaldeans:

55 Because [b]the LORD hath spoiled Babylon, and destroyed out of her the great voice;[7] when her waves[8] do roar like great waters, a noise of their voice is uttered:

56 Because[c] the spoiler is come upon her, even upon Babylon, and [d]her mighty men are taken; every one of [e]their bows is broken: for the[g] LORD God of recompenses shall surely requite.

57 And [h]I will make drunk[9] her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men: and they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the [i]King, whose name is The LORD of hosts.

58 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [1]The broad walls[2] of Babylon[3] shall be utterly broken,[4] and her [j]high gates shall [k]be burned with fire; and the[l] people shall labour in vain, and the folk in the fire, and they shall be weary.

59 ¶ The word which Jeremiah the prophet commanded Seraiah the son of [m]Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, when he went with[5] Zedekiah the king of Judah into Babylon, in the fourth year of his reign. And this Seraiah was a [6]quiet prince.[7]

60 So Jeremiah [o]wrote in a book all the evil that should come upon Babylon, even [p]all these words that are written against Babylon.

61 And Jeremiah said to [q]Seraiah, When thou comest to Babylon, and shalt see, and shalt [r]read all these words;

62 Then shalt thou say, O LORD, thou hast spoken against this place, [s]to cut it off, that none shall remain in it, neither man nor beast, but that it shall be desolate[8] for ever.

63 And it shall be, when thou hast made an end of reading this book, that [t]thou shalt bind a stone to it, and cast it into the midst of Euphrates:

64 And thou shalt say, [u]Thus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise from the evil that I will bring upon her: and [v]they shall be weary. Thus[9] far[1] are the words of Jeremiah.

1 Heb. reigned.
* The first 27 verses of this chapter are in substance, and to a great extent also in language, identical with 2 Ki. xxiv. 18–xxv. 21. The two passages are no doubt only different versions of the same document, and were written by the same author. It has been questioned by many whether Jeremiah could have been the author, as the short remark which precedes appears to convey the idea that they were composed by another. It seems to me highly probable that as the books of Jeremiah and Lamentations were originally one, the Book of the Prophecies concluded with ch. li., and ch. lii. formed the historical introduction to the Lamentations.—P.

3 Was God, then, the author of Zedekiah's revolt? No. But being angry with Zedekiah on account of his sin, he adjudged him to be given over to his own pride, impatience, and evil counsel; stimulated by which, he devised the revolt against which he had been prophetically warned; and thus far, and no farther, 'through the anger of the Lord,' he 'rebelled.'—C.

1 In 2 Ki. 25. 8 Nebuzar-adan is said to have come to Jerusalem on 'the seventh,' here he is said to have come 'on the tenth day of the month.' How may these apparent contradictions be reconciled? Most easily. He came on the seventh, and continued collecting the spoil day after day, retiring, it may be, from the city at night, till the tenth, when he again 'came' back and burned both the temple and the city. The Jews still keep two fasts in memory of these calamities.—C.

eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.[2]

2 And [b]he did that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD, [c]according to all that Jehoiakim had done.

3 For [d]through the anger of the LORD[3] it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, till he had cast them out from his presence, that [e]Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

4 ¶ And it came to pass in the [g]ninth year of his reign, in the [h]tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came, he and all his army, against Jerusalem, [i]and pitched against it, and built forts against it round about.

5 So the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah.

6 And in [j]the fourth month, in the ninth day of the month, [k]the famine was sore in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land.[4]

7 Then [l]the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the gate between the two walls, which was by the king's garden; (now the Chaldeans were by the city round about;) and they went by the way of the plain.

8 ¶ But the army of the Chaldeans [m]pursued after the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all his army was scattered from him.

9 Then [o]they took the king, and carried him up unto the king of Babylon to Riblah, in the land of Hamath; where he gave judgment upon him.

10 And[p] the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes: he slew also all the princes of Judah in Riblah.

11 Then [q]he put out the eyes of[5] Zedekiah; and the king of Babylon bound him in [6]chains, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in prison[7] till the day of his death.

12 ¶ Now in the [r]fifth month, in the tenth day of the month, which was the nineteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, came Nebuzar-adan, captain of the guard,[8] which served[9] the king of Babylon, into Jerusalem,[1]

13 And[s] burned the house of the LORD, and the king's house; and all the houses of Jerusalem, and all the houses of the great men, burned he with fire.

Ver. 25. A burnt mountain. A burning mountain often overwhelms with lava the cities and plains in its neighbourhood. So the fall of Babylon, by the sudden revulsion of trade, and wreck of property, must have overwhelmed its connected or dependent countries in common if not equal ruin. C.

Ver. 31. Babylon is described by most credible ancient writers as a square of 15 miles each side; the Euphrates running through the middle. The city was taken by turning the river out of its ordinary course—the enemy entering through the empty channel. Such a city might, therefore, readily be taken 'at one end' before any alarm had reached the other. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Fearful are the destructions which await those who have long been employed in executing God's judgments upon others. And nothing more hastens their ruin than their insolence against God and abuse of his people. Even when he frowns upon these himself, he cannot endure others to insult, murder, or oppress them. And it is easy for that almighty God who is infinitely superior to idols, to make his counsel to stand, and to do all his pleasure. Strong and brave are the weakest when God animates them to the battle: and weak and dispirited the strongest when God fights against them. Vain is everything earthly, as all may issue at last in such misery and desolation. But, alas! how dreadful must be the last, the eternal, destruction

SUMMER HOUSE OF SHAMMIAH, DAMASCUS—WHERE NAAMAN THE SYRIAN LIVED (I Kings, xx, xxii; II Kings, v:6). [JEREMIAH, lii: 9.]—"Then they took the king, and carried him unto the king of Babylon to Riblah, in the land of Hamath; where ne gave judgment upon him." The army of the Chaldeans pursued after and overtook King Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho. In going from Jericho to Riblah and Hamath they would necessarily pass through Damascus, for it was the most direct route between Jericho and Riblah. We give a picture of a summer house in Damascus to illustrate this important event in Jewish history. It was at Riblah that the Egyptian king Pharaoh Necho put the youthful Jehoahaz in chains, and made Eliakim king, as we learn from II Kings, xxiii: 29-35. Nebuchadnezzar also encamped here while he directed his military operations in Palestine. This summer house in Damascus is the property of Shammiah, a very wealthy Jew.

REVOLT IN PRISON, DAMASCUS—A CITY CONQUERED AND GARRISONED BY DAVID. [JEREMIAH, lii : 25-26]—In the Scripture above referred to, we have an account of the taking of Seraiah, the chief priest, and Zephaniah, the second priest, and others found in the city of Jerusalem, to the king of Babylon at Riblah. Damascus is upon the direct route between Jerusalem and Riblah, and the prisoners above referred to passed this city before reaching Riblah, where they were smitten and put to death by the king of Babylon. The illustration we give above is of a scene witnessed by the writer on May 16th, 1894. The building to the right is the city prison. Five hundred men confined here for various offenses had mutinied, and were being shot to death from the top of the prison by the guards. We witnessed the whole scene from the veranda of our hotel which stood just across the Abana river from the prison. Several men were killed before the mutiny was quelled.

were with the captain of the guard, brake down all the walls of Jerusalem round about.

15 Then[t] Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive certain of the poor of the people, and the residue of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to the king of Babylon, and the rest of the multitude.

16 But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard left certain of the poor of the land,[2] for vine-dressers[3] and for husbandmen.

17 ¶ Also[u] the pillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and the bases, and the brazen sea that was in the house of the LORD, the Chaldeans brake, and carried all the brass of them to Babylon.

18 The caldrons also, and the shovels,[4] and the snuffers, and the bowls,[5] and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass, wherewith they ministered, took they away.

19 And the basons, and the fire-pans,[6] and the bowls, and the caldrons,[v] and the candlesticks, and the spoons, and the cups; that which was of gold in gold, and that which was of silver in silver, took the captain of the guard away.

20 The[x] two pillars, one sea, and twelve brazen bulls that were under the bases, which king Solomon had made in the house of the LORD: the brass[7] of all these vessels was without weight.

21 And concerning the pillars, [y]the height of one pillar was eighteen cubits, and a fillet[8] of twelve cubits did compass it; and the thickness thereof was four fingers: it was hollow.

22 And a [z]chapiter of brass was upon it; and the height of one chapiter was five cubits,[9] with net-work and pomegranates upon the chapiters round about, all of brass: the second pillar also and the pomegranates were like unto these.

23 And there were ninety and six pomegranates on a side; and all the pomegranates upon the net-work were an hundred[1] round about.

24 ¶ And[b] the captain of the guard took Seraiah[c] the chief priest, and [d]Zephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers of the door:[2]

25 He took also out of the city an [3]eunuch, which had the charge of the men of war; and seven men of them that were near the king's person,[4] which were found in the city; and the principal scribe of the host,[5] who mustered the people of the land; and threescore men of the people of the land, that were found in the midst of the city.

26 So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard took them, and brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah.

27 And[e] the king of Babylon smote them, and put them to death in [g]Riblah, in the land of Hamath. Thus [h]Judah was carried away captive out of his own land.

28 ¶ This is the people whom Nebuchadrezzar carried away [6]captive: [i]in the seventh year, three thousand Jews and three and twenty:[7]

29 In[j] the eighteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar he carried away captive from Jerusalem eight hundred thirty and two persons:[8]

30 In the three and twentieth year of Nebuchadrezzar, Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive of the Jews seven hundred forty and five persons:[9] all the persons were four thousand and six hundred.

31 ¶ And [k]it came to pass, in the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, in the five and twentieth day of the month, that Evil-merodach king of Babylon, in the first year of his reign, [l]lifted up[1] the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah, and brought him forth out of prison,

32 And spake kindly[2] unto him, and set his throne above the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon, 33 And [m]changed his prison garments; and he did continually [o]eat bread before him all the days of his life.

34 And for his diet,[3] there was a continual diet given him of the king of Babylon, every [p]day a portion,[4] until the day of his death, all the days of his life.

2 'The poor of the land' were the peasants who lived in the country villages and hamlets, and were accustomed to the cultivation and training of vines. 'The poor of the people' who were carried away to Babylon, as recorded in the preceding verse, were a different class; they were inhabitants of the city, people of idle and turbulent habits, who had been allowed to remain when the rich were taken captive, but were now removed lest they should prove dangerous.—P.

3 Among the causes tempting Nebuchadnezzar to invade and subjugate Judea, it is by no means improbable that a desire to obtain a vinous country may have predominated, as much as a desire to obtain ports and commerce on the Mediterranean. * In this narrative Jeremiah gives an account of three minor deportations, not elsewhere mentioned in Scripture. But there were three others greater than these. The first in the 1st year of Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. 1. 3–6; the second in the 8th, 2 Ki. 24. 12; and the third in the 19th, 2 Ki. 25. 8; which are sufficiently distinguished from those in the 7th, 18th, and 23d years. This view is presented by Usher, and adopted by Blayney and Greenfield, &c. C.—Henderson reconciles the statements in this passage with those in Kings as follows:—'According to 2 Ki. 24. 14 the number of captives taken along with Jehoiachin amounted to 10,000, with which the statement here made, that the number was 3023, may be reconciled by comparing 2 Ki. 24. 16, where we are informed that 7000 of the 10,000 specified, ver. 14, were military, leaving the sum total to be completed by the addition of the 3023 mentioned in ver. 30 before us, as the amount of those who had been taken captive' at three different times, must be added the 2000 soldiers of 2 Ki. 24. 14, so that the whole will come to 11,600; and regarding these as full-grown men, if we take into account the women and children, the total estimate of those carried away to Babylon will be, according to the computation of Michaelis, about 50,000 individuals.'—P.

1 To what personal qualities or political circumstances Jehoiachin's release was indebted for this relaxation and favour, we are not informed. It is not even stated that he had repented, so that it might appear that 'when a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh his enemies to be at peace with him,' Pr. 16. 17. of the wicked, of which all the overthrows of cities and nations are but alarming preludes! Quickly should we flee from among them, that we share not in their sins and their plagues. In every affliction we suffer on earth, let us think on God, and remember his mercy and truth. And though the accomplishment of his words be ever so unlikely, let us never stagger at his promise through unbelief. Is there anything too hard for the LORD?

CHAPTER LII. REFLECTIONS.—How corrupt dignified persons, churches, and nations sometimes become! But God casts out none from his church or protection till they first cast off him. If sinners wilfully depart from him he gives them up to their own folly; and often nothing more is necessary for their destruction. Iniquity not only deserves, but hastens men's ruin upon them. And however sweet rebellion against God be at first, it is dreadful and bitter in its fruits. And the folly of parents often plunges their children into ruin. Divine ordinances, long abused, are removed at last. And external privileges, instead of excusing our sins, or exempting from miseries, become a grievous aggravation of both. Nor can our unbelief make void God's promises any more than his threatenings. In this world all things are in a perpetual revolution; new kings, new laws, new conditions, new frames. And long nights of trouble often usher in joyful deliverances. Our times are all in God's hand, as well as the hearts of all men with whom we deal. And he can make our most wicked and infatuated oppressors to favour us whenever he sees meet.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF JEREMIAH.

Jeremiah, as a prophet, 'hated without a cause,' or simply for telling the truth, for denouncing sin and exhorting to holiness; and persecuted to bonds, imprisonment, and most probably to a cruel and ignominious death, may justly be regarded as an eminent type of Messiah in his prophetic office. Each typical person is one who has just a certain measure of the Spirit of Christ bestowed upon him, is placed in circumstances, to a certain extent, similar to those in which Messiah is to be placed—and consequently exhibits a certain measure of the temper and character which, 'in the fulness of the time,' Christ was intended to exhibit; of the work he was fitted to accomplish, and of the suffering he was destined to endure. In all these respects Jeremiah was eminently a type of Messiah, whose day and kingdom he so clearly foresaw; see especially ch. 23. 5, 6; 33. 14–18. In one point of view, the character and circumstances of their respective times, there seems, no doubt, a wide difference; yet the sensual idolatry of the days of Jeremiah was not more idolatrous than the self-righteousness and traditions of the days of Christ, that had made 'void the law of God,' and converted the proud Pharisees into worshippers of themselves. The opposition, ingratitude, hatred, and cruelty with which Jeremiah was treated by his countrymen, are striking similitudes of their subsequent treatment of Messiah. All these things, however, the Lord bore patiently, and prayed for the forgiveness of them that crucified him; and here Jeremiah has been supposed to have come short, and has been accused of an impatience and vehemence indicative of the spirit of a mere man, rather than of an inspired prophet. That neither Jeremiah nor any other has ever attained the full 'measure of the stature of Christ,' will readily be admitted; but that the accusations against him are unfounded, the offspring rather of a spurious sentimentalism, than of the 'charity that thinketh no evil,' it is hoped the previous notes have demonstrated. And while it is neither right, necessary, nor permissible, to defend, or even to palliate, an error in the servants of God; it is right, and an imperative duty, to defend them against every unfounded accusation. In all the other attributes of a type Jeremiah will be seen a striking image of his future Lord, and especially in the following points:—(1) In the spirit of self-sacrifice, when he prefers the companionship of his wretched and ungrateful kindred to all the splendour and respect so generously proffered at the court of Babylon. (2) In the grief of heart he was called to endure. How accurately does he therein resemble the 'Man of Sorrows,' when he longs to weep 'day and night for the slain of the daughter of his people!' (3) In the unshrinking boldness with which he denounced sin, and the affectionate earnestness with which he called sinners to repentance. (4) In the untiring energy with which, during a long and turbulent period, he continued to prosecute the work of his ministry; so that, like his Lord, he might well nigh say, 'The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up.' All these, with other graces, combined to shadow out in the servant, what his Master would be at his appearing. And 'all these things happened for our ensamples, and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come,' 1 Co. 10. 11.

As an internal evidence of the antiquity of the book, it is not unworthy of remark that the months are reckoned by numbers; first, second, &c., a mode which was not used after the captivity, for during the seventy years the Jews had learned, and afterwards continued to use, the Chaldaic names.

Are an appendix to his predictions; written not in the foresight, but on observing the desolations which they bewail;—not for Josiah's death, of whom there is not the smallest hint in the book, but for the destruction of Jerusalem and its temple, and the unhinging of the Jewish church and state by Nebuchadnezzar. The composition is poetic and singular, each verse, in each chapter, beginning with a different letter of the alphabet, in order, as in some of the Psalms; only in the third every three verses begin with the same letter, somewhat in the form of Ps. cxix. Nothing can be conceived more tender, expressive, and affecting than the descriptions. The grand design of them is to lead the captives to repentance and humiliation for their sins before God, and to inspire them with some hopes of deliverance.

[The author's name is not mentioned in this book, and therefore some have questioned whether it proceeded from the pen of Jeremiah. There is no good reason, however, to doubt the authorship. Jewish tradition reaching back beyond the Christian era ascribes it to Jeremiah; and in a verse prefixed to the Septuagint translation, and apparently of the same date, Jeremiah is mentioned as the author. The verse is as follows: 'And it came to pass after Israel had been carried away captive, and Jerusalem had been laid waste, that Jeremiah sat weeping, and lamented with this lamentation, and said.' The internal evidence is in entire accord with the historical. The writer was manifestly an eye-witness of the troubles he laments. The language and style, too, closely resemble those of the prophecies. P.

The Book of LAMENTATIONS may be considered as a sequel to those prophecies of Jeremiah which related to the Chaldean invasion, and the subsequent ruin of Judea, and the captivity or dispersion of the Jews. And although by Josephus, Usher, and others, it has been considered as referring to the death of Josiah (2 Ch. 35. 25), yet the description of the 'captivity' (ch. 1. 3), of the complete ruin of Jerusalem (ch. 4. 5, 12), and of the capture of the king (ch. 4. 20), seems quite conclusive for referring the whole book to the days of Zedekiah.

The book is divided into five chapters, each of which contains a distinct subject of lamentation, subdivided into twenty-two stanzas, according to the letters of the Hebrew alphabet. In the first four chapters the stanzas begin with the letters following in alphabetical order. In the first two chapters each stanza forms a triplet, except the seventh of the first, and the nineteenth of the second, which have each a supernumerary line. In the third chapter each stanza consists of three verses, which all commence with the same letter; so that the whole alphabet is thrice repeated. In the fourth and fifth chapters the stanzas are merely couplets, the fifth chapter being the only one not alphabetically arranged.

This arrangement is not to be considered as originating merely in the personal taste of the prophet, but as divinely directed for some special purposes. Among these purposes, it may be useful to note the following. (1) The Jewish and the Christian religions (and which yet are not two, but one religion, under two forms or dispensations, and calculated for two conditions of mankind, the local and the diffused, the self-governing and the governed); these are the only religions that have ever made education—the education of all ranks, without exception, an integral and necessary part of their constitution. They are, in a word, the only intellectual forms of religion; every false form being calculated either to tolerate ignorance or foster sensuality: and every false, superstitious, and apostatical form of Judaism and Christianity being more or less perverted to the same purposes. Now the alphabet containing the elements of all intellectual education, it is not surprising that an intellectual religion should embody some of its most important documents in an alphabetical form, so that the minds of children under instruction (see De. 6. 6) might associate their first steps in learning with the holy Word of the Lord. No doubt there are those who would pronounce such association unfavourable to future religious impressions; inasmuch as the first steps in learning are generally felt as a toil, and endured but as a slavery. But this, be it remembered, depends altogether upon the temper and the manner of the instructor, who generally has it in his power, by a judicious commixture of kindness and authority, to render a really intellectual education not only tolerable, but agreeable and delightful. (2) It is by no means improbable that, by adopting the alphabetical arrangement in his 'LAMENTATIONS,' the prophet meant to inculcate that sorrow was now the proper lesson which Judah and Israel were called to study; while the threefold repetition would, not ineptly, shadow forth the long-continued succession of afflictions which they were destined to undergo. Nor is it contrary to the emblematical manner of the prophets to conclude, that the dropping of the alphabetical form in the last chapter—which consists of an earnest prayer—was intended to show, that when Judah and Israel should return and call upon the name of the Lord, then should their lesson of sorrows have an end, and the joy of their heart be renewed, ver. 15, 21. (3) This alphabetic elegy, this funeral dirge of Zion, may well remind the believer of Him who came near 'the city, and wept over it.' And by comparing ch. 5. 18, 19, with Ps. 102. 25, and He. 1. 10–12, the LORD, before whom the prophet pleads and bemoans the melancholy ruin of his church and his country, is found to be the 'King of Zion,' the Lord Christ, who, in the book of Revelation, ch. 1. 8, is styled the Alpha and Omega, the whole alphabet, as it were the study and instructor of his church. C.]

CHAPTER I.

1 The miserable estate of Jerusalem by reason of her sin. 12 She complaineth of her grief, 18 and confesseth God's judgments to be righteous.

HOW doth the city [a]sit solitary, that [b]was full of people! how is she become [c]as a widow! she that was [d]great[1] among the nations, and princess among the provinces, how is she become [e]tributary!

2 She [g]weepeth sore in the night, and her tears are on her cheeks; [h]among all her lovers she hath none to comfort her: all her friends have dealt treacherously with her, they are become her enemies.

3 Judah[i] is gone into captivity, because of affliction, and because of great[2] servitude; [j]she dwelleth among the heathen, she findeth no rest: all [k]her persecutors overtook her between the straits.[3]

4 The[l] ways of Zion do mourn, because none come to the solemn feasts: all her gates are desolate; [m]her priests sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness.

5 Her[o] adversaries are the chief, her enemies prosper: for [p]the LORD hath afflicted her for the multitude of her transgressions: [q]her children are gone into captivity before the enemy.

6 And from the daughter of Zion [r]all her beauty is departed: [s]her princes are become like harts that find no pasture, and they are gone without strength before the pursuer.

7 Jerusalem [t]remembered, in the days of her affliction and of her miseries, all her pleasant[4] things that she had in the days of old, when her[u] people fell into the hand of the enemy, and none did help her: the adversaries [v]saw her, and did mock at her sabbaths.

8 Jerusalem[x] hath grievously sinned; [y]therefore she is removed:[5] all that honoured her, despise her, because [z]they have seen her nakedness; yea, she sigheth, and turneth backward.

9 Her[a] filthiness is in her skirts; she [b]remembereth not her last end; therefore she [c]came down wonderfully: [d]she had no comforter. O LORD, behold my affliction; for the enemy hath magnified[e] himself.

10 The adversary [g]hath spread out his hand upon all her pleasant[6] things: for she hath seen that [h]the heathen entered into her sanctuary, whom thou didst command that [i]they should not enter into thy congregation.

[2] Every metaphor calculated to impress the eastern mind with the idea of utter subjection, intense suffering, and humiliating punishment, is here employed by the prophet, to show how fully the divine judgments had been poured out on Israel. In ver.[3] inflammation of the bone is the emblem of the extreme mental anguish; in ver. 14 the yoke on the neck indicates slavery; in ver. 15 the treading in the wine-press shows the crushing tyranny to which the people were exposed by their triumphant oppressors.—P.

13 From [o]above hath he sent fire into my bones, and it prevaileth against them: [p]he hath spread a net for my feet; he hath turned me back; [q]he hath made me desolate and faint all the day.

14 The[r] yoke of my transgressions is bound by his hand; they are wreathed, and come up upon my neck; he hath made my strength to fall; the Lord [s]hath delivered me into their hands, from whom [t]I am not able to rise up.

15 The Lord [u]hath trodden under foot all my mighty men in the midst of me; he hath called an assembly against me to crush my young men: the Lord [v]hath trodden the [1]virgin, the daughter of Judah, as in a wine-press.[2]

CHAPTER I. Ver. 13, 14. By his devouring judgments he has consumed all our strength. He has entangled us so that we cannot escape. He has most furiously debased and destroyed us and all that we had. The punishment and bondage which we undergo for our sins, are bound so fast on us that we cannot shake them off: and our sufferings are so twisted together that we cannot break through them and escape.

Ver. 1. How doth the city sit solitary! When Jerusalem was taken by Titus Vespasian, the Roman emperor had a coin struck, upon which is a palm-tree, the emblem of Judea, and beneath it a solitary woman, the emblem of Jerusalem, sitting with her head leaning sadly upon her hand, with the legend, 'Judea capta.'—How is she become as a widow! Deprived of her earthly king, who is a captive, and rejected, and outcast from her God,—a widow indeed; for 'her Maker was her husband,' Is. 54. 5.—How hath she become tributary! First to Pharaoh-necho, king of Egypt, and now to the emperor of Babylon. C.

Ver. 3. Because of great servitude. As a punishment for her sins in not emancipating her slaves. See Je. 34. 17; Ne. 5. 1-13. And O that slave-holding nations, called Christian, would take warning from the recorded judgments of the slave-holding Jews! C.

Ver. 7. Did mock at her sabbaths. The offence of the Sabbath is not its existence;—for all nations are willing to keep days of rest and festival. Its offence is its strictness, and its religious separation from all unnecessary secular employments and vain amusements. And it is well worthy of remark, that in every effort made for the 'better observance of the Lord's-day,' which is the 'Christian Sabbath,' a system of 'mocking' similar to that of the days of Jeremiah has uniformly been employed as one of the chief weapons of libertine opposition. C.

Ver. 11. Their pleasant things. Their jewels, to which the civilized nations of the East are strongly attached, either as personal ornaments or family relics, and with which they will not part unless in the last extremity of hunger. C.

Ver. 12. All ye that pass by. An appeal to all travellers, whether those who originally visited, or continue to visit, the actual ruins of Jerusalem and Judea, or to those who read at a distance the account of these ruins, either as matter of curiosity, historic research, or prophetical illustration. The parable of the traveller, Lu. 10. 30, who lay plundered, wounded, and half-dead, while the priest, the chief official of mercy, only glances at him, and 'passes by on the other side:' and the Levite, the priest's subordinate agent, 'comes and looks upon him,' and then, like his superior, also 'passes by on the other side,' forms an apt illustration of the grounds of this complaint: and, alas! too true a picture of the cold-blooded charity of the world—a charity which Christianity has done much to vitalize; but which still comes far short of the glory of the living God. C.

Ver. 21. They are glad, &c. To be indifferent to the calamity of my trouble; they [r]are glad that thou hast done it: [s]thou wilt bring the day[8] that thou hast called,[7] and they shall be [t]like unto me.

22 Let[u] all their wickedness come before thee; and do unto them as [v]thou hast done unto me[8] for all my transgressions: for [x]my sighs are many, and my heart is faint.

CHAPTER II.

1 Jeremiah lamenteth the misery of Jerusalem. 20 He complaineth thereof to God.

HOW hath the Lord [a]covered the daughter of Zion with a [b]cloud in his anger, and cast[c] down from heaven unto the earth the beauty[d] of Israel, and remembered not his[1] footstool[2] in the day of his anger!

2 The Lord [e]hath swallowed up all the habitations of Jacob, and hath [g]not pitied: he hath thrown down in his wrath the strong holds of the daughter of Judah; he hath brought them down to[3] the ground: he [h]hath polluted the kingdom and the princes thereof.

3 He hath cut off in his fierce anger [i]all the horn of Israel: he [j]hath drawn back his right hand from before the enemy, and he burned against Jacob like a flaming fire, which devoureth round about.

4 He [k]hath bent his bow like an enemy: he stood with his right hand as an adversary, and slew all that were pleasant to the eye[4] in the tabernacle of the daughter of Zion: he [l]poured out his fury like fire.

5 The Lord was as an enemy; he hath [m]swallowed up Israel, he hath swallowed up all her palaces; he hath destroyed his strong holds, and hath increased in the daughter of Judah mourning and lamentation.

6 And he hath violently taken away[5] his [6]tabernacle,[7] as if it were of a garden; he hath destroyed his places of the assembly: the LORD hath[o] caused the solemn feasts and sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion, and hath despised, in the indignation of his anger, [p]the king and the priest.

7 The[q] Lord hath cast off his altar, he hath [r]abhorred his sanctuary, he hath given up[8] into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces; [9]they have made a noise[1] in the house of the LORD, as in the day of a solemn feast.

8 The LORD [s]hath purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Zion; he hath stretched out a [2]line,[3] he hath not withdrawn his hand from [4]destroying:[5] therefore he made the rampart and the wall to lament;[6] they languished together.

9 Her[t] gates are sunk into the ground;[7] he hath destroyed and broken her bars: [u]her king and her princes are among the Gentiles: [v]the law is no more;[8] her prophets also find no vision from the LORD.

10 The elders of the daughter of Zion [x]sit upon the ground, and keep silence: they have cast up dust upon their heads; they have girded themselves with sackcloth: the virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground.[9]

11 Mine[y] eyes do fail with tears, my bowels are troubled, my [z]liver is poured upon the earth, for the destruction of the daughter of my people; because the children and the sucklings swoon[1] in the streets of the city.

12 They say to their mothers, Where is corn and wine? when they swooned as the wounded in the streets of the city, when their soul was poured out into their mothers' bosom.[2]

13 What[a] thing shall I take to witness for thee? what thing shall I liken to thee, O daughter of Jerusalem? what shall I equal to thee, that I may comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion? for [b]thy breach is great like the sea;[3] who can heal thee?

14 Thy [c]prophets have seen vain and foolish things for thee; and they have not discovered thine iniquity, to turn away thy captivity; but of strangers, careless about relieving friends, and joyous at the fall and distress of enemies, are some of the most common and most decided symptoms of the 'desperate wickedness' of the carnal and unrenewed heart. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how great is the desolation when God withdraws and we are deprived of a magistracy or ministry. Great is the slavery, the sorrow, the contempt, the poverty to which sin brings men. And what neglect, profanation, and derision of everything sacred it occasions! If we wilfully depart from God, the rest of our soul, we must not hope to find rest in anything else. And all afflictions are doubly heavy when we apprehend them coming from an incensed God. Affluence abused is the ready way to pining want: and cruel oppression of others prepares the like misery for ourselves. When sins become numerous and notorious, it is proper that God should rise to punish them. And amidst desolating judgments, nothing is more painful to gracious souls than the violation and contempt of God's ordinances, and the loss of those comforts which they once enjoyed in him and his favours. But it is a mercy that we may apply to him in hope, when all our friends forsake us, and our enemies abuse us. And it is doubly bitter if he then keeps himself at a distance.—But if comforts be withdrawn, children murdered, friends turn enemies or be buried in death, if sword, famine, and pestilence devour, or if enemies insult, it is but the just punishment of our iniquities. No fiery judgments devour, no entangling providences befall, no servitude or misery crushes, but what are all framed out of our own transgressions. Let us therefore always justify God, and blame ourselves: and the more that created friends, confidences, and comforts disappoint us, let us the more earnestly supplicate his favour. A praying heart and a prayer-hearing God will quickly produce the destruction of our enemies and our own deliverance. And after he has glorified himself in our corrections, he will magnify himself in the tremendous ruin of our destroyers.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 13, 14. What can equal your calamity? Your breaches are like those made by the sea, great and incurable. Your prophets of your own choosing, instead of charging your sins faithfully upon you to bring you to repentance, and so prevent those judgments, preached their own flatteries, which hardened you in your sins, and hastened your ruin.

Ver. 1. Cast down from heaven unto the earth. Believers can always say, 'Our conversation (our citizenship) is in heaven.' And this 'conversation,' or citizenship, is twofold—inward, that of faith; outward, that of church-fellowship and enjoyment of ordinances. From this inward citizenship, as a right, the believer is never 'cast down;' but of all its outward benefits, as an enjoyment, he may be, and often is, deprived. But while through all storms the true believer clings to the Saviour by whom he has been 'apprehended,' there are individuals, multitudes, and churches who are judicially 'cast down from heaven unto the earth,' are deprived of church-fellowship and ordinances; because never having had the root of faith, but the mere leaves of profession, they are condemned to wither away as severed branches, and all their 'beauty' perishes. C.

Ver. 2. Swallowed up all the habitations of Jacob. The flood of invasion that in wrath has passed over the land, has swept away in its violence, and 'swallowed up' in its depths, all the habitations, the villages, and cities of the land. See Wylie's Modern Judea, ch. x. C.

Ver. 11. My liver. The learned editor of the Pictorial Bible considers this expression metaphorical, and as used in the same way as the heart is used for the affections of the mind. But there seems no necessity for this figurative sense, for the word 'liver,' may be translated 'bile,' and the expression will import some grievous form of cholera, produced by excessive grief and unwholesome and insufficient food.' See ver. 12; ch. 1. 11. C.

Ver. 16. The causes of this deep-rooted antipathy may have been many, arising from the recollections of the conquests gained over them by David, and from collision of commercial interests, &c. But the chief cause is to be sought in the hatred of the heathen against the religion of the Jews. For while heathenism has generally been tolerant of heathenism, it has uniformly been intolerant of Judaism and Christianity. C.

Ver. 17. He hath caused, &c. God did not efficiently 'cause' the cruel and vengeful disposition of the enemies of Jerusalem; but by his judgments upon her sins, he gave them occasion of joy: and in that sense, but in no other, did he 'cause' them to rejoice. C.

Ver. 19. The top of every street. This expression is used ch. 4. 1; Is. 51. 20; Na. 3. 10, and is, most probably, to be explained by the fact, that Jerusalem was built upon hills, on the tops of which the streets generally terminated in public market-places, or bazaars, whither the children had gone in search of food. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Terrible is the issue when God becomes our enemy and fights against us: and corre-have seen for thee [d]false burdens, and causes of banishment.[4]

15 All that pass by[5] clap[e] their hands at thee; they hiss and wag their head at the daughter of Jerusalem, saying, Is this the city that men call [g]the perfection of beauty, the joy of the whole earth?

16 All thine enemies [h]have opened their mouth against thee: they hiss and gnash the teeth: they say, [i]We have swallowed her up: certainly this is the day that we looked for; we have found, we have seen it.

17 The LORD hath done that which he had devised; [j] he hath fulfilled his word that he had commanded in the days of old: [k]he hath thrown down, and hath not pitied: and [l]he hath caused thine enemy to rejoice over thee; he hath set up the horn of thine adversaries.[6]

18 Their[m] heart cried unto the Lord, [n]O wall of the daughter of Zion, [o]let tears run down like a river day and night: give thyself no rest; let not the apple of thine eye[7] cease.

19 Arise,[q] cry out in the night; in the beginning of the [r]watches [s]pour out thine heart like water before the face of the Lord: lift up thy hands toward him for the life of thy young children, [t]that faint for hunger in the top of every street.

20 ¶ Behold, O LORD, and consider [u]to whom thou hast done this. Shall the women [v]eat their fruit,[8] and children [w]of a span long?[1] shall[x] the priest and the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the Lord?

21 The [y]young and the old lie on the ground in the streets: my virgins and my young men are fallen by the sword; thou hast slain them in the day of thine anger; thou hast killed, and not pitied.

22 Thou hast called, as in a solemn day, my terrors[z] round about; so that in the day of the LORD's anger none escaped nor remained: those that I have swaddled and brought up [a]hath mine enemy consumed.

6 It would seem that by some error of an early copyist the order of ver. 16, 17 has been reversed. That this is shown by the Hebrew letters at the beginning of the verses, each verse in this chapter commencing with a letter of the Hebrew alphabet in regular order. It is also shown by the sense. If ver. 17 be read first, the full force of ver. 16 will become more apparent.—P.

1 'The subject of this elegy,' says Henderson, 'is the personal experience of Jeremiah, on which he expatiates in the most touching strains in order partly to give vent to his own feelings, and partly to excite corresponding emotions in the breasts of his exiled countrymen. From the lively recollections which he had of the severe trials that he had endured in the course of his prophetic ministry, the merciful interpositions of the Lord on his behalf, and the indisputable right of the most High to inflict suffering on sinful men, he proposes himself as an example from which they might receive instruction, and be induced, in the exercise of repentance and prayer, to hope for a restoration from their captivity.' This seems to me to be the true object of this touching elegy.—P.

CHAPTER III.

1 The prophet bewaileth his own calamities; 22 he acknowledgeth God's mercies and truth to be a proper ground of patient hope: 37 he maketh humble confession of the sins which had drawn down God's severe judgments: 55 he prayeth to be avenged of his enemies.

2 He hath led me, and brought me into darkness,[2] but not into light.

3 Surely [b]against me is he turned; he turneth his hand against me all the day.

4 My[c] flesh and my skin hath he made old; he hath broken my bones.

5 He[d] hath builded against me, and compassed me with gall and travail.

6 He[e] hath set me in dark places, as they that be dead of old.

7 He[g] hath hedged me about, that I cannot get out: he hath made my [h]chain heavy.

8 Also [i]when I cry and shout, he shutteth out my prayer.

9 He[j] hath inclosed my ways with hewn stone: he hath made my paths crooked.

10 He[k] was unto me as a bear lying in wait, and as a lion in secret places.

11 He[l] hath turned aside my ways, and pulled me in pieces: he hath made me desolate.

12 He[n] hath bent his bow, and set me as a mark for the arrow.

13 He hath caused the arrows[3] of his quiver to enter into my reins.

14 I[o] was a derision to all my people, and their song all the day.

15 He hath filled me with [4]bitterness, [p]he hath made me drunken with wormwood.[5]

16 He hath also [q]broken my teeth with gravel stones,[6] he hath covered me with[7] ashes.

spondent to the counsels of his heart are the judgments of his hand. Justly he debases by his judgments those who had debased themselves by their sins, and mingles the blood of sinners with their sacrifices; yea, deprives of sabbaths and solemn ordinances those who would not religiously observe them. Grievous sorrows follow upon grievous sinning. And men must either mourn over their sins or over the dreadful effects of them. Alas! what a fearful curse it is to be given up to the delusions of unsent and hypocritical ministers! nor is anything more destructive and damning. It is highly proper, in trouble, to observe the exact agreement between God's judgments and his word; and to ease our broken hearts by pouring our complaints into his bosom. He alone can help us; and none ever truly sought him in vain.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 3, 7, 9, 43, 53. He has so plunged and fixed me in miseries that it is impossible for me to get out; and my attempts to obtain relief do but render me still more and more miserable.—We are quite overwhelmed with trouble, and brought into a most desperate and remediless condition.

Ver. 1. The man. 'The strong, the mighty man.'—An attentive consideration of this chapter will suggest, at least the probability, that it is a prophetic picture of the suffering Messiah, drawn for the instruction of Zion in the duty of humiliation and patience under the hand of the Lord. This interpretation of the chapter is suggested on the following grounds:—(1) The title, which is, literally, 'mighty man.' (2) The fact of his deep afflictions, Col. 4. 24. (3) The cruel mockery of his people, ver. 14; Mat. 27. 29. (4) The gall he gets to drink, Mat. 27. 34. (5) The cheek he turns to the smiter, ver. 30; Jn. 19. 3. (6) His sympathetic weeping, ver. 48. Lu. 19. 41. (7) His assertion that he was persecuted 'without cause,' ver. 52; Jn. 15. 25. (8) His life being 'cut off,' ver. 53, 54; comp. Is. 53. 8. (9) His redemption from death, ver. 58; Ps. 16. 10; Ac. 2. 24–36. (10) His fearless appeal to his judge, ver. 59; Jn. 8. 46; He. 9. 14. (11) The continuous plotting of his enemies, ver. 61, 62. Mat. 2. 16–20; 3. 15. (12) The corresponding language of his companions, the apostles, ver. 45; comp. 1 Co. 4. 13; also Ps. 44. 22, with Ro. 8. 36. (13) The experience of all believers, that the only argument that can reach the judgment or the heart of the afflicted, is derived from a recital and view of the sufferings of Christ, He. 12. 1–3. (14) That Christ and his sufferings are similarly introduced in the Psalms and the Prophets. The only objection to this interpretation arises from comparing ver. 4 with Jn. 19. 36. But the breaking of his bones there denied is the act of his enemies, the breaking in ver. 4 is the act of God: and, when compared with Ps. 51. 8; Is. 38. 13; Je. 50. 17, will be seen to be the emblem of extreme affliction, such as our Lord endured when he 'bore our griefs and carried our sorrows, was wounded for our transgressions, and bruised for our iniquities.'—C.

Ver. 27. The yoke. 'Afflictions' (Aben Ezra). It is rather the yoke of willing service, Mat. 11. 29, 30, which the believer puts on when he acknowledges Jesus to be Master and King: and in which service afflictions may be, and generally are, more or less included.—Note, There are many blessings attendant upon early conversion, such as, (1) The follies of youth, and sins of riper years, which it prevents. (2) The many bitter weepings which are prevented by preservation from these follies. (3) The blessings to others which the instruction and example of early piety so frequently conveys. (4) The blessed hope which it works in the believer's own experience of continued mercy, Ps. 77. 6; Ro. 5. 4. (5) The continued opportunities which it furnishes, when days are lengthened, for glorifying God in the various periods or relations of life; and (6) The nearer resemblance to Christ into which it brings the believer.—Note, Let the aged sinner know that it is never too late—but, let the youthful remember, it is never too early—to believe and turn to the Lord. C.

Ver. 35. The verse condemns all oppression wherein men take advantage either of the mere letter or imperfection of a human law to inflict an injury in the name of law, and as in the presence of 'the most High,' by whom kings reign and princes decree justice. C.

Ver. 39. Wherefore doth a living man complain? Seeing the chief blessing, life, is still continued; and seeing that afflictions are intended for correction, why should man murmur at what he either wants or suffers? Why should the sick man reject the medicine, or accuse the Physician of cruelty? Is. 45. 7; Am. 3. 6; He. 12. 6. C.

Ver. 51. Mine eye affecteth mine heart. What my eye sees 'preys upon my heart.'—Note, Fools make a mock, a sport, a jest, an entertainment of sin: but the eye that sees sin as Jesus saw it—as God sees it—must often weep as Jesus wept. C.

Ver. 64–66. That ver. 64–66 may be rendered in the future, as 20 My soul hath them still in remembrance, and is humbled[1] in me.

21 This[v] I recall to my mind,[2] therefore[3] have[w] I [4]hope.[5]

22 ¶ It[x] is of the LORD's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not.

23 They are [z]new every morning: great is thy [a]faithfulness.

24 The LORD is [b]my portion, saith my soul; therefore will I [c]hope in him.

25 The[d] LORD is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him.

26 It[e] is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the LORD.

27 It[g] is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth.

28 He[h] sitteth alone and keepeth silence, because he hath borne it upon him.

29 He[i] putteth his mouth in the dust; if so be there may be hope.

30 He[j] giveth his cheek to him that smiteth him: he is filled full with reproach.

31 For[k] the Lord will not cast off for ever:

32 But though [h]he cause grief, yet will he have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies.

33 For[m] he doth not afflict [6]willingly,[7] nor grieve the children of men.

34 To[o] crush[8] under his feet all the prisoners of the earth,

35 To[p] turn aside the right of a man before the face of the Most High,[9]

36 To subvert a man in his cause, the Lord approveth not.[1]

37 ¶ Who[q] is he that saith, and it cometh to pass, when the Lord commandeth it not?

38 Out[r] of the mouth of the Most High proceedeth not evil and good?[2]

39 Wherefore doth a living man complain,[3] a man for the punishment of his sins?

40 Let[s] us search and try our ways, and turn again to the LORD.

41 Let[t] us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens.

42 We[u] have transgressed and have rebelled: thou[v] hast not pardoned.

* The transition from the despondency which is the usual consequent of intense suffering and persecution, to faith and hope, is here very striking and instructive. The moment the prophet takes a right and full view of himself—of the utter sinfulness of his own heart, he feels conscious that great as his sufferings have been, they have been yet far less than he deserved. He is therefore forced to exclaim, 'It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed'—utterly and finally cut off; and this feeling then becomes the basis of hope.—P.

1 The lesson here taught is very cheering. Afflictions are sent until the soul is thoroughly humbled, until it is brought to feel and acknowledge its utter vileness and helplessness—then the moment it turns to God in penitence and faith, seeking pardon, acceptance, and help, that moment the rod is removed, and blessings begin to flow from the fountain of divine mercy. —P.

declaratory and not imprecatory, is certain; but similar scriptures quoted from the Old into the New Testament, being thus rendered into the Greek, which does not admit the uncertainty of the Hebrew (see Ps. 69. 25; 109. 8; comp. with Ac. 1. 20), seem to require the authorized version to be retained, on the sound principle of analogy, and to call for exposition, rather than authorize escape from an apparent difficulty or objection. See for this exposition, and defence of similar prayers, Ps. 5. 10; 35. 8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How tremendous are the fatherly corrections of JEHOVAH! and very criminal must be the sins which so provoke him against the objects of his love. The children of light, and heirs of joy, sometimes walk in the greatest darkness of calamity and grief, and even despondency: and many and diversified are God's arrows of affliction, flying swift and piercing deep. But if men will walk in crooked paths of iniquity, it is but just that God should cross their designs and break their measures; and if they will regard iniquity, it is just in him to shut out their prayers, than which few things are more galling to a gracious heart.—Saints can never enter the lowest hell, being preserved by grace: but by multiplied troubles from God, from devils, and from men, they may have a hell upon earth. Yet God will deliver his people and churches in due time, when they are thoroughly melted and purified in his furnace. In their worst cases they are neither helpless nor hopeless. Let us therefore always acknowledge him kind and faithful. If our troubles be heavy and sharp, let us eagerly claim and live upon him as our portion, and comfort ourselves with his compassion, and with a persuasion that all he does is the fulfilment of his gracious Word, on which he has caused us to hope. Let us complain to God, but never complain against him. And let us earnestly work together with God, and labour to promote the same self-debasing and soul-sanctifying ends. Experience of former kindness should encourage us to hope for more. And having cast our burdens on the Lord, we should continue waiting instant and patient in prayer; and at last we shall find an answer of peace. There is no prison so deep or dark but God can bring us out of it; no enemy so strong but God can destroy; and no request of faith so silent but he will hear it for our good. But woe to those, however powerful, haughty, merry, or scornful, against whom God's favourites plead! And think, my soul, what of all these troubles Jesus underwent—in infinite love underwent—and all for me!

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 13–15. Their priests and prophets have persecuted the Lord's prophets, and have ruined the nation by flattering them in their sins. They formerly wandered from God's law in acts of violence and murder, and now they cannot walk in the streets without polluting themselves by dead bodies.—Yea, every one, even the heathens, abhor them as unclean lepers, or persons too despicable to live on the earth.

Ver. 3. Sea-monsters. The word so translated is a general name for all large and cruel animals, whether of the land or water. Among sea-animals the phocæ are remarkable for maternal tenderness; amongst land-animals, the bear. So wonderfully has God distributed these preservative instincts amongst

CHAPTER IV.

HOW is [a]the gold become dim! how is the most fine gold changed! the [b]stones of the sanctuary [c]are poured out in the top of every street.[1]

2 The[d] precious sons[2] of Zion, comparable to fine [e]gold, how are they esteemed as earthen pitchers, the work of the hands of the potter!

3 Even the sea-monsters[3] draw out the breast, they give suck to their young ones: [g]the daughter of my people is become cruel, [h]like the ostriches in the wilderness.

4 The[i] tongue of the sucking child cleaveth to the roof of his mouth for thirst; the young children ask bread, and [j]no man breaketh it unto them.

5 They that did feed delicately are [k]desolate in the streets; they that were brought up in scarlet [l]embrace dunghills.[4]

6 For the punishment of the iniquity[5] of the daughter of my people [m]is greater[6] than the punishment of the sin of Sodom, that was overthrown as in a moment,[7] and no hands stayed on her.

7 Her Nazarites[8] were purer than snow, they were whiter than milk, they were more ruddy in body than rubies, their polishing was of sapphire:

8 Their[o] visage is blacker than a coal;[9] they are not known in the streets:[1] their[p] skin cleaveth to their bones; [q]it is withered, it is become like a stick.

9 They that be slain with the sword are better than they that be slain with hunger: for these pine away,[2] stricken through for want of the fruits of the field.

10 The[r] hands of the pitiful women have sodden their own children: they were their meat in the destruction of the daughter of my people.

13 For[t] the sins of her prophets, and the iniquities of her priests, that [u]have shed the blood of the just in the midst of her,

14 They have [v]wandered as blind[5] men in the streets, they have polluted themselves with blood, so that [x]men could not touch[6] their garments.

15 They cried unto them, Depart ye; it is unclean;[7] depart, depart, touch not: when they fled away and wandered, they said among the heathen, [y]They shall no more sojourn there.[8]

16 The anger[9] of the LORD [z]hath divided them; he will no more regard them: [a]they respected not the persons of the priests, they favoured not the elders.

17 As for us, [b]our eyes as yet failed for our vain help: in our watching we have watched for a nation that could not save us.[1]

the lower creatures; which here serve as a lesson of reproof to man their appointed ruler.—Cruel, like the ostriches in the wilderness. On the least noise (says Dr. Shaw) or trivial occasion, the ostrich forsakes her eggs or her young ones, to which, perhaps, she never returns; or if she does, it may be too late to restore life to the one, or preserve it to the others. The Arabs often meet with a few of the little ones, half-starved, straggling and moaning about, like so many distressed orphans, for their mother. C.

Ver. 7. Nazarites. The word either applies to those who were separated to God by a religious vow, Nu. 6. 2–20, or who are separated from their brethren by providential occurrences, Ge. 49. 26. The tenor of the description here would seem to refer it to those who were separated from their brethren by elevated rank. C.

Ver. 13. Iniquities of her priests. The priests, who should have been the ministers of mercy and justice, were the principal persecutors of Jeremiah, Je. 20. 1. Their successors were afterwards the chief persecutors of Christ, Mat. 27. 1. Again, the heathen priests and their satellites were the persecutors of the apostles and the primitive church, Ac. 4. 1–3. And finally, the priests of Rome were, and have been, the persecutors of the fathers and continuators of the blessed Reformation. C.

Ver. 16. The Lord hath divided them: he will no more regard them. How does this consist with the opinion of a Jewish restoration to Canaan? Perfectly. JEHOVAH 'will no more regard them' as a people—the restoration will be of the 'remnant according to the election of grace,' from whom the nation will be reconstructed, 2 Ki. 19. 31; 2 Ch. 30. 6; Ezr. 9. 8; Is. 11. 11–16; Je. 23. 3; Eze. 6. 8; Ro. 9. 27; 11. 5.—They respected not, &c. Who? Either the false prophets and their partisans, who respected not the true prophets and elders, ver. 13, 14, or the heathen nations among whom the people were scattered, ver. 15, who despised their persons, office, and religion. C.

Ver. 20. Under his shadow, &c. Either among the heathen that were now, to a considerable extent, commingled with them in the land, and most probably in possession of their principal garrisons; or among the surrounding heathen nations, from whose aggressions they expected Zedekiah's policy, and conformity with heathenism, 2 Ch. 36. 14, would preserve them, or from whose power they expected his arm might deliver them, 2 Ch. 36. 13. C.

Ver. 21. Rejoice and be glad, O daughter of Edom. This is commonly interpreted as an irony; but such a figure seems very inconsistent with the serious and melancholy mood of the prophet's mind. Is it not rather a call to the representative of the 'widows' and 'fatherless children' of Edom, whom God promised to 'preserve' amidst the ruin of their country, Je. 49. 11, to 'rejoice' sympathetically and sincerely at the accomplished punishment of Zion, ver. 21, and that blessed restoration from which she will never more be carried into captivity, see ver. 22; intimating, that though Edom will never be restored as a nation, her 'daughter' will rejoice as a participator in the blessings of Zion? C.

REFLECTIONS.—When God forsakes a people, their honour leaves them. And if rulers will not act for God, it is but just that he should make them contemptible. They who live in the greatest plenty and pomp know not to what straits they may be reduced before they die. And delicate and high living renders hardships doubly grievous when they come to be experienced. God's judgment on his own people often astonishes his and their enemies. And scarcely ever does the judgment of God light upon nations and churches without clerical wickedness having a distinguished share in procuring it. No wonder then that the very monsters of wickedness at last contemn and abhor unfaithful ministers. There is no escaping from the judgment of God appointed for us. If we make creatures our trust, or the breath of our nostrils, God, who is our life, will confound them, and disappoint us.

A pitiful complaint of Zion in prayer unto God.

REMEMBER,[a] O LORD, what is come upon us: consider, and behold our reproach.

2 Our inheritance is [b]turned to strangers, our houses to aliens.

3 We are [c]orphans and fatherless, our mothers are as widows.

4 We[d] have drunken our water for money: our wood is sold[1] unto us.

5 Our[e] necks are under [2]persecution: [g]we labour, and have no rest.

6 We have given the [3]hand[4] to the Egyptians, and to the Assyrians, to be satisfied with bread.

7 Our[h] fathers have sinned, and [i]are not; and we have borne their iniquities.

8 Servants[j] have ruled over us: there is none that doth deliver us out of their hand.

9 We gat our bread [k]with the peril of our lives, because of the sword of the [5]wilderness.[6]

Yet the troubles of the godly will continue no longer than till they have accomplished the purification intended by them. But such as ridicule and insult Jesus Christ and his people or ordinances, will at last render themselves ridiculous and miserable. And in the end their sin shall be discovered and punished, however secret and hidden.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 4. Our water. The primitive history of Israel is much connected with wells, as may be seen in the history of Abraham, some of whose chief movements are associated with their names. See Ge. 21. 25, 30; 24. 13; 26. 15, 18. And the bringing of water into Jerusalem by conduits has not been thought unworthy of a place in the history of Israel's kings, 2 Ki. 20. 20; 2 Ch. 32. 30. The buying of the water of their fathers' wells seemed, therefore, to Israel, a grievous act of usurpation and oppression. It is clear the reference must be to a Chaldean impost upon the water in Jerusalem; for when carried away, the captives 'sat by the streams of Babel,' and had water in abundance.—Our wood. The Jews allege an ordinance of Joshua rendering certain forests common property, where all might cut such wood as they required for fuel; and such a law or custom prevails in all woody and thinly peopled countries, where the export of timber is not a trade, and where the clearing of the land for pasture or tillage is a principal object of the owner. The invaders, however, took exclusive possession of the forests. See Ne. 2. 8. C.

Ver. 7. How does this accord with Eze. 18. 1–28? The persons reproved by Ezekiel justified themselves, and cast the blame of their sufferings back upon their fathers. The confession of Jeremiah justified God, ch. 1. 18–20; 3, 37–42, and acknowledged that the accumulating sins of former ages had now come to such a crisis that mercy could no longer delay the hand of judgment. See ver. 16. C.

Ver. 18. The foxes walk upon it. The Scottish Deputation to Palestine (for inquiring into the state, and taking measures for the enlightenment and conversion, of the Jews) witnessed this fact in 1840; where they also found 'Zion ploughed like a field,' Je. 26. 18; Mi. 3. 12, and brought with them specimens of the barley that grew on the site of her palaces and towers. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! what hurt sin has done! through it this world is but a scene of awful changes! And peculiarly terrible is the misery of ravaged and conquered nations. But under all our trouble, it is a comfort to reflect that God sees all that comes upon us; and that, if we patiently and penitently suffer for the sins of our fathers, he will quickly return to us in mercy: yea, there is a Canaan above, of which none can deprive us; and though God frown, he will not forget us. If our earthly provision be scanty, our abundant spiritual provision can more than balance its defects; and if the Son has made us free, we shall be free indeed; yea, honoured, glad, and glorious for evermore. If the honour of his oracles and ordinances on earth go nearer our heart than our secular interests, he will quickly transport us to his sanctuary above, where we shall be ever with the Lord. His mercy may be hid, but it is not clean gone; and there is enough in it to redress all our grievances. If by his grace he renew our hearts, he will by his favour renew our days and restore our wonted prosperity. Let me therefore, under my afflictions, complain to, and plead with, my God; but never quarrel with his conduct, discredit his love, or despair of his favours.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF LAMENTATIONS.

For every possible circumstance of human life, the Scriptures seem to furnish, not merely a text, or a portion, but an entire book: Genesis furnishes genealogy; Exodus, emigration; Leviticus, religious rites; Numbers, organization; Deuteronomy, such repetition, explanation, and commentary, as the frailty of humanity requires; Joshua, conquest and government; Judges, a country often falling into sin and thraldom, but struggling for independence; Ruth, special providence; Samuel, the influence of a pious maternal education on the prophet and judge; the evil of an ungoverned temper in Saul; the blessing of self-restraint (not from himself arising, but from providence and grace) in David; Kings and Chronicles, a mirror for kings and nations; Ezra and Nehemiah, mirrors for patriotic reformers; Esther, a mirror for queens; Job, for men in adversity; Psalms, a mirror for hearts; Proverbs, mirror for parents in the work of private education; Ecclesiastes, for preachers in the work of public instruction; the Song of Solomon, for husbands and wives; Isaiah, reproof and encouragement for the church; Jeremiah, warning to the state; Lamentations, the sorrows of God's people for both church and state overturned by national sins.

It were easy to pursue such specialities to 'Revelation,' of which the particular object is to place and preserve the church in her proper attitude of prayer and watchfulness until the coming of her Lord. But it is needful to forbear.

'Wicked men and seducers wax worse and worse.' And so do nations, when any evil principle or object, such as profanity, sabbath desecration, licentiousness, covetousness, hasting to be rich, or lust of power and conquest, take possession of rulers or people. And so likewise do churches degenerate, when, under the specious pretence of 'free inquiry,' a false philosophy supersedes revelation—when a partial morality is substituted for universal holiness—a cold formality, for fervent devotion—when a sordid worldliness controls liberality, and an indulgent luxury banishes self-denial—when the love of ease, and the lust of power, combine to 'lay heavy (ritual) burdens upon men's shoulders,' but 'refuse to touch them with one of their fingers'—when Christ is followed, not for the 'miracles' he has performed, but for the 'loaves and fishes' he owns and distributes—when profession is all, and practice nothing; and finally, when obedience to the church is substituted for allegiance to her King, then may God spare for a little, amidst many warnings—but such 'vessels of wrath' are fitting themselves for destruction, and judgment is whetting its sword to begin at the house of the Lord.

In all such melancholy cases of defection, there is generally, however, a remnant 'that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that are done in the land:' and who live to lament over the ruin they have foreseen, and against the coming of which they vainly lifted up the voice of expostulation or warning. Such was Jeremiah. In the midst of a demoralized state, he warned kings and nobles, and lived to see and weep over their fall. In the midst of a heretical and idolatrous priesthood, he continued to preach JEHOVAH, to denounce idolatry, and to exhort to repentance; and he lived to see the vessels of the holy temple, which its priests had profaned, transferred to the temple of Bel, and the temple of Jerusalem itself reduced to the ruin he had foretold. And his book of Lamentations remains as the manual of sorrows uttered over a state misgoverned, impoverished, and ruined, by self-sufficient, covetous, and oppressive rulers—and a church infected, misled, and betrayed, by an immoral, heretical, and time-serving ministry. C.

EZEKIEL.

Ezekiel was also a priest: and prophesied among the captives in Chaldea while Jeremiah prophesied in Judea and Egypt. His predictions, especially the and first last nine chapters, are extremely figurative. But if we search them with reverence, humility, and diligence, we may from them find much encouragement to our faith and hope in God; even as in natural things we may reap much benefit from those, the nature, connections, and influences of which we do not well understand. We have in them (1) His divine call to his prophetical office, i.–iii. (2) His visions and messages of reproof and threatening to the Jews, iv.–xxiv. xxxiii. (3) His predictions of ruin to the enemies of the Jews; particularly the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Philistines, Tyrians, Egyptians, and Turks, xxv.–xxxii. xxxv. xxxviii. xxxix. (4) Promises of mercy to the Jews after their captivity in Babylon and their present dispersion; which are likewise typical of the glorious privileges of the gospel church, xxxiv. xxxvi.–xlviii.

[Ezekiel and Jeremiah were both priests; were contemporaries, and prophesied mostly of the same events. Ezekiel, however, was carried captive to Babylon, and dwelt on the banks of the Chebar, a tributary of the Euphrates. Jeremiah remained in Judea, so that, in each country, God had his faithful witness. The prophecies of Ezekiel extend to a wide field, including not merely the Jews, but also the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Philistines, Tyrians, Egyptians, and the northern nations, governed by Gog, designated the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal. Like the other prophets, he sets forth under various emblems the times and the glories of Messiah. He began to prophesy in the fifth year of his captivity, and continued in the faithful discharge of his duties for about twenty years. C.

Ezekiel was among the captives taken to Babylon with Jehoiachin in B.C. 599, when Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem and carried away the treasures of the temple. His residence was at Tell Abib, on the banks of the river Chebar, in Mesopotamia. His prophetic mission began in the fifth year of his captivity (B.C. 594), and continued, so far as we have any record, to the twenty-seventh year (see ch. 29. 17). Ezekiel was a priest, and had studied deeply the ritualistic and symbolic lore of his people. He also appears to have been minutely acquainted with the sacred rites and strange idolatry of those among whom he dwelt. His brilliant imagination was thus prepared for decking his prophetic visions in a gorgeous symbolism without parallel elsewhere in Scripture. The events of his life are unknown, and we have no record of the date or manner of his death. P.]

NOW it came to pass in the thirtieth [1]year,[2] in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month, as [a]I was among the captives[3] by the river of [b]Chebar;[4] that [c]the heavens were opened, and [d]I saw visions of God.

2 In the fifth day of the month, which was the[e] fifth year[5] of king Jehoiachin's captivity,

3 The[g] word of the LORD came expressly unto Ezekiel[6] the priest, the son of Buzi, [h]in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chebar; and the[i] hand of the LORD was there upon him.[7]

4 ¶ And I looked, and behold, a [j]whirlwind came out of the north, [k]a great cloud, and a fire infolding[8] itself, and a brightness was about it, and out of the midst thereof as [l]the colour of amber, out of the midst of the fire.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 4–15. These living creatures may denote angels, as ministering in the dispensations of Providence, and ministers, as serving in the church. Their being living, denotes their own life and liveliness, and the quickening influence of their work: their being four, denotes their sufficiency for all the ends of the earth, and under all the empires of it; their four faces —viz. of a man, denotes their wisdom, prudence, and tender compassion;—of a lion, their courage, boldness, and might;—of an ox, their indefatigable labour and patience;—of an eagle, their clear and piercing knowledge, high contemplations, and holy affections. Their four wings, covering their bodies, stretched upwards, and joined to their fellows, denote their diligence, speedy success, consciousness of their own infirmities, and mutual harmony and love. Their straight feet, like those of a calf, and sparkling, denote their upright, steady, persevering, pure, and glorious ministrations and behaviour. Their many hands under their wings, denote their great but prudently directed and humble activity in their whole work. Their fiery appearance, denotes their ardent love and holy zeal. The Spirit moving among them, denotes the Holy Ghost as calling them and qualifying them for, and directing and actuating them in, their work; and all directed by the voice of the Almighty, who is enthroned in heaven. 15–25. The four wheels, with four faces each, and coloured like beryl, mysterious in their form, dreadfully high in their rings, full of eyes, and moved by the living creatures straight forward, may denote the manifold, precious, glorious, mysterious, dreadful, wise, and prudent providences of God, perseveringly, self-consistently, and righteously conducted by the ministration of angels in all parts of the world: or they may denote the churches of Christ, mysterious in their form, uniform in their appearances, perseveringly advancing to the everlasting state, precious and shining in their oracles, ordinances, and true members, fearing God, and dreadful to their enemies, intelligent, prudent, and watchful, and directed and actuated by the Spirit of God, through the instrumentality of ministers, according to the word of an enthroned Redeemer. 26–28. This man, amber-coloured, and fiery in appearance, enthroned in heaven over the wheels and animals, and encircled with a rainbow, represents Jesus Christ, in our nature, as terrible to his enemies, but full of love to and zeal for his people, exalted to his Father's right hand, to be the Head and Director of angels and ministers, and ever attending to and administering the covenant of grace to the world.

Ver. 4. A whirlwind is the emblem of speedy judgment and total ruin, Job 11.9. The north, the seat of the invading nations. The cloud, the fire, and the brightness, are the same emblems of divine presence, energy, and judgment that appeared on Sinai; indicating that the same God was present to inflict deserved punishment upon the rebellious transgressors of his law and the idolatrous apostates from his worship. C.

Ver. 5. Four living creatures. As 'seven' is the emblem of perfection originating in time and work, so 'four' is the four[x] had the face of a man, and the face of a lion on the right side; and they four had the face of an ox on the left side; they four also had the face of an eagle.[2]

11 Thus were their faces: and their wings were[y] stretched upward;[3] two wings of every one were joined one to another, and two [z]covered their bodies.

12 And [a]they went every one straight forward: [b]whither the spirit was to go, they went; and they turned not when they went.

13 As for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was [c]like burning coals of fire, and like the appearance of lamps: [d]it went up and down among the living creatures; and the fire was bright, and out of the fire went forth lightning.

14 And the living creatures [e]ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning.

15 Now, as I beheld the living creatures, behold, [g]one wheel[4] upon[h] the earth by the living creatures, with his [i]four faces.

16 The appearance of the wheels[5] and their work was like unto [j]the colour of a beryl; and they four [k]had one likeness: and their appearance and their work was as it were [l]a wheel in the middle of a wheel.

17 When they went, they went upon their four sides; and [m]they turned not when they went.

18 As for their rings, [o]they were so high that they were dreadful; and their rings[6] were [p]full of eyes round about them four.

19 And[q] when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them; and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up.

20 Whithersoever[r] the spirit was to go,[7] they went, thither was their spirit to go; and the wheels were lifted up over against them: for [s]the spirit of the living creature[8] was in the wheels.

21 When[t] those went, these went; and when those stood, these stood; and when those were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit of the living creature[9] was in the wheels.

22 And[u] the likeness of the firmament upon the heads of the living creature was as the colour of the [v]terrible crystal, stretched forth [w]over their heads above.

23 And under the firmament were [y]their wings straight, the one toward the other: [z]every one had two, which covered on this side, and every one had two, which covered on that side, their bodies.

24 And when they went, [a]I heard [b]the noise of their wings, like the noise of great waters, as the [c]voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, as the noise of an [d]host: when they [e]stood, they let down their wings.

25 And there was [g]a voice[1] from the firmament that was over their heads, when they stood, and had let down their wings.

26 ¶ And above the firmament that was [h]over their heads was the likeness of [i]a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire stone: and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness as the appearance of [j]a man[2] above upon it.

* The student of Assyrian antiquities cannot fail to observe in the cherubim here described by the prophet a general resemblance to those remarkable sculptures recently excavated from the mounds of Nineveh and Babylon. The details differ, but the general features are the same. We have on those sculptures four distinct faces as here:—the face of a man, of a lion, of a bull, and of an eagle. We have also the wings, and the 'straight feet,' like a calf's feet. All these were no doubt symbolical, but the symbolism was borrowed from that which was known to the Assyrians. God's universal sovereignty & omnipotent power were represented. The head of man symbolized intellect and rule over all rational beings; the lion, as king of wild beasts, symbolized God's rule over them; the ox over domestic animals; and the eagle over the fowls of heaven.—P.

of perfection originating in place and form. See Ge. 2. 10; Ex. 27. 1; De. 22. 12; 1 Ki. 6. 33; Eze. 37. 9; Da. 7. 2; Mat. 24. 31; Re. 7. 1; 21. 16. The other applications of the term seem all derivable from this original.—Living creatures, to distinguish them from agents of judgment by natural laws—as famine, pestilence, drought, &c.—Likeness of a man. Beings intelligent, but passionate. C.

Ver. 6. Four faces. The principal organs of sense being situated in the face, and these being the chief servants of the intellect, 'four faces' indicate perfection of the senses and understanding.—Wings, emblems of celerity in fulfilling the divine will. C.

Ver. 7. Straight feet—indicating straightness in the way of obedience. See Jos. 6. 5; 1 Sa. 6. 12; Is. 40. 3; Je. 31. 9.—A calf's foot—indicative of youth, of ceremonial cleanness, of suitableness for sacrifice, Le. 9. 2, and promise of growth, Mal. 4. 2.—Burnished brass—indicative of strength and splendour. C.

Ver. 9. Wings joined. Perfect consent of spirit, and unity of effort.—They needed not to 'turn;' having every one four faces, they lost no time in preparing for action; no enemy could come behind them. God's providential purposes cannot be eluded. C.

Ver. 10. A man—intellect with passion.—A lion—strength and readiness to assail, 2 Sa. 1. 23; Ps. 7. 2.—An ox—labour, productiveness, De. 25. 4; Pr. 14. 4.—An eagle—soaring aloft, yet finding the prey, Is. 4. 31; Mat. 24. 28. C.

Ver. 17. Went upon their four sides. All moving together, by one consent and energy.—Turned not—to mark that God is never turned back from his purposes of grace or judgment. C.

Ver. 18. Their rings were so high. The designs of Providence are vast; reaching not merely from earth, but from hell to heaven, from everlasting to everlasting.—Full of eyes. No events dependent upon blind chance: all guided by certain foreknowledge and unerring design. C.

Ver. 20. The living God guides the spirit of the obedient, and controls and restrains the spirit of the refractory and rebellious, and so directs every movement of providence, according to the counsel of his sovereign and gracious will. C.

Ver. 22. To denote the inferiority of all agents to God, the firmament is 'upon their heads.' Terrible crystal—dazzling the eyes with its lustre, and so 'terrible' to the weakness of the organ. In this sense the sun is 'terrible.' But nothing is so terrible as to gaze upon the wheel of Providence reaching from the lowest hell to the highest heaven, and the firmament of his power over the heads of all his creatures, and the wonders of his omnipresence whereby, while here on earth, he is yet exalted 'far above the heavens.' C.

Ver. 23. Covered their bodies. When the purpose of Providence is most rapidly in progress, from the eyes of worldly men the agent is totally hid: and when they search for the origin of their disasters, even the true second causes they seldom discover; and the great cause of all—God judging them for their sins—the blindness of their eyes, and the hardness of their hearts, will not permit them to see. C.

Ver. 24. When a providential work is accomplished his servants have rest: Stephen 'fell asleep' in Jesus: when Paul had 'finished his course' he saw the crown waiting for him in the hand of his Lord. C.

Ver. 27. The appearance of fire. The manifested baptism of the Holy Ghost with fire, Mat. 4. 11; which baptism is seen perfect in Christ, from whom it is dispensed in measure to his disciples, Jn. 3. 34; 1 Co. 12. 11. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Wherever God has a people he will find ministers for them. And there is great need that these should have a clear and distinct call from him to their work, considering the important dangers attending, and the awful issues and accounts thereof. All discoveries of God ought to fill our minds with deep awe and reverence of him. May I then, like these living creatures, be endowed with the Holy Ghost, filled with spiritual knowledge and prudence, and be uniformly active and upright in the Lord's way; always under his direction and influence, and making my light so to shine before men as that they may see my good works, and glorify my Father which is in heaven. However strange and intricate the form of ordinances, churches, and providences be, let me revere them, as framed and managed by God for his own glory; and always look, above all, to his infinitely glorious self, particularly as manifested in my nature, and the Lamb as it had been slain in the midst of the throne.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1–6. The title son of man, so often given to Ezekiel, and sometimes to Daniel, who also prophesied in Chaldea, might be given them to render them humble under their enjoyment of so many divine visions: or as an honourable representation of them as types of the Son of God in our nature. And the Jews are called briers, thorns, and scorpions, to represent what cursed, mischievous, malignant, subtle, fierce, frowning, venomous, and murderous persecutors they would be to him.

Ver. 1. Son of man. This title is peculiar to Ezekiel and Daniel; and, according to the Hebrew rabbis, it was intended to remind them of their frailty, that they were but men, and not angels. C.

Ver. 6. Briers and thorns. What specific plants are meant it is impossible to determine. The general use of the words translared 'briers and thorns' leaves, however, no doubt that they are some of the many prickly plants with which many parts of Asia and Africa abound. 'One of the inconveniences,' says a learned traveller, 'of the vegetable thickets of Egypt is, that it is difficult to remain in them, seeing nine-tenths of the trees and plants art armed with inexorable thorns, which suffer only an unquiet enjoyment of the shadow.' The 'brier and thorn' are memorials of the curse originally pronounced upon the earth because of sin Ge. 3. 18; He. 6. 8.—Scorpions. According to some authorities the name is derived from two words that signify 'father-killer;' and Pliny informs us that it is the property of the young scorpions to slay their parents. Parkhurst derives it from two words that signify to squeeze or pinch violently, as the creature is armed with forceps, and takes a violent hold. It is a small but very venomous animal, having a poisonous sting in its tail. It is an animal of a very hideous appearance; and, from its aspect and poisonous properties, furnishes an awful emblem of a malignant people. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Ministers had need always to keep in view their own infirmities, as well as the dignity of their office; and the Spirit of God must enable them to receive as well as to declare their instructions. Alas! how fast men's wickedness cleaves to them under the heaviest afflictions! God exactly knows what men are and will be, and what entertainment his Word and ordinances will get among them. And marvellous is his patience and pity in using all common methods to reform the most stubborn. And if ministers preach by his commission, and in his authority, whether men be edified or not, he will be glorified by appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness round about.

SITE OF THE ACADEMY—WHERE PLATO HAD VISIONS THE TRUEST EVER RECORDED OUTSIDE OF THOSE INSPIRED BY THE SPIRIT OF GOD. [EZEKIEL, i.]—The first chapter of Ezekiel opens with a glorious vision of God. Ezekiel was among the captives, and exiled from his native land in a strange, depressing atmosphere, and yet we have evidences throughout his work of his deep spiritual insight. The book of Ezekiel may be called a song which the poet learned in sorrow. In some respects his work is the most imaginative and remarkable in the Scripture. We give a picture above of the site of the Academy where another seer lived and taught. It was amid the olive groves of the Academy that Plato had his visions of God, and which are nearer to those of the prophets than any others that ever took form among heathen writers. When Ezekiel was writing by the river Chebar in Babylon, Solon introduced a new standard of coinage in Athens whereby he reduced debts secured by mortgage 27 per cent. It is an interesting fact thus to know that Ezekiel the seer and Solon the wise man of Greece lived and wrought in the same age of the world's history.

28 As[l] the appearance of the bow[3] that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about. This was the appearance of the [n]likeness of the glory of the LORD. And when I saw it, I [o]fell upon my face, and [p]I heard a voice of one that spake.

CHAPTER II.

1 Ezekiel's commission. 6 His instructions. 9 The roll of heavy judgments spread before him.

AND he said unto me, [a]Son of man, stand upon[b] thy feet, and I will speak unto thee.

2 And the [c]spirit[4] entered into me when he spake unto me, and [d]set me upon my feet, that I heard him that spake unto me.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, [e]I send thee to the children of Israel, to a [g]rebellious nation[2] that hath rebelled against me: they and their fathers have transgressed against me, even unto this very day.

4 For they are impudent[3] children, and stiff-hearted. I do [h]send thee unto them; and thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD.

5 And they, [i]whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear, (for they are a rebellious house,) yet [j]shall know that there hath been a prophet among them.

6 ¶ And thou, son of man, [k]be not afraid of them, neither be afraid of their words, though briers[4] and thorns be [l]with thee, and thou dost dwell among scorpions: [m]be not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house.

7 And[o] thou shalt speak my words unto them, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear; for they are most rebellious.[5]

8 But thou, son of man, hear what I say unto thee; [p]Be not thou rebellious like that rebellious house: open thy mouth, and eat[6] that I give thee.

9 ¶ And when I looked, behold, [q]an hand was sent unto me; and, lo, a [r]roll of a book was therein.

10 And he [s]spread it before me; and it was written[t] within and without; and there was written therein [u]lamentations, and mourning, and woe.[7]

7 It must be borne in mind that the language of Ezekiel is highly symbolical. His figures are bolder even than those of any of the other prophets. The 'roll' symbolized the divine revelation made to the prophet. That revelation was an almost continual recital of judgment about to be inflicted upon the Jews. The eating of the roll symbolized a full comprehension of the revelation by the prophetic mind, and the command, 'Be not thou rebellious,' indicates the necessity laid upon him faithfully to deliver and record the whole revelation—not to withhold a single word, not to modify a single expression, through fear or favour. The history of the past, and perhaps also his own experience, told him how dangerous was his mission, and how much enmity and persecution his words were calculated to excite among his infatuated countrymen; but in the face of all this he must fulfil his appointed work.—P.

6 It will be observed how entirely the prophet was an instrument—a rational, willing, and accountable instrument it is true—in the hand of Jehovah. The Spirit commissioned him, strengthened him, revealed to him the whole substance of the message he was to deliver, put the very words into his mouth, and here wafted him away to his work. The power which operated in and by him was a power over which he himself had no control; it was a power distinct altogether from that which operates in the soul of the believer in regeneration and sanctification, it was a power given for a specific object, and not extending beyond it.—P.

CHAPTER III.

1 Ezekiel eateth the roll. 4 God encourageth him. 15 God showeth him the rule of prophecy. 22 God shutteth and openeth the prophet's mouth.

MOREOVER, he said unto me, Son of man, eat[a] that thou findest:[1] eat this roll, and [b]go speak unto the house of Israel.

2 So[c] I opened my mouth, and he caused me to eat[2] that roll.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, [d]cause thy belly to eat, and fill thy bowels with this roll that I give thee. Then did I [e]eat it; and it was in my mouth as honey for [f]sweetness.

4 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, [g]go, get thee unto the house of Israel, and speak with my words unto them.

5 For[h] thou art not sent to a people of a strange speech and of an hard language,[3] but to the house of Israel:

6 Not to many people of a strange speech and of an hard language, whose words thou canst not understand; surely, had I sent thee to them, they would[4] have hearkened unto thee.

7 But[i] the house of Israel will not hearken unto thee; for they will not hearken unto me: for all the house of Israel are impudent and hard-hearted.[5]

8 Behold, [j]I have made thy face strong against their faces, and thy forehead strong against their foreheads.

9 As an adamant, harder than flint, have I made thy forehead: [k]fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house.

10 Moreover, he said unto me, Son of man, [l]all my words that I shall speak unto thee receive in thine heart, and hear with thine ears.

11 And go, get thee [m]to them of the captivity, unto the children of [o]thy people, and [p]speak unto them, and tell them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear.

12 Then[q] the spirit took me up,[6] and I heard behind me [r]a voice of a great rushing,[7] saying, [s]Blessed be the glory of the LORD from his place.

13 I heard also [t]the noise of the wings of the living creatures that touched[8] one another, and the noise of the wheels over against them, and a noise of a great rushing.

14 So[u] the spirit lifted me up, and took me away, and I went in bitterness,[9] in the heat of the faithful publication of his truths. They must indeed, in the discharge of their office, expect the most unnatural and infernal persecution; and from none more than from hardened hypocrites. But let them be used as they may, they must faithfully adhere to and publish God's truths, however mournful or cutting. And in order hereto, they must consider, understand, and experience the power of them on their own hearts, before they preach them to others.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1–3. This roll noted his prophetic commission, or the messages he was to deliver. The eating imported his cordial reception of his messages, and serious meditation on them, that he might understand them. Its being sweet in his mouth imported that his commission was delightful to him at first, though afterwards he was filled with grief and anguish, when he found that he was to deliver such terrible messages, and those to be so little regarded. 8, 9. I will endow thee with boldness to deliver my messages, and with courage and constancy to hold out against all opposition. 12–14. The great rushing, &c., denotes the great commotions and troubles which he was to foretell, and in which God would be glorified. —The noise of the wings of the animals, and of the wheels, denotes the great activity of angels, ministers, and others in executing God's threatenings and providences. 20. If a man, who is but apparently righteous, without any real principle of grace, abandon his seemingly virtuous course, and give up himself to a continued practice of wickedness, and I lay in his way what his lusts shall improve to his destruction, whatever seeming good things once appeared about him, they shall in no wise avail to prevent his punishment. And if thou hast not warned him, thou shalt be punished as guilty of his destruction. 25. These bands my spirit:[1] but[v] the hand of the LORD was strong upon me.

15 ¶ Then I came to [z]them of the captivity at Tel-abib, that dwelt by the river of Chebar, and I sat where they sat, and [v]remained there astonished among them seven days.[2]

16 And[z] it came to pass, at the end of seven days, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

17 Son of man, [a]I have made thee [b]a watchman unto the house of Israel: [c]therefore hear the word at my mouth,[3] and give them warning from me.

18 When I say unto the wicked, [d]Thou shalt surely die; and [e]thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, [g]to save his life; the same wicked man shall[h] die in his iniquity; but [i]his blood will I require at thine hand.

19 Yet[j] if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, [k]he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered[l] thy soul.[4]

20 Again, when a [m]righteous man doth turn from his righteousness,[5] and [o]commit iniquity, and I [p]lay a stumbling-block before him, he shall die: because thou hast not given him warning, [q]he shall die in his sin, and his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; [r]but his blood will I require at thine hand.

21 Nevertheless, if thou warn the righteous man, that the righteous [s]sin not, and he doth not sin, [t]he shall surely live, because he is warned; also [u]thou hast delivered thy soul.[6]

22 ¶ And[v] the hand of the LORD was there upon me; and he said unto me, Arise, [z]go forth into the plain, and I will there talk with thee.

23 Then I arose, and went forth into the plain; and, behold, the [y]glory of the LORD stood there, as the glory which I saw [z]by the river of Chebar: [a]and I fell on my face.

24 Then [b]the spirit entered into me, and set me upon my feet, and spake with me, and said unto me, Go, [c]shut thyself within thine house.

25 But thou, O son of man, behold, [d]they shall put bands upon thee, and shalt bind thee with them, and thou shalt not go out among them:

26 And[e] I will make thy tongue cleave to the roof of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dumb, and [g]shalt not be to them a reprover;[7] for they are [h]a rebellious house.

27 But when I speak with thee, [i]I will open thy mouth, and thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, [j]He that heareth, let him hear; and he that forbeareth, let him forbear: for they are a rebellious house.

5 Heb. righteousnesses.

* I entirely concur with the comment of Fairbairn on the doctrinal bearing of this passage, that it has nothing to do with the question as to the possibility of the righteous falling from a state of grace. 'It seems to be a misdirection of the passage to apply it to such a purpose. Its direct and immediate bearing had respect only to the inseparable connection between righteousness and life, sin and death, and certainly by the former a real participation of the divine likeness and blessing, and by the latter the loss of both. But whether this loss may ever be sustained by any who have properly enjoyed the good—whether those who have been truly renewed by grace ever fall back again into the corruption and ruin of nature—this is not to be determined by a passage like the present, which being intended only for a direction to the prophet, in regard to his public ministrations, of necessity spake of the appearances, as indicative of the realities of things.'—P.

may either denote the restraints which God put upon him during his four hundred and thirty days' emblematical siege of Jerusalem [ch. iv.], or the restraints which the Jews would lay upon him, in order to prevent his denouncing judgments against them.

Ver. 3. Honey is the emblem of sweetness collected by industry, and preserved by care—of which the bee is one of the most remarkable natural examples. It here represents the sweetness of those reflections that arise from the knowledge and meditation of God's Word, and ready obedience to his will. C.

Ver. 4. This expression, Speak with my words unto them, is such a plain and explicit assertion of full and complete verbal inspiration in one prophet, that unless it be found explicitly disavowed, which it never is, the same amount of inspiration must be ascribed to every other prophet. See ver. 10. C.

Ver. 9. Adamant. What particular stone is intended cannot be determined, nor is the determination important, as the import of the passage is sufficiently plain. God had endowed the prophet with knowledge by means of the roll, or revealed word; he, in face of all opposition, with honesty and courage, determined to deliver his message. C.

Ver. 12. The glory of the Lord from his place, was the Shekinah in the wilderness—in the tabernacle, God manifest in light and cloud. 'The glory of the Lord from his place' in the temple, Mal. 3. 1, was 'the Word made flesh' and dwelling among men, who thus beheld 'his glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth.' 'The glory of the Lord from his place' in the heavens, is Christ sitting at the right hand of God, and ever living to make intercession for us. C.

Ver. 14. In bitterness of spirit because of the calamities he was commissioned to reveal.—In the heat. In the godly indignation of his spirit against ingratitude and hardness of heart to be rebuked. C.

Ver. 20. There is a faith that is living, and there is a faith that is dead, Ja. 2. 17; there is, with Christ, an outward union of profession—there is an inward union of the heart, Jn. 15. 2, 6; Ro. 10. 9. The man that professes faith in Christ is righteous in profession, but no farther. And such a one may fall away from that profession in which, for a time, he 'did run well:' and that either through ignorance of the real nature of the gospel, Mat. 13. 19, or want of 'root in himself,' or the dread of persecution, Mat. 13. 21, or through 'care of the world and deceitfulness of riches,' and the seed may thus be choked, and the plant become 'unfruitful.'—A stumbling-block. This may be either a fuller exposition of divine truth for the edification of the church, whereby ignorance is alarmed and alienated—the letting loose of the storm of persecution, by which indolence is disturbed, and the lovers of pleasure disgusted—or the full demand of God upon the liberality of Christian stewardship, at which covetousness takes the alarm and shuts out Christ, by admitting and cherishing 'the love of money.' These and other such 'stumbling-blocks' God is said to 'lay before' men—not to induce them to stumble and fall—not to tempt them to evil—but to punish them for their sins—to bring out from beneath the garb of profession the reality within: and to be a warning to him that 'thinketh he standeth by faith to take heed lest he fall' (by sense). C.

Ver. 26. This dumbness may have been physical, so that he could not speak: God thereby manifesting to the prophet and people that speech was his gift, their lips not their own, Ps. 12. 4: or it may have been mental, arising from such an overwhelming astonishment at the view of the divine glory, as deprived him for a time of the power of utterance—a result often arising from deep impressions of natural objects and occurrences: or it may have been merely the effect of that commanded retirement or compulsory imprisonment, by which he was for a time reduced to silence as a public 'preacher of righteousness.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's Word ought to be received as the delightful food of our soul, without disputing: and the more readily we obey God's difficult commandments, we shall receive the more comfort in the issue. Saints may receive with delight what speaks terror to the wicked. And they who minister in holy things, ought to meditate on and experience their subject before they deliver it to others. But unless God give them a spirit of wisdom and understanding, their own labours can avail but little. The more impudent sinners are in opposition to religion, the more bold and resolute should ministers and others appear in defence of it, that if any obstinately reject the counsel of God, they may be rendered inexcusable. And if we be called to hard services, he will fit and furnish us for them. Nor must the want of desired success discourage us, or in the least abate our faithfulness and diligence. What struggles of fear and unbelief may there be where grace reigns! It is very discouraging for ministers to be sent to preach to such as are uncontrollably wicked, and hate to be reformed. And their great griefs are often too big to be uttered. But God can bow their hearts as well as furnish their heads, and so prevent their refusal or desertion of their work. And he often for a time straitens them whom he intends to exalt.—Perseverance in sin, and apostasy from God, must certainly issue in temporal and eternal destruction. But readily will God pardon the most wicked if penitent. O the infinite importance of the ministerial office! What influence the execution thereof hath upon the everlasting happiness or misery of mankind! and ministers are acquitted or condemned as guilty of the destruction of souls as they faithfully deliver God's messages or not. Men's apostasy from, or perseverance in, good works, clearly manifests the counterfeit or real nature of their religion and grace. But they who follow God's direction shall have his necessary comforts always attending them. They who sinfully evade God's public work are ordinarily punished with temporary restraints from it: and they who hate reproof are deprived of faithful reprovers. Such as intend public preaching ought to be prepared for it by much reading, meditation, and prayer, as their messages are deeply connected with the eternal salvation or damnation of men.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1-7. It is most probable that these things were really done, and not in mere vision. If that year was their leap-year of thirteen months, there was time enough between the dates [ch. 1. 1, 2; 8. 1]. God could easily make the prophet lie still all the time specified, and live comfortably on his provision. The brittle tile represented Jerusalem's weakness and readiness to be irrecoverably ruined. The pan or slice of iron represented the walls of Jerusalem, or the resolution and fortifications of the Chaldean besiegers; the three hundred and ninety days on his left side, answering to the years of wickedness by the less regarded ten tribes after Jeroboam had become king, 1 Ki. xii., might also figure out three hundred and ninety days of siege by the Chaldeans, before they went off to fight the Egyptians [Je. 37. 5]. The forty days on his right side, answering to the Jews' years of wickedness under Manasseh, Jehoiakim, and Zedekiah, or beginning from the thirteenth or eighteenth year of Josiah, might represent the forty days of siege after the Chaldeans returned before the city was taken.—His setting his face against the portrait of Jerusalem, and having his arm bare, marked how furiously the Chaldeans should besiege it, and how ready they would be to use their swords in murdering the inhabitants.

Ver. 1. Tile. The tiles and bricks used for building in several eastern countries are very large, and have often been used as tablets. Pliny relates how Epigenes inscribed a long series of astronomical observations upon brick tiles (Nat. Hist. lib. viii. 57). The order was particularly appropriate in Chaldea, where it was customary to inscribe indented figures upon broad and thin bricks, many of which are still found in the ruins of Babylon, and may be frequently seen in European collections of eastern antiquities. C.

Ver. 7. Arm shall be uncovered. The uncovering of the arm denoted, in eastern phraseology, preparation for battle; and was intended as a farther emblem of Chaldean preparation, courage, and activity in carrying on the siege. C.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Under the type of a siege is showed the time from the defection of Jeroboam to the captivity. 9 By the provision of the siege, is showed the hardness of the famine.

THOU also, son of man, [a]take thee [b]a tile, and lay it before thee, and pourtray upon it the city, even [c]Jerusalem:[1]

2 And[d] lay siege[2] against it, and build a fort against it, and cast a mount[3] against it; set the camp also against it, and set battering rams[4] against it round about.

3 Moreover, take thou unto thee an iron pan,[5] and set it for [e]a wall of iron between thee and the city; and set thy face against it, and it shall be besieged, and thou shalt lay siege against it. This[g] shall be a sign to the house of Israel.

4 ¶ Lie[h] thou also upon thy left side, and lay [i]the iniquity of the house of Israel upon it: according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon it thou shalt bear their iniquity.[6]

5 For I have laid upon thee [j]the years of their iniquity, according to the number of the days, three hundred and ninety days:[7] so shalt thou bear the iniquity of the house of Israel.

6 And when thou hast accomplished them, lie again on thy [k]right side, and thou shalt bear the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days:[8] I have appointed thee each day for a year.[9]

7 Therefore thou shalt [l]set thy face toward the siege of Jerusalem, and [m]thine arm shall be uncovered, and thou shalt prophesy against it.

8 And behold, [n]I will lay bands[1] upon thee, and thou shalt not turn thee from one side to another,[2] till thou hast ended the days of thy siege.

9 ¶ Take[p] thou also unto thee wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentiles, and millet, and fitches,[3] and put them in one vessel, and make thee bread[4] thereof, according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon thy side; three hundred and ninety days shalt thou eat thereof.[5]

10 And thy meat which thou shalt eat [q]shall be by weight twenty shekels[6] a day: from time to time shalt thou eat it.

11 Thou shalt drink also water by measure, the sixth part of an hin:[7] from time to time shalt thou drink.

12 And thou shalt eat it as barley-cakes,[8] and thou shalt bake it with dung[9] that cometh out of man, in their sight.

Ver. 12. The Egyptians, Arabs, and other Orientals, frequently use the dried dung of cows and camels for fuel: and the lower classes in Egypt are so wretchedly poor, that they are often compelled literally to comply with the disgusting, but emblematic, order directed to the prophet.—Sandys' Orient. Lit. 1007, 1008. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God accurately marks and avenges the iniquities of preceding ages upon obstinate apostates who have continued in them. And with earnestness and resolution the instruments of justice proceed in their work against hardened transgressors. If God require it of us, we must be ready to endure any hardship or disgrace for his sake. And it is prudent to accustom ourselves to hardships, as we know not to what we may be put before we die. The fear of sinning chiefly affects a gracious soul. And amidst pinching wants, it is very comfortable to have a conscience untainted with wilful guilt. But how ready God is, and how ready then should we be, to regard the conscientious scruples of his people!

CHAPTER V. Ver. 1–4. This imports that Jerusalem, which had been the head of the nation, full of inhabitants, and numerous, but now weak, as hairs, should undergo the foulest disgrace and bitterest grief; and being weighed in the balances of God's justice, should have punishment answerable to their guilt: the city should be taken and burned; one-third of the inhabitants consumed in the flames, or by the pestilence and famine; another slain during the siege, or in attempting to escape; the other be led captive to Chaldea, or flee for refuge to Egypt, Moab, and Ammon, whither the sword of the Chaldeans would pursue them. A few of them seemed about to escape, but the slaughter of Gedaliah their governor, and others, and their flight into Egypt, not only issued in their own ruin, but provoked the Chaldeans to further cruelties against the remains of their nation.

Ver. 2. Thou shalt burn, &c. Either actually in the midst of the city, when the days of his recumbency were completed, or emblematically, in the midst of the plan of the city and siege which the prophet had portrayed on the tile, ch. 4. 1.—Burning may represent the pestilence or burning fever, the usual attendant upon famine, La. 5. 10, or the actual burning of the city, Je. 52.

my statutes, neither have kept my judgments, neither have done according to the judgments[7] of the nations that are round about you:

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold [r]I, even I, am against thee, and will execute judgments in the midst of thee, in the sight of the nations.

9 And I will do in thee [s]that which I have not done, and whereunto I will not do any more the like, because of all thine abominations.

10 Therefore the fathers [t]shall eat the sons in the midst of thee, and the sons shall eat their fathers; and I will execute judgments in thee, and the whole remnant of thee [u]will I scatter into all the winds.

11 Wherefore, [v]as I live, saith the Lord GOD, Surely, because thou hast [w]defiled my sanctuary with all thy [y]detestable things, and with all thine abominations, therefore will I also diminish[8] thee; [z]neither shall mine eye spare, neither will I have any pity.

12 ¶ A[a] third part of thee shall die with the pestilence, and with famine shall they be consumed in the midst of thee; and a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee; and I will [b]scatter a third part into all the winds, and [c]I will draw out a sword after them.

13 Thus[d] shall mine anger be accomplished, and I will cause my fury to rest upon them, and I[e] will be comforted: and they shall know that I the LORD have spoken it in my [9]zeal, when I have accomplished my fury in them.

14 Moreover, [h]I will make thee waste, and a reproach among the nations that are round about thee, in the sight of all that pass by.

15 So it shall be[9] a reproach and a taunt, an instruction[i] and an astonishment unto the nations that are round about thee, when I shall execute[j] judgments in thee, in anger and in fury, and in furious rebukes. I the LORD have spoken it.[1]

16 When I shall send upon them[2] the evil [k]arrows of famine,[3] which shall be for their destruction, and which I will send to destroy you: and I will increase the famine upon you, and [l]will break your staff of bread:

17 So will I send upon you famine and [m]evil beasts, and they shall bereave thee; and [o]pestilence and blood shall pass through thee; and I [p]will bring the sword upon thee. I the LORD have spoken it.

1 The general scope of this prophecy shows that it embraced a period extending into the distant future. The fulfilment commenced a few years after the words were uttered; but has never since progressing, and it is not yet complete. The portion of Israel, 'scattered in the wind,' has still the sword of God's wrath 'drawn out' after them. The Jewish prophets were able to look away down the long vista of Jewish history, and to depict it on the prophetic canvas, as a painter represents the windings of a long valley on the flat surface of his picture.—P.

3 Evil arrows of famine. Drought, blight, mildew, storm, hail, rain, locusts, caterpillars, &c., so often the swift and irresistible 'arrows of famine' and harbingers of pestilence.—C.

3 This prophecy is most comprehensive. It embraces, 1st. The physical divisions of the country — mountains, hills, rivers and valleys. 2d. The works and monuments of man — high places, altars, cities, and houses. 3d. The people of the land. Upon the first utter desolation is the doom pronounced; upon the second complete destruction; upon the third the sword, famine, and exile. All are now fulfilled.—P.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The judgment of Israel for their idolatry. 8 A remnant shall be saved. 11 The prophet is directed to lament their calamities.

AND the[a] word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, [b]set thy face toward the [c]mountains of [1]Israel,[2] and prophesy against them,

3 And say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord GOD; Thus saith the Lord GOD [d]to the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys,[3] Behold I, even I, will bring a sword upon you, and I will destroy your [e]high places;

4 And your altars shall be desolate, and your images[4] shall be broken; and [9]I will cast down your slain men before your idols.[5]

5 And I will lay[6] the dead carcases of the children of Israel before their idols;[7] and I will scatter your [h]bones round about your altars.

6 In[i] all your dwelling-places the cities shall be laid waste,[8] and the high places shall be desolate; that your altars may be laid waste and made desolate, and your idols may be broken and cease, and your images may be cut down, and your works[9] may be abolished.

7 And the slain shall fall in the midst of you, and [j]ye shall know that I am the LORD.

8 ¶ Yet will I leave [k]a remnant, that ye may have some that shall escape the sword among the nations, when ye shall be scattered through the countries.

9 And they that escape of you shall [l]remem-

Ver. 6. They (the nations) have refused—but merely refused—but Israel speciously accepted and falsely covenanted to obey, then lightly changed and wickedly rejected my judgments and my statutes, and so were worse than the heathen. C.

Ver. 7. Neither have done, &c. Neither have ye done so well as the nations—they have tenaciously adhered to the gods of their idolatrous fathers—ye have lightly forsaken the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. They have been comparatively moral with a false religion; you have followed lies though in possession of the oracles of truth. C.

Ver. 17. Evil beasts. Either actually wild beasts, driven from the rivers by inundations, from the mountains by storms, or from the deserts by hunger; or figuratively, the Chaldeans, whose untamed ferocity justly entitled them to be called 'evil beasts.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—If men will not be reformed, they must certainly be ruined: and with great ease, and by a vast variety of judgments, God can accomplish the destruction of obstinate sinners. It is very awful when those who should have remained as monuments of mercy fall because of their sins: and highly criminal when such as had been singularly privileged with God's favours, oracles, and ordinances, for promoting the welfare of all around them, become a plague, and the vilest monsters in wickedness: and yet often apostate professors become more abandoned than heathens! How awful it is when idols and their services are admitted into God's land, his temple, his church, and the heart formed for himself! The immediate agents in the ruin of sinners are all the instruments of an angry God: and when his wrath is kindled, who can abide it! It is dreadful to contemplate that by our sins we may come to destruction. And, alas! in what awful condition must the impenitent perish for ever! If public reproofs cannot restrain public wickedness, public judgments must follow at last. Some will be destroyed and should become a warning to others. And if God bear long with us in our sins, his judgments must be the severer when they are inflicted. And the most incredulous will at length be forced to believe his Word, though it should be by their own everlasting destruction.

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 3. Rivers and valleys are also specially addressed: because it is probable that, like the heathen whom they imitated and surpassed, ch. 5. 7, they had learned to deify the rivers, and people them with the Naiades: and it is certain that in the valley of Hinnom their most cruel rites of idolatry were practised. C.

Ver. 11. Smite with thine hand, &c. Eastern people employ much more action while speaking than Europeans: and some European nations much more than the British; which circumstance requires to be taken into account in the order 'to smite and to stamp:' actions which, to an eastern people, might be eminently expressive of the deepest indignation and sorrow. C.

Ver. 12. The threefold division of judgment, ch. 5. 12, seems, most probably, to have been adapted to three political factions into which the people were divided. (1) Those that were for fleeing 'far off,' and leaving Jerusalem to her fate, and taking refuge in Egypt or among the Ammonites, &c. (2) Those who encouraged, or perhaps compelled, Zedekiah to rebel. And (3) those who, when the rebellion was suppressed in the open country, refused to hear Jeremiah, and madly held out in Jerusalem. A terrible example of the existence and wickedness of such Jewish factions may be seen in Josephus' History of the Jewish War. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Terrible are the desolations which guilt and war make in nations. And no place, no idol, no station, can protect from God's wrath. If men will not destroy idols, he will find a way, even by idolaters, to destroy both together. His persevering patience, as well as both mercies and judgments, encourage and excite to a cordial and thorough repentance. And loathsome and abominable is the most beloved sin to a person truly penitent. Yea, hopeful is the case when sinners begin to remember God, and the base affronts which they have given him. And nothing more deeply wounds awakened consciences than a sense of their base ingratitude, and of grieving the Holy Spirit of God. God will make all men, either by their ruin, or especially by their hearty repentance, effectually to acknowledge his perfections, to feel the equity and veracity of his Word, and justify him in the accomplishment of it. The sins and judgments of others should affect us as well as our own. And SUMMER HOUSE, CÆSAREA PHILIPPI—NEAR MOUNT HERMON, WHERE CHRIST WAS TRANSFIGURED. [EZEKIEL, vi: 3-4.]—"And say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God; thus saith the Lord God to the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys, Behold I, even I, will bring a sword upon you, and I will destroy your high places; and your altars shall be desolate, and your images shall be broken; and I will cast down your slain men before your idols." We have a picture here of a summer house in Cæsarea Philippi. The weather is so hot here in the summer, and there are so many creeping and crawling things among the old ruins of this ancient city that people build above their stone quarters in the warm season summer houses such as you see in the picture. Cæsarea Philippi is at the foot of Mount Hermon, and truly has the prophecy of Ezekiel been fulfilled in this city. Here the altars are desolate, and the images broken, and the temple of Pan is in ruins.

ber me among the nations whither they shall be carried captives, because [n]I am broken[1] with their [o]whorish heart, which hath departed from me, and with their [p]eyes, which go a whoring after their idols: and they shall [q]loathe themselves for the evils which they have committed in all their abominations.

10 And[r] they shall know that I am the LORD, and that I have not said in vain that I would do this evil unto them.[2]

11 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD, [s]Smite with thine hand, and stamp with thy foot, and say, Alas for all the evil abominations of the house of Israel! for [t]they shall fall by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence.

12 He that is far off shall die of the pestilence; and he that is near shall fall by the sword; and he that remaineth and is besieged, shall die by the famine: thus will I [u]accomplish my fury upon them.

13 Then[v] shall ye know that I am the LORD, when their slain men shall be among their idols round about their altars, upon [x]every high hill, in all the tops of the mountains, and under every green tree, and under every thick oak, the place where they did offer sweet savour to all their idols.

14 So will I [y]stretch out my hand upon them, and make the land desolate, yea, more desolate than the wilderness[3] toward [z]Diblath, in all their habitations; and they shall know that I am the LORD.[4]

CHAPTER VII.

1 The final desolation of Israel. 16 The mournful repentance of them that escape. 20 The enemies defile the sanctuary because of the Israelites' abominations. 23 Under the type of a chain is showed the miserable captivity of all orders of men.

MOREOVER, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Also, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord GOD unto the land of [1]Israel, [a]An end, the end is come upon the four corners of the land.

3 Now is the end come upon thee, and [b]I will send mine anger upon thee, and will judge thee according to thy ways, and will recompense[2] upon thee all thine abominations.

4 And[c] mine eye shall not spare thee, neither will I have pity: [d]but I will recompense thy ways upon thee, and thine abominations shall be in[3] the midst of thee; and [e]ye shall know that I am the LORD.

5 Thus saith the Lord GOD, [g]An evil, an only evil,[4] behold, is come.

6 An[h] end is come, the end is come: it watcheth[5] for[6] thee; behold, it is come.

7 The[i] morning[7] is come unto thee, O thou that dwellest in the land: [j]the time is come, the day of trouble is near, and not the [8]sounding[9] again of the mountains.

8 Now[k] will I shortly pour out my fury upon thee, and accomplish mine anger upon thee; and I will judge thee [l]according to thy ways, and will recompense thee for all thine abominations.

9 And mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity: I will recompense [1]thee [m]according to thy ways, and thine abominations that are in the midst of thee; and ye shall know that [o]I am the LORD that smiteth.

10 Behold[p] the day, behold, it is come; the morning is gone forth; [q]the rod hath blossomed; pride hath budded.

11 Violence[r] is risen up into a rod of wickedness: [s]none of them shall remain, nor of their multitude,[2] nor of any of theirs;[3] neither[t] shall there be wailing for them.

12 The[u] time is come, the day draweth near: let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn; [v]for wrath is upon all the multitude thereof.

13 For the seller shall not return[4] to that which is sold, although they were yet alive:[5] for [x]the vision is touching the whole multitude thereof, which shall not return; [y]neither shall any strengthen himself [6]in the iniquity of his life.[7]

14 They[z] have blown the trumpet, even to make all ready; but [a]none goeth to the [8]battle: for [b]my wrath is upon all the multitude thereof.

2 The final object of all these judgments is here indicated—it was to bring Israel to a knowledge, not theoretical merely, but experimental, of God. Promises, warnings, threatenings, and favours had all been vain. Judgments alone, terrible & long-continued, would serve to bring the people to a sense of their duty. ministers must often weep over them who never shed a tear for themselves.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 7. The beginning of desolation is come upon you who remain in Judea; and ye shall quickly meet with real and terrible trouble, and not mere fears and ill-grounded fancies of it. 10-15. Since pride and violence have come to such intolerable heights among all ranks, the haughty and cruel Chaldeans are in readiness to punish you; and all orders shall be equally involved in your misery: such as sell fields shall not return to them in the year of jubilee, being captives in Babylon; yea, after their seventy years' captivity, it will be impossible for many to find their own inheritances. This prediction of the desolation of the country, and of its inhabitants, shall not fail of exact accomplishment: nor shall any be able to secure themselves from those judgments threatened, so long as they continue in their evil courses. They may blow the trumpets to call them together for war; but, deprived of all courage and resolution by my wrath upon them, none shall dare to assemble. 16-22. The few appointed for escape shall indeed be preserved, and scattered here and there for their safety; and they shall bitterly bewail their calamities and sins. All shall be quite dispirited and incapable of helping themselves; and shall be quite overwhelmed with grief, terror, and shame. Their wealth shall be altogether unprofitable to them; nay, they shall be glad to be rid of it, or shall have it seized by the enemy: or, in the famine, it shall be unable to procure them sufficient food,—since they have made it the occasion of manifold wickedness, and have employed it in the service of idols. And as for my magnificent and beautiful temple, which has long been the glory of their nation, and which they have defiled with their idols and the service of them, I will quickly drive them far from it into Chaldea, and will give it into the hands of the most infamous heathens to be defiled, plundered, and destroyed. 23-27. Prepare for imprisonment, captivity, and bondage; for your land is full of capital crimes, oppression, rapine, and injustice. Therefore shall the barbarous Chaldeans seize upon your whole property, of which ye so proudly boasted; nor shall your humblest entreaties be able to procure any respite, but one mischief shall follow another. Neither prophet not priest shall be able or allowed to teach you; nor shall the most prudent and experienced know how to advise you. Both magistrates and people shall be utterly infatuated and dispirited.

Ver. 2. Land of Israel. The tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and the fragments of the other tribes that had been left in secluded spots, or had returned from the nations into which they had fled, or been carried captive. C.

Ver. 4. Thine abominations, &c. Being 'given over' to your own will and ways; your abominations that you have chosen and loved, shall remain in the midst of every family and assembly, evidences of your apostasy and causes of divine judgment. C.

Ver. 10. The rod. Some think Nebuchadnezzar, who is called 'the rod of God's anger,' and who was a proud man; but it seems rather to describe the oppression and pride that had grown up in Israel; and on account of which God commissioned as proud an oppressor to execute his righteous judgment. C.

Ver. 12. Let not the buyer rejoice that he has obtained, nor the seller mourn that he has been forced to part with, property at an undervalue; it shall now be wrested from the buyer by a foreign power, as it was from the seller by domestic oppression. C.

Ver. 19. The possession of silver and gold led to the abuse of them in luxury, pride, covetousness, and idolatry. While the Israelites were comparatively poor, they were industrious, and remembered God; when, by their industry, they became rich, they stumbled over their abundance; and forgot the giver.—A melancholy progress which Christianity, alas! too often witnesses in her own children; and against which all successful men have special need to 'watch and pray.' C.

Ver. 20. 'As to their beautiful ornaments, which were for pride, they turned them into images of their abominations, and their detestable things they made therewith; hence I will make them to them as an unclean thing.' Boothroyd.

REFLECTIONS.—God gives to sinners fair warning of their approaching ruin; and with tenderness he seeks by his warnings to save them from ruin. But fearful and various are the plagues which men's diversified iniquities entail upon them. And nothing can avail for GATE OF ATHENE ARCHEGETIS—RUINS ONCE CONSECRATED TO THE CAUSE OF IDOLATRY. [EZEKIEL, viii: 17.]—"Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit the abominations which they commit here? for they have filled the land with violence and have returned to provoke me to anger." At the time Ezekiel wrote this, B. C. 594, Solon repaired the constitution and laws for Athenian cities, but the abominations Ezekiel represents as being committed by the house of Judah and filling the land with violence, were being committed also by the Athenians in their worship of idols, So when Solon was an old man, Pisistratus, the tyrant, made himself the master of the Acropolis. These ruins and others in Athens only serve to show that the same laws which were at work among the Israelites bringing them to confusion were also at work among the Greeks bringing them to a depth of national poverty from which they have never recovered.

15 The sword is without, and the pestilence and the famine within: he that is in the field shall die with the sword; and he that is in the city, famine and pestilence shall devour him.

16 ¶ But they that escape of them [c]shall escape, and shall be on the mountains [d]like doves of the valleys, all of them mourning, every one for his iniquity.

17 All [e]hands shall be feeble, and all knees shall be weak as water.[9]

18 They shall also [g]gird themselves with sackcloth, and horror shall cover them; and shame shall be upon all faces, and baldness upon all their heads.

19 They[h] shall cast their silver[1] in the streets, and their gold shall be removed:[2] their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the LORD: they shall not satisfy their souls, neither fill their bowels; because it is the [i]stumbling-block of their iniquity.[3]

20 ¶ As for the [j]beauty of his ornament, he set it in majesty; [k]but they made the images of their abominations, and of their detestable things therein: therefore have I set it far from them.[4]

21 And[l] I will give it into the hands of the strangers for a prey, and to the wicked of the earth for a spoil: and they shall pollute it.

22 My[n] face will I turn also from them, and they shall pollute my secret place:[5] for the robbers[6] shall enter into it, and defile it.

23 ¶ Make[o] a chain;[7] for[p] the land is full of bloody crimes, and the city is full of violence.

24 Wherefore I will bring [q]the worst[8] of the heathen, and they shall possess their houses: [r]I will also make the pomp of the strong to cease, and their holy[s] places shall be defiled.[9]

25 Destruction[1] cometh; [t]and they shall seek peace, and there shall be none.

26 Mischief[u] shall come upon mischief, and rumour shall be upon rumour; then [v]shall they seek a vision[2] of the prophet: [z]but the law shall perish from the priest, and counsel from the ancients.[3]

AND it came to pass in the [a]sixth year,[1] in the sixth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I sat in mine house, and the [b]elders of Judah sat before me, that [c]the hand of the Lord GOD fell there upon me.

2 Then[d] I beheld, and, lo, a likeness as the appearance of fire: from the appearance of his loins even downward, fire; and from his loins even upward, as the appearance of brightness, as the colour of amber.

3 And he [e]put forth the form of an hand, and took me by a lock of mine head; and the spirit lifted me up between the earth and the heaven, and [g]brought me[2] in the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the [h]inner gate that looketh toward the north, [i]where was the seat of [j]the image of jealousy, which provoketh to jealousy.

4 And, behold, [k]the glory of the God of Israel was there, according to the vision that I saw in the plain.

5 ¶ Then said he unto me, Son of man, [l]lift up thine eyes now the way toward the north. [n]So I lifted up mine eyes the way toward the north, and behold, northward at the [o]gate of the altar, [p]this image of jealousy in the entry.

6 He said, furthermore, unto me, Son of man, seest thou what they do? even [q]the great abominations that the house of Israel [r]committeth here, that I should go far off[3] from[s] my sanctuary? but turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see [t]greater abominations.

7 ¶ And he brought me to [u]the door of the court; and when I looked, behold, a hole[4] in the wall.

their defence when God rises up to judgment. Sins and sorrows are inseparable. But happy then are they who mourn after a godly sort! Blessed are they that weep now, for they shall be comforted! Money is a dangerous snare to such as inordinately love it, and altogether unprofitable in the day of God's wrath or in the eternal state. Justly are God's ordinances taken from those who despised and profaned them. If men will not be governed by the laws and experience the power of godliness, it is not meet that they should long be honoured by the form of it. And if all ranks will add sin to sin, it is but just that God should make all of them to share in miseries, one after another.

CHAPTER VIII. Ver. 2. Fire—the emblem of power to consume in judgment, 2 Pe. 3. 7.—Brightness—the excellence and glory of Christ.—Amber—neither as fire to consume, nor bright as light, but a chastened radiance which the eye might look upon with pleasure, Is. 45. 22; Jn. 1. 14; He. 12. 2; 1 Jn. 1. 1–3. C.

Ver. 3. The seat. The niche or pedestal on which the image was placed. It is called 'image of jealousy,' because it provoked the LORD, who is 'a jealous God'—jealous of his own honour; jealous of any perversion of his truth or degradation of his worship; and jealous lest any base idol or abominable lust should steal away from him the love of his children—the allegiance of his subjects—the fidelity of the church he had espoused in the bonds of the everlasting covenant. C.

Ver. 10. The Egyptians worshipped 'creeping things,' such as the beetle, and 'abominable beasts,' such as the crocodile, &c. And the strong propensity of Israel about this time to return into Egypt, renders it highly probable that they had adopted their idolatry. The subterraneous tombs of Egypt present upon their walls exactly such paintings as the prophet here describes. C.

Ver. 12. Forsaken the earth—the land of Judea. This seems to have been, not a figurative expression, but an actual opinion. Jaazaniah and his coadjutors in idolatry did not attempt to undeify JEHOVAH: they merely asserted he had 'forsaken the land,' and left them at liberty to choose another tutelary god. C.

Ver. 14. Tammuz. Adonis, whom the heathen fabled to have been beloved of Venus, the goddess of licentiousness—for heathenism deified and worshipped every form of wickedness—who, when he was killed by a wild boar, wept for him. And this her lamentation was annually observed with affected weeping both by men and women. C.

Ver. 17. They put the branch to their nose. Each heathen deity had his dedicated tree, of which a 'branch' was presented in the hand during worship; to which custom this is supposed to be an allusion. The passage, however, has been translated:—'And, lo, they send forth a scornful noise through their nostrils' (Newcome).—They mock the worship of Jehovah, upon whose temple they have turned their backs. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God keeps a particular account of every message that he sends us, and will shortly call us to account for them. And when we are faithful and active in improving the discoveries which God hath bestowed upon us, we may expect more. The more we retire from the world into our own heart, and fix our attention on things above, we may more reasonably hope for still further communications from God. And to see his glory is an excellent mean of discovering to us the infinitely odious nature of idolatry and other wickedness, which turns his truth into a lie, and his glory into shame. What multitudes of abominations crowd together! If one be found, we may reckon of thousands which still lie hid. But it will require a diligent search to find them out, either in ourselves or others. And nowhere may we expect greater or more heinous abominations than in connection with the worship of God. Many make a fair show in God's house in public, who, if followed to their secret chambers, would be found sunk in filthiness and impiety. And seldom can any be found worse than evil ministers and magistrates. Nothing more encourages men to indulgence, or even impudence, in sin, than a practical disbelief of God's all-seeing knowledge and all-present majesty. If once women transgress the natural modesty

8 Then said he unto me, Son of man, dig now in the wall: and when I had digged in the wall, behold, a door.

9 And he said unto me, Go in, and behold the [v]wicked abominations that they do here.

10 So I [z]went in and saw; and behold, every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts,[5] and all the idols[6] of the house of Israel, pourtrayed upon the wall round about.

11 And there stood before them seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel,[7] and in the midst of them stood Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan,[y] with[z] every man his censer in his hand; and a thick cloud of incense went up.

12 Then said he unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients[8] of the house of Israel do [a]in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery? for they say, [b]The LORD seeth us not; the LORD hath forsaken the earth.[9]

13 ¶ He said also unto me, Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see [c]greater abominations that they do.

14 Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the LORD's house which was toward the north;[1] and behold, there sat women weeping[2] for Tammuz.[3]

15 Then said he unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see [d]greater abominations than these.

16 ¶ And he brought me into the inner court of the LORD's house; and, behold, [e]at the door of the temple of the LORD, between the porch and the altar,[4] were about five and twenty men, [g]with their backs[5] toward the temple of the LORD, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped the sun toward the east.

17 ¶ Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit[6] the abominations which they commit here? for they have filled the land with violence, and have returned to provoke me to anger; and, lo, they put the branch to their nose.[7]

18 Therefore[h] will I also deal in fury: mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity; [i]and though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet will I not hear them.

Venus, who was enamoured of him, caused him to be deified; a temple was erected in honour of him, and the stream beside which he fell was called by his name. Yearly, on the day of his death, a high festival was held, and Syrian females assembled from far and near to weep for him, and to indulge in lascivious rites. The senselessness and abominableness of idolatry, of the Israelites here depicted with great graphic power. God's purpose in exposing it is to show the cause of the terrible judgments pronounced upon both an infatuated people and a polluted land. The representation is here symbolic; but the evils which it symbolizes are real. The people looked for help to Egypt, and in order to secure it they seem to have conformed to the grossest forms of Egyptian idolatry. Instead of trusting in Jehovah, whose infinite mercy and omnipotent power had been so wonderfully displayed during the whole course of their national history, they turned from him to the vile idols of Egypt.—P.

CHAPTER IX.

1 A vision, whereby is showed the preservation of some, 5 and the destruction of all the rest. 8 God cannot be entreated for them.

HE cried[1] also in mine ears with [a]a loud voice, saying, Cause them[2] that have charge over the city to draw near, even every man with his destroying weapon in his hand.[3]

2 And, behold, [b]six men came from the way of the [c]higher gate, which lieth[4] toward the north, and every man a slaughter weapon[5] in his hand; and one man[6] among them was [d]clothed with linen, with a writer's inkhorn by his side:[7] and they went in, and stood [e]beside the brasen altar.

3 And [g]the glory of the God of Israel was gone up from the cherub, whereupon he was, to the threshold of the house: and he called to the man clothed with linen, which had the writer's inkhorn by his side;

4 And the LORD said unto him, Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and set a mark[8] upon the foreheads of the men [h]that sigh, and that cry, for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof.

5 ¶ And to the others he said in mine hearing,[9] Go[i] ye after him through the city, and [j]smite; let not your eye spare, neither have ye pity:

6 Slay utterly[1] old and young, both maids, and little children, and women; [k]but come not near any man upon whom is the mark; and [l]begin at my sanctuary. Then they began at [m]the ancient men which were before the house.

7 And he said unto them, [c]Defile the house, and fill the courts with the slain; go ye forth. And they went forth, and slew in the city.

8 ¶ And it came to pass, while they were slaying them, and I was left, that [p]I fell upon my face, and cried, and said, [q]Ah, Lord GOD! wilt thou destroy all the [r]residue of Israel in thy pouring out of thy fury upon Jerusalem?

of their sex, they bid fair to stick at nothing horrid or obscene. And if men once turn their back upon God's institutions, they bid fair endlessly to wander after their own inventions. But shortly shall the most secret abominations be discovered, and the most shocking and daring be sufficiently punished.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 2–11. The six armed destroyers denote the Chaldeans and other instruments of God's vengeance. The man with the ink-horn denotes Jesus Christ, who manages all the slaughter of apostate nations, nay, all in the world, so as may consist with the preservation of his people, especially those who faithfully mourn over, and testify against, abounding iniquities.

Ver. 1. Cause them that have charge, &c. The princes of the Chaldeans, who had a charge from God to execute righteous judgment against the wicked inhabitants of the city. C.

Ver. 2. Six men. Equivalent to the six labour days of the week—a number exactly completed in the six successive incursions of the Chaldeans. See Je. 52. 28.—'And one man among (not of) them clothed with linen'—represents the righteous discrimination of God in the execution of his judgments upon mixed communities, whether he employ human or angelic agency, Re. 15. 6; 19. 8. C.

Ver. 3. The glory . . . was gone up. The 'glory,' or Shekinah, had gone up from the 'door of the inner gate,' ch. 8. 3, and now appeared on the threshold, ready to enter, judge, or depart. C.

Ver. 4. Set a mark. The Jews thought the mark was the letter called thau, the first in the Hebrew word law. Some early Christian writers admitting this to be the mark, yet held it was in the Samaritan character, which was in form of a cross—thus showing how early the superstitious use of that symbol of salvation had crept into the church. From Re. 14. 1 the mark will be found to be the name of the Father, acknowledging his children, and sealing them with the Spirit of promise until the day of redemption: and the name of the Lamb, Re. 22. 4, acknowledging those whom he had redeemed, washed in his blood, and clothed in his righteousness. See also the holy priesthood of believers implied in this forehead mark, comp. Ex. 28. 38, with Re. 1. 6. C.

Ver. 6. Ancient men. The Sanhedrim, ch. 8. 10, 11, in God's house governors by office, idolaters by practice. A solemn warning to all who bear rule in the Christian church to beware both of 'the fear of man which bringeth a snare,' and that love of the world, which sooner or later is sure to terminate in that 'covetousness which is idolatry.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's ministers of wrath, no less than of mercy, are always ready at his call. But how exceeding loath he is to leave a church, till their obstinacy and impudence, as it were, force him away! And gradual even then are the removals of his comfortable presence. But even in the midst of ruin and destruction, he takes peculiar care of the protection of his followers, however weak and concealed their holiness and zeal may be. He knows them that are his; and not one of them shall be lost. And he will keep them safe amidst common calamities who keep themselves pure amidst abounding provocations. But when he has gathered his wheat into his garner, nothing remains for the chaff but unquenchable fire. Those who persist in impenitence must die without mercy. And none meet with more terrible destruction than unfaithful magistrates and ministers. God's temple protects penitent, not obstinate offenders. And if judgment begin at the house of God, where shall the ungodly and sinner appear? If servants in it defile it with their idolatries, no wonder that God should suffer the enemies of it to defile it with their violences.—But if God spare us in mercy, we ought to intercede for our sinful brethren.—And even though for their sinfulness God

9 Then said he unto me, [z]The iniquity of the house of Israel and Judah is exceeding great, and the land is full of[2] blood,[3] and the city full of perverseness;[4] for they say, [t]The LORD hath forsaken the earth, and the LORD seeth not.

10 And as for me also, mine [u]eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity; but [v]I will recompense their way upon their head.

11 And, behold, the man clothed with linen, which had the inkhorn by his side, reported the matter,[5] saying, [x]I have done as thou hast commanded me.

CHAPTER X.

1 The vision of the coals of fire, to be scattered over the city. 8 The vision of the cherubims.

THEN I[a] looked, and behold, in the [b]firmament that was above the head of the cherubims there appeared over them as it were a sapphire stone, as the appearance of the likeness of a throne.[1]

2 And [2]he spake[3] unto the man[4] clothed with linen, and said, [c]Go in between the wheels,[5] even under the cherub, and fill thine[6] hand with coals of fire from between the cherubims, and [d]scatter them over the city.[7] And he went in in my sight.

3 Now the cherubims stood on the right[8] side of the house, when the man went in; and the[e] cloud[9] filled the inner court.

4 Then the [g]glory of the LORD went up[1] from the cherub, [h]and stood over the threshold of the house; and [i]the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the LORD's glory.

5 And the [j]sound of the cherubims' wings was heard even to the [k]outer court, as the [l]voice of the Almighty God when he speaketh.[2]

6 And it came to pass, that [m]when he had commanded the man clothed with linen, saying, Take fire from between the wheels, [c]from between the cherubims; then he went in, and [p]stood beside the wheels.

7 And one cherub stretched forth[3] his hand from between the cherubims unto the fire that was between the cherubims, and took thereof, and put it into the hands of him that was clothed with linen; who took it, and [q]went out.

8 ¶ And [r]there appeared in the cherubims the[s] form of a man's hand under their wings.

9 And[t] when I looked, behold, the four wheels by the cherubims, one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub: and the appearance of the wheels was as the colour of a beryl stone.

10 And as for their appearances, they four had one likeness, as if a wheel[4] had been in the midst[5] of a wheel.

11 When[u] they went,[6] they went upon their four sides; they turned not as they went, but to the place whither the head[7] looked they followed it; they turned not as they went.

12 And their whole body,[8] and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, and the wheels, were [v]full of eyes[9] round about, even the wheels that they four had.

13 As for the wheels, [1]it was [x]cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel![2]

14 And[y] every one had four faces: [z]the first face was the face of a cherub, and [a]the second face was the face of a man, and the [b]third the face of a lion, and the [c]fourth the face of an eagle.

15 And the cherubims were [d]lifted up. [e]This is the living creature[3] that I saw by the river of Chebar.

16 And[g] when the cherubims went, the wheels went by them; and when the cherubims lifted up their wings to mount up from the earth, the same wheels also turned not from beside them.

17 When they stood, these stood; and when they were lifted up, these lifted up themselves also: for [h]the spirit of the living creature[4] was in them.

18 Then the glory of the LORD [i]departed from off the threshold of the house, and [j]stood over the [5]cherubims.[6]

19 And [k]the cherubims lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight: when they went out, the wheels also were beside them; and every one stood [l]at the door of [m]the east gate of the LORD's house; [o]and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

20 This[p] is the living creature that I saw under the God of Israel by the river of Chebar; and [q]I knew that they were the cherubims.

21 Every[r] one had four faces apiece, and every one four wings; and the likeness of the hands of a man was under their wings.

22 And the likeness of their faces was the same faces which I saw by the river of Chebar, their appearances and themselves: they [s]went every one straight forward.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 1–7. The throne, ver. 1, denotes God's coming in a way of judgment against the Jews. The man clothed in linen, taking the fire from between the cherubims to scatter over the city, ver. 2, 6, 7. denotes Christ as executing the destructive justice of God on Jerusalem, according to the predictions of his prophets, and by the ministration of angels. The bright cloud that filled the inner court, ver. 3, 4, might denote the terrible judgment of God on the priests; or his presence, as leaving the Jews and coming to the Gentiles. The terrible sound of the cherubim's wings, heard even to the outer court, ver. 5, may denote the terrible judgments of God on the Jews, heard of among the heathen; or the gospel published by the apostles to the Gentiles. 13. I plainly discerned that every providential dispensation, and every particular church, was under the direction and government of some superior being, even God himself. [See further explication of cherubims, wheels, &c., on ch. 1.]

LORD'S house, which looketh eastward: and, behold, at the door of the gate [c]five and twenty men; among whom I saw Jaazaniah the son of Azur, and Pelatiah the son of Benaiah, [d]princes of the people.

2 Then said he unto me, Son of man, these are the men that [e]devise mischief,[1] and give wicked counsel in this city;

3 Which say, [g]It is not near; let us build houses:[2] this[h] city is the caldron, and we be the flesh.[3]

4 ¶ Therefore [i]prophesy against them, prophesy, O son of man.

5 And the Spirit of the LORD [j]fell upon me, and said unto me, Speak; Thus saith the LORD, Thus[k] have ye said, O house of Israel: for [l]I know the things that come into your mind, every one of them.

6 Ye[m] have multiplied your slain in this city, and ye have filled the streets thereof with the slain.

7 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [o]Your slain whom ye have laid in the midst of it, they are the flesh, and this city is the caldron; but I[p] will bring you forth out of the midst of it.

8 Ye[q] have feared the sword; and I will bring a sword upon you, saith the Lord GOD.

9 And[r] I will bring you out of the midst thereof, and deliver you into the [s]hands of strangers, and will execute judgments [t]among you.

10 Ye shall [u]fall by the sword: I will judge you in the [v]border[4] of Israel; and [w]ye shall know that I am the LORD.

11 This[y] city shall not be your caldron, neither shall ye be the flesh in the midst thereof; but I will judge you in the border of Israel:[5] executed my judgments, but [a]have done after the manners of the heathen that are round about you.

13 ¶ And it came to pass, [b]when I prophesied, that [c]Pelatiah, the son of Benaiah, [d]died:[7] then [e]fell I down upon my face, and cried with a loud voice, and said, Ah, Lord GOD! wilt thou make a full end of the remnant of Israel?

14 ¶ Again[g] the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

15 Son of man, thy brethren,[8] even thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and all the house of Israel wholly, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, [h]Get you far from the LORD; unto us is this land given in possession.

16 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Although [i]I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as [j]a little sanctuary[9] in the countries where they shall come.

17 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD, I will even [k]gather you from the people, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel.[1]

18 And they shall come thither, and they shall [l]take away all the detestable things thereof, and all the abominations thereof, from thence.

19 And [n]I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the [o]stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an [p]heart of flesh;

20 That[q] they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: [r]and they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

representing the washing of regeneration, stood on the right side, 1 Ki. 7. 39.—There also were the candlesticks, representing gospel light, 1 Ki. 7. 49. On the right side of the altar stood the angel that heralded the Messiah, Lu. 1. 11: and on the right side of the sepulchre, the angel that announced and testified his resurrection, Mar. 16. 5. From these facts it will be easy to gather why the cherubim, either the representatives of the 'ministering spirits, that minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation,' or the emblems of the church of the redeemed, represented by her apostolic messengers, should take their place on the 'right side of the house,' which was also the side of the ship upon which our Lord directed his disciples to cast their net, Jn. 21. 6,—the directory for their conduct when they act as 'fishers of men.' See also Mat. 7. 6. C.

Ver. 11. They went upon their four sides. That is, they went east, west, north, or south, as the Spirit guided: and that in the universal and heavenly sense, and not in the mere local and earthly sense of horizontal motion on one fixed plane. They expatiated equally through 'the height and the depth, the length and the breadth' of the providence and grace of the Lord. C.

Ver. 14. Cherub. The word 'cherub' being here substituted for 'ox' in the former vision, ch. 1. 10, has led to the opinion that the cherubims in the temple were delineated with the faces of oxen and wings of birds—emblems of peace, patience, strength, and labour, combined with alacrity. This opinion, however, is rendered somewhat doubtful by the mention of cherubims and oxen as separate species, 1 Ki. 7. 29, but these may have been mere oxen, and not winged oxen, the one setting forth the alacrity that gives perfection to the labour of the other. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How glorious and majestic are the appearances of God in his providence or church! Awful is the ministration of angels or messages of faithful ministers! And terrible are the denunciations of JEHOVAH'S wrath, especially against apostate professors! And deep the concern of Jesus Christ and his angels and ministers in the execution of it! He hath all judgment committed to him; and at his last coming he will scatter his coals of fire over our earth, and for ever over the world of the ungodly. Harmonious and uniform, steady and regular, are the motions of Providence, and the divine management of churches amidst all their variations. All things are seen by God's all seeing eye, and act constantly by his irresistible energy.—But by slow degrees, and in seeming aversion, doth he remove his gracious presence and ordinances from a people, as one glad to return upon their gospel repentance and humble requests.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 2, 3. They contrive schemes for the defence of the city, and encourage the people to rebel in defiance of God's threatenings, pretending that the Chaldeans will not in their times be able to take the city, or pluck them out of it. 6–11. Since you have seduced the people to stand out against the Chaldeans, contrary to the direction of God, therefore the most of them are slain, and become like flesh in a pot; and the Chaldeans shall carry you ringleaders in wickedness out of Jerusalem to Riblah in Syria, or to Babylon, and there barbarously kill you. 15–19. It is for these your brethren in Chaldea you should pray, who are ridiculed by the Jews at Jerusalem as voluntary forsakers of the Lord, his land and worship, and forfeitors of their property to such as maintained their station and interest in Canaan.—To these, in their scattered condition, will I be a protector, and will accept their worship as well as if at Jerusalem. These will I gather together and restore to their country in due time; purge from their idolatries; renew in all the faculties of their souls, and change their stubborn, rebellious, and incorrigible dispositions into those which are tender, tractable, and pliable.

Ver. 1. Five and twenty men. The Jewish senate, or Sanhedrim, consisted of six representatives or heads of each tribe, in all seventy-two, but usually called the Seventy; these were all discovered to have secretly turned idolaters, ch. 8. 11, 12. Next, the LORD discovered to the prophet twenty-five (more than one-third of the whole) who had turned their backs upon the temple, and openly and avowedly become sun-worshippers and abettors of violence and bloodshed, ch. 8. 16, 17. See ver. 6. These seem to be the twenty-five evil counsellors, now discovered and denounced. C.

Ver. 7. Your slain, &c. The prophets and other innocent persons slain in the times of Manasseh—they have found Jerusalem indeed a caldron—but 'I will bring you forth out of the midst of it,' ver. 11, and adjudge you to many deaths—the living death of cowards, ver. 8; the drudgery of slaves, ver. 9, the vain regrets of exiles, and the pitiless execution of a foreign sword, ver. 10. C.

Ver. 15. The idolatrous citizens of Jerusalem, so far from desiring the return of their exiled brethren, 'their kinsmen according to the flesh,' were averse to their return, and determined to retain the entire possession of the land. Such is covetousness—defacing every record even of divine right, and tearing asunder every tie of relationship and affection. C.

Ver. 17. This prediction began to be fulfilled in the days of Nehemiah and Ezra; which partial gathering was a type or specimen of that great and final restoration to their land, and conversion to Jesus, with which the prophecies so constantly abound. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The higher men are in office, the more criminal is their unfaithfulness. Wicked counsellors hurry a deluded people to the precipice of ruin. But they who put far from them the evil day, will find it terribly surprise them before they are aware. Mockery at God's words will quickly end in misery. It is comabominations, [u]I will recompense their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord GOD.

22 ¶ Then[v] did the cherubims lift up their wings, and the wheels beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

23 And[x] the glory of the LORD went up from the midst of the city, and stood upon the mountain which is on the east side of the city.[2]

24 ¶ Afterwards the spirit [y]took me up, and brought me in a vision by the Spirit of God into [z]Chaldea, to them of the captivity: so the vision that I had seen [a]went up from me.

25 Then[b] I spake unto them of the captivity all the things that the LORD had showed me.

THE word of the LORD also came unto me, saying,

2 Son[a] of man, thou dwellest in the midst of a[b] rebellious house, [c]which have eyes to see, and see not; they have ears to hear, and hear not: for they are a rebellious house.[1]

3 Therefore, thou son of man, [d]prepare thee [2]stuff[3] for removing, and remove [e]by day in their sight; and thou shalt remove from thy place to another place in their sight: [g]it may be they will consider, though they be a rebellious house.

4 Then shalt thou bring forth thy stuff by day in their sight, as stuff for removing: and thou shalt go forth [h]at even[4] in their sight, as they that go forth into[5] captivity.

5 Dig thou[6] through the wall in their sight, and carry out thereby.

6 In their sight shalt thou bear it upon thy shoulders, and carry it forth in the twilight: thou shalt [i]cover thy face,[7] that thou see not the ground; for I have set thee [j]for a sign unto the house of Israel.

7 And[k] I did so as I was commanded: I brought forth my stuff by day, as stuff for captivity, and in the even I [8]digged[9] through the wall with mine hand; I brought it forth in the twilight, and I bare it upon my shoulder in their sight.

2 The Shekinah glory which had so long rested on the ark, between the cherubims, in the most holy place, is here represented as taking a final departure from Jerusalem. It went, so to speak, in stages:—first, it left the holy of holies and stood over the threshold of the temple or shrine (ch. 10. 4); then it rose up from the threshold and rested on the cherubims (ver. 18); then it was conveyed until it stood over the great east gate which opened from the inner to the outer court (ver. 19); then it rose out of the city altogether, was wafted across the Kidron valley, and stood on the summit of the Mount of Olives, as stated in this 23d verse. How sad is this whole recital! The Lord withdrawing gradually, and as if reluctantly, from his temple, his city, and his chosen people, and thus delivering them over to the fury of their enemies.—P.

3 Jeremiah had foretold (Je. 32. 4) that Zedekiah's eyes should behold the king; and here Ezekiel asserts he shall not see the city of Babylon; and Josephus relates that Zedekiah, holding these prophecies for contradictions, concluded to believe neither. Both, however, proved true. He was taken to Riblah, where he saw Nebuchadnezzar, who put out his eyes; and thence he was carried to Babylon, where he died.—Von. When statements can be proved contradictory to facts or first principles, then are they resolutely to be denied; for, by such contradictions, they are certainly proved untrue. But where the statements refer to different circumstances, or different aspects of the same subject, the contradiction may be merely apparent, and will form no excuse for the heedless and self-willed infidelity that neglects examination and despises evidence.—C.

mon for Satan to make sinners look on their punishment as either doubtful or distant. Ministers have therefore need to be exceedingly bold and faithful, in warning self-flatterers and deceivers of others. And for this God sometimes renders some unexpected monuments of his justice, that others may hear and learn, and do no more so wickedly.—Proud transgressors often disclaim and detest their inferiors in guilt, and insult such as, in obedience to God, have given place unto wrath. To be banished from public ordinances is heavy to gracious souls; but God's presence and acceptance can more than balance the want. And great is the mercy when remarkable pardons, regeneration, and reformation coincide with and prepare for remarkable outward deliverances. But however loath God be to proceed, the obstinately wicked shall never pass unpunished. When sinners have filled up the measure of their iniquity, he will be glorified in their torment.—The most remarkable visions of God here are but short-lived. But it is of great use when ministers faithfully impart to others what themselves have heard and learned of the Father.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 27. There is an impatient interpretation of prophecy which is not satisfied unless predicted events can be shown to be just at hand—and this is near akin to enthusiasm. But there is also a procrastinating interpretation, that removes all predicted events to an indefinite distance—and this is near akin to infidelity. The prayerful and attentive comparison of the 'sure word of prophecy,' with 'the (existing) signs of the times'—a patient searching for the mind, and waiting for the work of the Lord—learning, not dogmatizing—repentance of personal sins whilst denouncing the sins of others—are essential to all who profit themselves or others by 'this light (of prophecy) that shineth in a dark place.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Ministers ought to accommodate themselves, not only to the weakness, but even to the wilfulness of their hearers. They ought cheerfully to comply with the most difficult and self-debasing method which God directs for promoting his glory or the welfare of souls. It is necessary that we be affected ourselves with the truths with which we wish to affect others. And we have need to sit loose to this world, and be always preparing to leave it.—God exactly observes what entertainment is given to his ministers or messages, and is highly displeased if they are overlooked or contemned. It is easy for him to take the greatest in his snares, and to make the most hardened sinners either glorify him by their distinguished destruction, or by their conversion and candid acknowledgments of sin.—It is just that they who abuse plenty should be punished with want. Anxious care and slavish terrors can strangely imbitter our comforts, and render them sore judgments. The decay of virtue in 20 And[g] the cities that are inhabited shall be laid waste, and the land shall be desolate, and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

21 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

22 Son of man, what is that proverb that ye have in the land of Israel, saying, [h]The days are prolonged,[7] and every vision faileth?

23 Tell them therefore, Thus saith the Lord GOD, I [i]will make this proverb to cease, and they shall no more use it as a proverb in Israel; but say unto them, [j]The days are at hand, and the effect of every vision.[8]

24 For[k] there shall be no more any vain vision nor flattering divination within the house of Israel.

25 For I am the LORD: [l]I will speak, and the word that I shall [m]speak shall come to pass; it shall be no more prolonged: for in your days, O rebellious house, will I say the word, and will perform it, saith the Lord GOD.

26 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

27 Son of man, behold, they of the house of Israel say, The vision that he seeth is [o]for many days to come, and he prophesieth of the times that are far off.

28 Therefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, [p]There shall none of my words be prolonged any more; but the word which I have spoken shall be [q]done, saith the Lord GOD.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 The reproof of lying prophets, 10 and their untempered mortar. 17 Of prophetesses and their pillows.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, prophesy [a]against the prophets[1] of Israel that prophesy, and say thou unto them that prophesy[2] out of their own hearts,[3] Hear ye the word of the LORD;

3 Thus saith the Lord GOD, Woe unto the foolish prophets, that follow[4] their own spirit, and[5] have seen nothing![6]

4 O Israel, thy prophets are [b]like the foxes[7] in the deserts.[8]

5. Ye[c] have not gone up into the gaps,[9] neither made up[1] the hedge for the house of Israel, to [d]stand in the battle in [e]the day of the LORD.

6 They[g] have seen vanity and lying divination, saying, The LORD saith: and the LORD hath not sent them: and they have made others [h]to hope that they would confirm the word.

7 Have ye not seen a vain vision, and have ye not spoken a lying divination, whereas ye say, The LORD saith it; [i]albeit I have not spoken?

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Because ye have spoken vanity, and [j]seen lies, therefore, behold, I am against you, saith the Lord GOD.

9 And[k] mine hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity, and that divine lies: they [l]shall not be in the assembly[2] of my people, neither shall they [m]be written in the writing of the house of Israel, neither shall they enter into the [o]land of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

10 Because, even because they have [p]seduced my people, saying, [q]Peace, and there was no peace; and one built up a wall,[3] and, lo, others [r]daubed it with untempered mortar:[4]

11 Say unto them which daub it with untempered mortar, that it shall fall: [s]there shall be an overflowing shower; and ye, O great hailstones, shall fall; and a stormy wind shall rend it.

12 Lo, when the wall is fallen, [t]shall it not be said unto you, Where is the daubing wherewith ye have daubed it?

13 Therefore[u] thus saith the Lord GOD, I will even rend it with a stormy wind in my fury; and there shall be an overflowing shower in mine anger, and [v]great hailstones, in my fury, to consume it.

14 So will I break down the wall that ye have daubed with untempered mortar, and bring it down to the ground, so that [x]the foundation thereof shall be discovered, and it shall [y]fall, and [z]ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof: and [a]ye shall know that I am the LORD.

15 Thus[b] will I accomplish my wrath upon the wall, and upon them that have daubed it with untempered mortar; and will say unto you, The wall is no more, neither they that daubed it;

8 The days of fulfilment are at hand—they have already come, and the substance of every vision is realized. Ver. 24, 25 are explanatory of this statement. The length of time between the partial captivity under Jehoiachin and the predicted destruction of the city and temple, was so great that the people doubted the truth of the predictions, and even turned them into a mocking proverb. Ezekiel meets this by another proverbial saying full of meaning.—P.

The 'untempered mortar' or rather, as the word signifies, 'falsehood,' with which the false prophets tried to cover it, and thus conceal its defects, represents the appearance of divine sanction which they attempted to give it by pretended revelations from heaven.—P.

* 'This,' says Hengstenberg, 'is explained by the fact that the false prophets had at that time absolutely the upper hand, and accommodated themselves simply as the prophets. Jeremiah in Jerusalem, and Ezekiel among the exiles, stood as individuals over a great multitude, and not only so, but the false prophets alone had public recognition as prophets of Israel, at least in the capital, while the true prophets were regarded as peculiar, and had the government and the spirit of the age, and the people absolutely against them.' Such a state of things is unfortunately not peculiar to one age or nation. True religion is generally opposed by worldly politicians. The spirit of the age, being a spirit generated by sinful human nature, cannot accord with the spirit of divine truth.—P.

nations brings along with it the decay of everything valuable, or a curse on what remains. And if once neighbours, by fraud, oppression, and murder, devour one another, let them expect that God will plague them with common devourers; and that he will make himself known, either in the terrors of his wrath to the impenitent, or in the riches of his grace to such as humble themselves under his mighty hand. How dreadful is it when corrupt speeches become common proverbs, by which Satan hardens sinners against the words or ways of God! But they who will not believe God's warnings, will too late be terribly convinced by the infliction of his judgments. And let sinners put the evil day as far from them as they please, his threatenings will in due time prevail, and vindicate themselves.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 2–6. According to their own inclinations and affections, they publish their own imaginations without any warrant from me, and are extremely crafty, covetous, hardened, and mischievous. But they never do anything to reform the people, or to prevent judgments, or for the security and defence of church or state, which can enable them to hold out in the day of the Lord's judgments. Yea, their visions are but false and counterfeit, though, by their high pretences to inspiration, they have made the credulous people to believe their predictions will be accomplished. 9–16. I will manifest my power in punishing these false prophets, and will expel them from among my people, and I will deny them a return from captivity, because some of them affirmed their seductions for truths, and others supported them by specious but weak pretences. Yea, the Chaldeans, by their desolating ravage and fury, shall disprove their counterfeit oracles, and every argument used to support them. 18–21. They, by their signs of pillows and kerchiefs, and especially by their flattering predictions of peace and prosperity, lull all ranks into vain confidence and carnal security. By fitting their predictions to every one's humour, they promote their destruction instead of saving them. For the most pitiful rewards, they pretend my name and authority to countenance their abominable flatteries, denouncing destruction to those in Babylon whom I will preserve; and promising life and liberty to those in Jerusalem whom I will destroy. Therefore will I so refute and expose their delusions that no one shall be in danger of being ensnared thereby; and I will make them more and more abhorred than ever they were loved or feared.

Ver. 5. Gaps. Have not defended the breaches effected by heretical and ungodly men in the doctrinal and moral defences which the Lord has raised for the protection of truth and godliness, Phi. 1. 7, 17; have not interceded, like Moses, standing in the breaches which an offended God has threatened, or made, in 16 To wit, the prophets of Israel, which [c]prophesy concerning Jerusalem, and which [d]see visions of peace for her, and there is no peace, saith the Lord GOD.

17 ¶ Likewise, thou son of man, [e]set thy face against the [g]daughters[5] of thy people, which prophesy out of their own heart; and prophesy thou against them,

18 And say, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Woe to the women that [h]sew pillows to all arm-holes,[6] and make kerchiefs upon the head of every stature, [i]to hunt souls! Will ye hunt the souls of my people, and [j]will ye save the souls alive that come unto you?

19 And will ye [k]pollute me among my people for handfuls of barley, and for pieces of bread, [l]to slay the souls that should not die, and to save the souls alive that should not live, by your lying to my people that hear your lies?

20 Wherefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [m]Behold, I am against your pillows, wherewith ye there hunt the souls [7]to make them fly,[8] and [o]I will tear them from your arms, and will let the souls go, even the souls that ye hunt to make them fly.

21 Your kerchiefs[9] also will I tear, and deliver my people out of your hand, and they shall be no more in your hand to be hunted; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

22 Because [p]with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made sad, and [q]strengthened the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked way, by[1] promising him life;[2]

23 Therefore ye [r]shall see no more vanity, nor divine divinations: for I will deliver my people[s] out of your hand; and [t]ye shall know that I am the LORD.

7 The nature and force of the argument in this passage will best be understood by comparing it with Ge. xviii., where Abraham pleads for the cities of the plain, and where the Lord says, in answer to his last appeal, 'I will not destroy it for ten's sake.' The sin of Israel was so great, that had Noah, Daniel, and Job dwelt in it—three of the holiest men of sacred history—even their presence could not have saved the land. They themselves might have escaped, but divine vengeance must descend upon the country. Daniel was a contemporary of Ezekiel. He was one of his fellow-captives, and had doubtless already distinguished himself by devotion to God.—P.

4 Therefore [h]speak unto them, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Every man of the house of Israel that setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumbling-block of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to the prophet, I the LORD [i]will answer him that cometh according to the multitude of his [2]idols;

5 That[j] I may take the house of Israel in their own heart,[3] because [k]they are all estranged from me through their idols.

6 ¶ Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Repent, and turn yourselves[4] from your idols; and [l]turn away your faces from all your abominations.

7 For every one of the house of Israel, or of the [n]stranger[5] that sojourneth in Israel, which [o]separateth himself from me, and setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumbling-block of his iniquity before his face, and [p]cometh to a prophet to inquire of him concerning me; [q]I the LORD will answer him by myself.

8 And[r] I will set my face against that man, and will make him a [s]sign and a proverb, and [t]I will cut him off from the midst of my people; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

9 And if the prophet be deceived when he hath spoken a thing, I the LORD [u]have deceived that prophet; and [v]I will stretch out my hand upon him, and will destroy him from the midst of my people Israel.

10 And [x]they shall bear the punishment of their iniquity: the punishment of the prophet shall be even as the punishment of him that seeketh unto him;

11 That[y] the house of Israel may go no more astray from me, neither be polluted any more with all their transgressions; but that they may be my people, and I may be their God, saith the Lord GOD.

12 ¶ The word of the LORD came again to me, saying,

13 Son of man, when the land sinneth against me by trespassing grievously, then will I stretch out mine hand upon it, and [z]will break the staff of the bread thereof, and will send famine upon it, and will cut off man and beast from it:

REFLECTIONS.—God never places any in offices for which he does not qualify them. Nor have covetous and men-pleasing preachers any proper evidence of a divine mission. How daring and blasphemous is it to counterfeit commissions from God, or to father the devil's falsehoods, flatteries, and impieties upon him! Very dreadful shortly shall be the condition of such. And they who will not be awed by God's threatenings, forfeit his promised blessings. Alas! how terrible are the winds and storms of judgment that God has in readiness to plague his opposers! and none shall share more dreadfully in them than deceitful preachers who have flattered their hearers in wickedness. Shamefully shall they be stripped of their usurped honour, and exposed to indignation and wrath. And all their arts of seduction—their tormenting of the godly and encouraging of the wicked—will at last redound to their

TEMPLE AT OLD CORINTH—TEMPLE OF NEPTUNE, THE ONLY RUIN STANDING OF THE ONCE BEAUTIFUL CITY OF CORINTH. [EZEKIEL, xiv: 3.]—"Son of man, these men have set up their idols in their hearts, and put the stumbling block of their iniquity before their face; shall I be inquired of at all by them?" The idolatries which corrupted the Israelites in the time of the prophets they learned from other nations. ON Tuesday, May 29th, 1894, the artist and the writer left Athens by train early in the morning, passed by Eleusis, and over the Corinthian canal, and reached Old Corinth in time for dinner. This picture was taken about twelve o'clock. In no city in the world did men set up idols of greater splendor and put stumbling blocks of their iniquities more completely before their face than in Corinth, the city which at the time Ezekiel wrote his prophecy was the most corrupt and wealthy in Greece. All that remains of it is the temple of Neptune, seven venerable columns of which we see in the picture.

21 ¶ For thus saith the Lord GOD, How much more when[1] I send [l]my four sore judgments upon Jerusalem, the sword, and the famine, and the noisome beast, and the pestilence, to cut off from it man and beast?

22 ¶ Yet,[n] behold, therein shall be left a remnant that shall be brought forth, both sons and daughters; behold, they shall come forth unto you, and ye shall see [o]their way and their doings: and [p]ye shall be comforted concerning the [q]evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, even concerning all that I have brought upon it.

23 And they shall comfort you, when ye see their ways and their doings: and ye shall know that [r]I have not done [s]without cause[2] all that I have done in it, saith the Lord GOD.

* The force of the metaphor lies in the fact, that the only value of the vine is in its fruit. If it be fruitless it is absolutely worthless. Israel was a vine. The Lord had planted it. It had proved entirely fruitless, and it was consequently without value. The wood of other trees may be employed for some good purpose, but nothing can be made of the vine, branch or stock. It is only fit for the fire. 'The application is this:—A people to whom God makes himself known, and who turn his grace into lasciviousness, sink far beneath those who have not known God. A heathen nation may have still much good and a future; degenerate Israel, that dwells at present at Jerusalem (this limitation is given by ver. 6, and by the nature of the thing), is utterly miserable, and must perish without remedy.' 3 Or, when I looked upon thee.
¶ This is one of the boldest and most striking figures in the whole book. It exhibits in a very touching manner the depth of Israel's sin and ingratitude. Jerusalem is represented as a new-born female infant abandoned by its parents; but taken, tended, nursed, & trained with even more than a parent's tenderness and care by Jehovah. On reaching maturity she becomes the bride of her preserver; and is liberally supplied with everything her heart could desire. But instead of returning love and devotion, she basely gives her affections to others, and becomes an adulteress. The terrible judgments inflicted on Israel were thus most richly deserved.—P.

3 Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work? or will men take a pin of it to hang any vessel thereon?

4 Behold,[b] it is cast into the fire for fuel; [c]the fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned. Is it meet[1] for any work?

5 Behold, when it was whole it was meet[2] for no work: how much less shall it be meet yet for any work, when the fire hath devoured it, and it is burned?

6 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [d]As the vine-tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel, so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem.[3]

7 And[e] I will set my face against them; [g]they shall go out from one fire, and another fire shall devour them; and [h]ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I set my face against them.

8 And[i] I will make the land desolate, because they have committed a trespass,[4] saith the Lord GOD.

own infamy and ruin. And it is a great mercy to be delivered from such as would impose on or tyrannize over our conscience.

CHAPTER XIV. Ver. 3–10. They have given their idols the highest place in their esteem and affections, and have set them up before them as objects of worship.—If any such consult me by a prophet, let them expect nothing but fearful denunciations of judgments, answerable to their abominable idolatries, and the horrid wickedness of their heart; answerable likewise to my glorious perfections, which I will magnify in making them the lasting monuments of just indignation.—Their false prophets will I give up to the delusions of their own heart, that I may fearfully destroy them and those who consult them. 21–23. Either the deep repentance and penitent acknowledgments of those who should be brought to Babylon, or their sinful obduracy and horrid vices, would convince these who had been formerly carried captive, that God had justly desolated their country, and make them glad that themselves had been so early carried captive.

Ver. 7. Which separateth himself from me. The Israelites did not purpose to 'separate' themselves from God—nay, they came with apparent teachableness to receive instruction from his prophet—yet God pronounced them 'separate,' because he had said. 'Thou shalt have no other gods before me.' An awful lesson to those churches both in the East and the West that have combined pictures, images, relics, and tutelary saints with the worship of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; and not less awful to those of the Reformed churches, who, rejecting all outward idolatry, have yet set up in their hearts the love of the world in any of its idolatrous forms, Col. 3. 5; 1 Jn. 2. 15, 16; 5. 21. C.—Answer him by myself. Not by a reply from the prophet, but by a judgment inflicted by my own hand.—Note, This is the case with all who are seekers after religious knowledge, but careless of religious practice, or living in the indulgence of some secret sin. Let them know assuredly 'their sin will find them out,' and their Judge who seeth in secret will punish them openly. C.

Ver. 9. I the Lord have deceived that prophet. God does not influentially deceive the prophet into an error; but if, like Balaam, the prophet 'love the wages of unrighteousness,' then God adjudges him to be given over to the counsel of his own heart, Ro. 24. 28; and if, like Judas, he be a traitor to his country or his God, God adjudges him to be given up to Satanic possession, Lu. 22. 3–6, and so he becomes at once the dupe and the propagator of lies. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The very worst of men too often hypocritically put on specious appearances of religion. But it is at their peril to mock God, or attempt imposing upon him. His judgments will fall upon them answerably to what they really are in his sight. Their sin, shame, and misery are all owing to themselves. And of all sinners, the doom of hypocrites and deceitful preachers will be the most terrible. If we serve idols, our heart cannot fail to be estranged from God, and we must be for ever separated from him. If we love to be flattered in our sins, God will justly give us up to such flattery. And dreadful at last shall be the punishments of sin on earth are intended to prevent others from the commission of it. Nor does God ever take men into covenant with himself without purging them from their odious iniquities. National sins, carried on to an enormous height, cannot long fail to bring on national judgments. And if men who receive distinguished favours notoriously rebel, they may expect complicated judgments. God often averts general calamities for the sake of a few, who, in the general corruption, are singularly upright, pious, humble, and mighty in prayer. But if nations be singularly ripened for ruin, such can only obtain their own deliverance, or a blessing on their own share in the common calamity. Yet how pleasant it is in evil days to see sinners become monuments of mercy, and to see such benefited by his judgments and repenting of their sin! And it is well when God is not only justified, but glorified, in the manifested wisdom and goodness of his afflictive dispensations.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 2. Vine-tree. Israel is beautifully compared to a vine, spreading from the Mediterranean to the Euphrates, and covering the hills with its shadow, Ps. 80. 8; and our Lord takes it as an emblem of his body and his members, and thou wast cast out in the open field, to the loathing of thy person, in the day that thou wast born.

6 ¶ And when I passed by thee, and [g]saw thee polluted[5] in thine own blood, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, [h]Live; yea, I said unto thee, when thou wast in thy blood, Live.

10 I[q] clothed thee also with broidered work, and shod thee with badgers' skin, and I girded thee about with fine linen, and I covered thee with silk.

11 I decked thee also with ornaments, and I put bracelets upon thy hands, and a chain on thy neck.

REFLECTIONS.—In great condescension, God often explains his providences for the satisfaction of his servants and people. But none are more unprofitable than degenerate professors of the true religion. They who will not be useful for the glory of God and his grace, must be made fuel for the fire of his wrath; and must pass from one trouble into another till they be consumed. And the complete ruin of his implacable adversaries will manifest his excellencies, as well as the perfect happiness of his obedient friends.

CHAPTER XVI. The whole of this chapter emblematically represents the original sinfulness and misery, the gracious conversion, the fearful apostasy, severe corrections, and wise recovery of the gospel church, and of good men. Ver. 3-5. Abraham and Sarah were originally idolaters; and their posterity lived in Egypt most wickedly and wretchedly. 6–14. These figurative expressions represent all the favours which God heaped upon them in the days of Moses, Joshua, David, and Solomon; their deliverance from Egypt; preservation in the wilderness; the adoption of them by covenant into his family; giving them his oracles, ordinances, tabernacle, and temple; multiplication of their numbers; rendering them his only church, and a most wealthy, powerful, prosperous, and famous nation. 15–34. Proud of their privileges, they abandoned themselves to idolatry, and employed the wealth which God had given them in making and serving idols everywhere throughout their country. Their first-born children, who were sacred to God, they sacrificed to Molech. By costly presents they courted the alliance of their heathen neighbours, Egyptians, Assyrians, Chaldeans, &c.; and insatiably and impudently vied with them in their idolatries. 35–43. For their filthy idolatries, murder of their innocent infants, shameless lewdness, base ingratitude, and long-repeated provocations of God, the Chaldeans, and afterwards the Syro-Grecians and Romans, shall terribly destroy them, and lay desolate their country, and thus force them to cease from their wickedness. 44–59. In loathing God their covenanted Husband, and murdering their children, they were as wicked as the ancient Canaanites. And however they had once condemned the ten tribes which dwelt on the north, and the Sodomites who dwelt on the south-east of Judea, they now exceeded them in the number of their idols, the enormities of their wickedness, and in sinning against more warnings, mercies, and judgments. 60–63. In pursuance of my covenant made with Abraham, and in the wilderness, I will forgive their iniquities, render them deeply penitent for their sins, and receive them back to their land; and not by the ceremonial dispensation, but by the preaching of the gospel, will I convert not only the ten tribes, but the very worst of the heathens, to Christ, when they repent and believe.

Ver. 3. An Amorite. Not by descent, but by disposition; 'Amorite' signifying a rebel, which Abraham as an idolater (Jos. 24. 2) originally was, and as every man by nature is, till graciously 'quickened together with Christ,' Ep. 2. 1–5.—An Hittite—one that fears. A description which well applies to Sarah, and indicates her constitutional fear lest the promises of God would not be fulfilled—a fear arising from weakness of her faith, and which nothing but the grace of God could sustain against the misgivings of sense. C.

Ver. 10–14. These several things—broidered work, badgers' skins, linen, silk, &c.—are first to be considered as literal national attainments, the products of art and industry. And viewed as such, no doubt they are so often either idolized or dedicated to pride and vanity, that they appear unfit emblems of the humble graces of the Spirit. But to argue from the abuse, against the use of anything, is most unjust. Even the merely ornamental arts are not sinful in themselves, else God had not so employed them in the garniture of the temple, nor adduced them as evidences of his paternal kindness. It is by considering them as such, that all the evils that to many seem inseparable from manufactures, and all the pride so often exhibited in ornamental dress, are to be counteracted and remedied. He that 'gives God thanks' may make what he will; he that 'gives God thanks' may wear what he will. But without thankfulness, the rags of the beggar and the purple of the king are alike liable to conduct into sin. C.

Ver. 27. Daughters of the Philistines. This phrase is employed to indicate the degraded condition of Israel, whose once manly character had become so debased by idolatry and licentiousness, that the daughters of their enemies not only ruled over them, but despised them: and though heathens, were ashamed of their faithless apostasy. C.

Ver. 34. 'Adultery (ver. 32) and whoredom' are used for apostasy and idolatry, both because they imply a breach of the covenant whereby God said to Israel, 'Thy Maker is thine husband;' and because apostasy and idolatry were, in reality, but other names for the crimes charged, impurity constituting an essential part of all idolatrous worship. C.

Ver. 39. In ancient times the exposure of captives in a state of nakedness is frequently recorded as one among the glaring horrors of slavery. That such cruelty should have prevailed among idolatrous heathens needs not be wondered at; but, alas! that it ever should have prevailed among Christians! Alas! that nations calling themselves Christian, and states boasting of their freedom, should still legalize and practise the same abomination! Lord, open their eyes that they may see, and their hearts that they may feel and repent! C.

Ver. 41. By the Babylonish captivity, Judah was completely cured of her idolatry; and all that has yet been discovered of the remnants of the ten tribes of Israel, seems to represent them as returned to their attachment to the law of Moses; so that one stumbling-block to their reception of pure Christianity is taken out of the way, and their perversion to the Romish and Greek communions—which both, alas! still multiply their images and worship at their shrines—seems to be rendered impossible. C.

Ver. 56. The name of 'Sodom' is applied to Jerusalem, Is. 1. 10, because of her resemblance to that wicked city in luxury, impurity, pride, oppression, and other abominations. But here Sodom is not identified but contrasted with Jerusalem, see also ver. 46. Scott and other eminent expositors understand 'Sodom' as representing the Gentiles: but this cannot well be, as they have already been largely converted, while Jerusalem remains in unbelief. Piscator and others render the passage, 'If I shall return,' &c.; and understand it as saying, 'To restore thy captivity is not in my thoughts or purposes;' this, however, will not accord with the promise, ver. 60–63. Is not 'Sodom' rather to be taken literally as undoubtedly 'Samaria' is taken for 'Israel'), which is to be restored, and understood to mean Moab and Ammon, the descendants of Lot, who escaped out of Sodom when the LORD miraculously destroyed it, and 'set it forth as an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire?' Jude 7. See Je. 48. 47; 49. 6, where the restoration of these two nations is expressly promised. And though human history be unable to distinguish them among men, this ignorance cannot interfere with the knowledge and purposes of God. C.

TEMPLE OF JUPITER OLYMPUS, ATHENS—SEVEN HUNDRED YEARS IN PROCESS OF CONSTRUCTION. [EZEKIEL, xvi: 24, 25]—"That thou hast also built unto thee an eminent place, and hast made thee an high place in every street. Thou hast built thy high place at every head of the way, and hast made thy beauty to be abhorred." Ezekiel in this sixteenth chapter speaks of the extraordinary love of God toward Jerusalem, and of her deep degradation in departing from Him in search of the gods of wood and stone worshipped by surrounding nations. We give a picture of a ruined temple in Athens erected in honor of Jupiter, the most powerful of all the gods of the ancients. The greatest temple of Athens was that to Jupiter Olympus. It is at the south-east of the Acropolis, and near the right bank of the Ilissus. This temple was begun by Pisistratus, tyrant of Athens, who lived between B. C. 560 and 527, which was probably before the death of Ezekiel. This great edifice was seven hundred years in process of construction, delivered them to cause them [t]to pass through the fire for them?

22 And in all thine abominations and thy whoredoms thou hast not remembered [j]the days of thy youth, when thou wast naked and bare, and wast polluted in thy blood.

23 And it came to pass, [k]after all thy wickedness, (woe, woe unto thee! saith the Lord GOD,)

24 That thou hast also built unto thee an eminent[1] place,[2] and hast made thee an high place in every street.

25 Thou hast built thy high place at every head[l] of the way, and hast made thy beauty[3] to be abhorred, and hast opened thy feet to every one that passed by, and multiplied thy whoredoms.

26 Thou[m] hast also committed fornication with the Egyptians thy neighbours, great of flesh;[4] and hast increased thy whoredoms, to provoke me to anger.

27 Behold, therefore, [o]I have stretched out my hand over thee, and have diminished [p]thine ordinary food,[5] and delivered thee unto the will of them [q]that hate thee, the daughters[6] of the Philistines,[r] which are [s]ashamed of thy lewd way.

28 Thou hast played the whore also [t]with the Assyrians, because thou wast unsatiable; yea, thou hast played the harlot with them, and yet couldest not be satisfied.

29 Thou[u] hast, moreover, multiplied thy fornication in the land of Canaan unto Chaldea, and yet thou wast not satisfied herewith.

30 How[v] weak is thine heart,[7] saith the Lord GOD, seeing thou doest all these things, the work of [z]an imperious whorish woman;

31 In that thou [y]buildest thine[8] eminent place[9] in the head of every way, and makest thine high place in every street; and hast not been as an harlot, in that thou scornest hire;

32 But as [z]a wife that committeth adultery, which taketh strangers instead of her husband!

33 They give gifts to all whores; but [a]thou givest thy gifts to all thy lovers, and hirest[1] them, that they may come unto thee on every side for thy whoredom.

34 And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy whoredoms, whereas none followeth thee to commit whoredoms: and in that thou givest a reward, and no reward is given unto thee; therefore thou art contrary.

35 ¶ Wherefore, O [b]harlot, [c]hear the word of the LORD:

36 Thus saith the Lord GOD, [d]Because thy filthiness was poured out, and thy nakedness discovered[e] through thy whoredoms with thy lovers,[2] and with all the idols of thy abominations, and by the blood of thy children, which thou didst give unto them;

37 Behold, therefore, [g]I will gather all thy lovers, with whom thou hast taken pleasure, and all them that thou hast loved, with all them that thou hast hated; I will even gather them round about against thee, and will [h]discover thy nakedness unto them, that they may see all thy nakedness.

38 And I will judge thee, as[3] women that break wedlock,[4] and [i]shed blood, are judged: and [j]I will give thee blood in fury and jealousy.

39 And I will also give thee into their hand, and [k]they shall throw down thine eminent place, and shall break down thy high places: they shall [l]strip thee also of thy clothes, and shall take thy fair jewels,[5] and leave thee naked and bare.

40 They[n] shall also bring up a company against thee, and they shall stone thee with stones, and [o]thrust thee through with their swords.

41 And they shall [p]burn thine houses with fire, and [r]execute judgments upon thee in the sight of many women: [s]and I will cause thee to cease from playing the harlot, and thou also shalt give no hire any more.

42 So[t] will I make my fury toward thee to rest, and my jealousy shall depart from thee, and I will be quiet, and will be no more angry.

43 Because thou hast [u]not remembered the days of thy youth, but hast [v]fretted[6] me in all these things; behold, therefore, [z]I also will recompense thy way upon thine head, saith the Lord GOD; and thou shalt not commit [y]this lewdness above all thine abominations.

44 ¶ Behold, every one that useth proverbs shall use this proverb against thee, saying, [z]As is the mother,[7] so is her daughter.

45 Thou art thy mother's daughter, that [a]loatheth her husband and her children; and thou art the sister of thy sisters, which loathed their husbands and their children: [b]your mother was an Hittite, and your father an Amorite.

46 And[c] thine elder sister[8] is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell at thy left hand: and thy younger sister,[9] that dwelleth at thy right hand,[1] is [d]Sodom and her [e]daughters.

47 Yet hast thou not walked after their ways, nor done after their abominations; but, as if that were a very little thing,[2] thou[g] wast corrupted more than they in all thy ways.

48 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, Sodom thy sister [h]hath not done, she nor her daughters, as thou hast done, thou and thy daughters.

49 Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom,[3] Pride,[i] fulness of bread, and abundance

* The situation of Sodom was retired and secure: the plain around it was exceedingly fertile, and the mildness of the climate tended to encourage indolence. 'Worldly prosperity often proves dangerous to the interests of virtue. It easily inflates its possessors with pride, and, leading them to abandon active habits of life, superinduces indulgence in those of idleness, than which universal experience proves that nothing can furnish greater occasion to the commission of sin.' History affords many and painful illustrations of this fact in regard to individuals as well as cities and nations. Wealth and prosperity are not always blessings; sometimes they entail misery and ruin on those who possess them.—F.

REFLECTIONS.—Ministers have great need to be faithful in representing to men the sinfulness of their heart and life, and the misery which attends it. But what an astonishing change is made upon them by union to Christ, justification, adoption, sanctification, and spiritual comfort! All our life, honour, safety, of idleness, was in her and in her daughters, neither[j] did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy.

50 And they were [k]haughty, and committed abomination before me: therefore [l]I took them away as I saw good.

51 Neither[m] hath Samaria committed half of thy sins; but thou hast multiplied thine abominations more than they, and hast justified thy sisters[4] in all thine abominations which thou hast done.

52 Thou[o] also, which hast judged[5] thy sisters, bear[p] thine own shame, for thy sins that thou hast committed more abominable than they: they are more righteous than thou; yea, be thou confounded also, and bear thy shame, in that thou hast justified thy sisters.

53 When I shall bring again their captivity, the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, and the captivity of Samaria and her daughters, then[6] will I bring again the captivity of thy captives in the midst of them:

54 That[q] thou mayest bear thine own shame, and mayest be confounded in all that thou hast done, in that thou art a comfort unto them.

55 When[r] thy sisters, Sodom and her daughters, shall return to their former estate, and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former estate, then thou and thy daughters shall return to your former estate.

56 For thy sister Sodom was [7]not [s]mentioned[8] by thy mouth in the day of thy pride,[9]

57 Before thy wickedness was discovered, as at[t] the time of thy reproach of the daughters of [1]Syria,[2] and all that are round about her, the daughters of the Philistines, which [u]despise[3] thee round about.

58 Thou[v] hast borne[4] thy lewdness and thine abominations, saith the LORD.

59 For thus saith the Lord GOD, [z]I will even deal with thee as [y]thou hast done, which hast despised[z] the oath in breaking the [a]covenant.[5]

60 ¶ Nevertheless, I will [b]remember [c]my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and [d]I will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant.[6]

61 Then[e] thou shalt remember thy ways, and be ashamed, when [g]thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder and thy younger: and I will give them unto thee for daughters, [h]but not by thy [i]covenant.[7]

62 And[j] I will establish my covenant with thee, and thou shalt know that I am the LORD:

63 That[k] thou mayest remember, and be confounded, and never open thy mouth any more because of thy shame, when I am pacified toward thee for all that thou hast done, saith the Lord GOD.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Under the parable of two eagles and a vine, 11 is showed God's judgment upon Zedekiah for revolting from Babylon to Egypt. 22 God promiseth to plant the cedar of the gospel.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,[1]

2 Son of man, put forth a [a]riddle, and speak a parable unto the house of Israel;

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord GOD, A great eagle[2] with great wings,[3] long-winged, full of feathers, which had divers [4]colours, [b]came unto Lebanon, and took the highest branch of the cedar:

4 He cropped off the top of his young [5]twigs, and carried it into a land of traffic;[6] he set it in a city of merchants.[7]

5 He took also of the seed of the land,[8] and planted it in a fruitful field;[9] he placed it by great waters, and set it as a willow-tree:

6 And [c]it grew, and became a spreading vine of low stature, whose branches turned toward him, and the roots thereof were under him: so it became a vine, and brought forth branches, and shot forth sprigs.

7 There was also another great eagle with great wings and many feathers;[1] and, behold, this vine did bend her roots toward him, and shot forth her branches toward him, that he might water it by the furrows of her [2]plantation.

8 It[d] was planted in a good soil[8] by great waters, that it might bring forth branches, and that it might bear fruit, that it might be a goodly vine.

9 Say thou, Thus saith the Lord GOD, [e]Shall it prosper? [g]shall he not pull up the roots thereof, and cut off the fruit thereof, that it wither? it shall wither in all the leaves of her perfection, and comeliness are the free gifts and almighty productions of our Redeemer: and these benefits are all infinitely enhanced from the deplorable condition in which he finds us. But the most shocking wickedness, perjury, idolatry, murder, yea, everything horrid, is produced by pride, ingratitude, and forgetfulness of God and of ourselves. Nor will apostate hypocrites grudge to sacrifice wealth, life, health, and honour to the service of devils and insatiable lusts. Not even the most abandoned monsters can vie with such in aggravated wickedness: and justly therefore the Lord brings upon them complicated judgments answerable to their complicated crimes; and makes their partners in sin their tormentors in punishment. If sinners will not be warned, they must be destroyed and lost. If they will make themselves vile by their sins, God lets them become more vile by their sufferings. But it is not all the terrors and punishments of time or eternity, but the pardoning and renewing grace of God, that can make men truly penitent for sin. O how infinite is his mercy to pardon and save those who have plunged themselves into the infinite depths of guilt and pollution! and soon shall that mercy be fully displayed in converting both Jews and Gentiles by his grace, and cordially uniting them in the one mystical body of Christ!

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 2–7. Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and Pharaoh-hophra king of Egypt, are represented as great eagles, because of their great power, high dignity, tyrannical murder, and oppression of their neighbours. Their great wings represent their extensive dominions. King Jeconiah, and his family and princes, carried to Babylon, were the highest branch carried into a land of traffic. Zedekiah made king by Nebuchadnezzar, as his sworn tributary, over the Jewish multitudes in Judea in a state of subjection to the Chaldeans, is the seed of the land planted with circumspection in a fruitful field, that it might be a vine of low stature. Its bending its roots and branches towards the other eagle, refers to his sending ambassadors to Pharaoh-hophra, for procuring troops to assist him against the Chaldeans. 22–24. Out of the royal family of David I will raise up the Messiah, exalt him to my right hand, and make him Head of his church and of all things to her; and to him shall multitudes of all nations be converted, for salvation and comfort, and become members of his church. And all the nations of the world shall remark my power in exalting and prospering my once despised church, and in bringing down her most powerful enemies, Chaldeans, Jews, Romans, Antichristians, or Turks.

10 Yea, behold, being planted, shall it prosper? shall[h] it not utterly wither,[4] when the east wind toucheth it? it shall wither in the furrows where it grew.

11 ¶ Moreover, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

12 Say now to the [i]rebellious house, [j]Know ye not what these things mean? tell them, [k]Behold, the king of Babylon is come to Jerusalem, and hath taken the king thereof, and the princes thereof, and led them with him to Babylon;

13 And hath taken of the king's seed, and made a covenant with him, and hath taken an oath of him:[5] he hath also taken the mighty of the land:[6]

14 That[l] the kingdom might be base, that it might not lift itself up, but that by keeping of his covenant it might stand.[7]

15 But[n] he rebelled against him, in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, that they might give him horses and much people. [o]Shall he prosper? shall he escape that doeth such things? or shall he break the covenant, and be delivered?

16 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, surely in the place where the king dwelleth that made him king, [p]whose oath he despised, and whose covenant he brake, even with him, [q]in the midst of Babylon, he shall die.

17 Neither[r] shall Pharaoh, with his mighty army and great company, make for him in the war, by casting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons:

18 Seeing he despised the oath by breaking the covenant, when, lo, he had [s]given his hand, and hath done all these things, he shall not escape.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, As I live, [t]surely mine oath that he hath despised, and my covenant that he hath broken, even it will I recompense upon his own head.[8]

CHAP. XVIII.

1 This chapter contains an exposition of a leading principle in the divine law; namely, that personal guilt alone entails punishment. It is quite true that sin often appears to be hereditary, and children appear to be punished for the guilt of their ancestors. This arises from the fact that parental training and evil example contribute largely and necessarily to the formation of character. Children are punished, not because their fathers sinned, but because they followed in their fathers' wicked ways. Thus the divine government is vindicated by the prophet against an impious imputation on the part of infidel Jews.—P.

21 And[y] all his fugitives with all his bands shall fall by the sword, and they that remain shall be [z]scattered toward all winds; and [a]ye shall know that I the LORD have spoken it.

22 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD, [b]I will also take of the highest branch[1] of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it [c]upon an high mountain and eminent:

23 In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it; [d]and it shall bring forth [2]boughs, and bear fruit, and be [e]a goodly cedar: and [g]under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell.

24 And all the trees of the field shall know that [h]I the LORD have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree,[3] have dried up the [i]green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish: I the LORD have spoken, and have done it.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 God reproveth the unjust parable of sour grapes. 5 He showeth how he dealeth with a just father: 10 with the wicked son of a just father: 14 with the just son of a wicked father: 19 with a wicked man repenting: 24 with a just man revolting. 25 He defendeth the equity of his dealings, 31 and exhorteth to repentance.

THE word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,

2 What[a] mean ye, that ye use this proverb concerning the land of Israel,[2] saying, The [b]fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge?

3 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel.

blematized by 'great waters,' because it derived its magnificence from the Euphrates and Tigris. As a willow—of little strength, easily bended, and deriving safety, not from its resistance, but its elasticity. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Ministers must turn themselves every way to promote the conviction or conversion of sinners; and plain similitudes are of great use for the illustration of divine truths, and impression of them upon men's minds. What a despicable appearance, even as ravenous beasts, do the mightiest conquerors and kings make before a great and righteous God! And if his providence reduce us to a low condition, it is our wisdom, and will be our comfort, to submit to our lot, and improve it in the best way we can. But it is dreadfully criminal and dangerous to violate oaths and covenants with God, or even with wicked men, as God is made witness and guarantee of the solemn transaction. Men's sinful evasions to extricate themselves do but involve them in more certain and tremendous ruin. And fatal experience will at last force sinners to believe God's threatenings. It is in vain to attempt restoring the credit of decayed families till God himself rise for their help. And it is infinitely to the glory of his sovereign grace that scenes of wickedness and ruin introduce exhibitions of Jesus Christ, and his eternal redemption and glory.

CHAPTER XVIII. As the observance of God's law was the covenanted condition upon which the Jews held the land of Canaan, and prospered in it, the rewards and punishments here mentioned may immediately respect temporal safety and prosperity annexed to sincere observance, and miseries annexed to gross violations, of God's law. It is certain the righteousness, from which a person can fully and finally fall away, ver. 24, 26, cannot consist in truly gracious dispositions of heart, or conduct in life, the saints being infallibly preserved in these, 1 Pe. 1. 5; Job 17. 9; Pr. 4. 18. And though men may reform their external behaviour, without supernatural influences from Christ, yet it is not supposed that they can truly repent of their sin, and renew their hearts, ver. 23, 30–32; but that it is their duty to have gracious and penitent hearts, and therefore to attend the ordinances of the gospel, and receive newness of heart and repentance, as the free gifts of Jesus Christ offered therein, and implanted by his Holy Spirit.

Ver. 2. This proverb of Israel threw the blame upon Adam in paradise; or those who murmured in the wilderness; or upon Jeroboam or Manasseh—and by misinterpreting the second commandment, concluded that though they suffered, they had not sinned. The second commandment, no doubt, threatens to 'visit the iniquities of the fathers upon the children;' but this threatening is not against the children that love him, but unto the third and fourth generation of them that (actually continue to) hate God, inheriting not merely the blood and property, but, through education and example, the wicked principles and practices of their fathers. C.

Ver. 9. He is just. How may this description be reconciled with Ec. 7. 20, which declares 'there is not a just man upon the earth, that liveth and sinneth not?' There is no contradiction. Solomon asserts a fact to which Scripture, conscience, and history bear united testimony. Ezekiel—the Spirit speaking by him—describes a perfect character, negatively and positively: which, if any can claim, he is just. The consciousness that none can claim it by law brings 'the knowledge of sin,' and turns the eye of the sinner to 'look unto Jesus' for atonement and salvation. C.

Ver. 13. He shall surely die. But do not all die alike? No doubt 'one event happens to all,' Ec. 2. 14, 16, but that event is varied by the relative conditions of them that die. To the believer, death is a deliverance; to the sinner, condemnation. To the sinner, death is an end of joy and commencement of eternal misery; to the believer, an end of misery and commencement of eternal joy, Mat. 25. 46. C.

Ver. 22. In his righteousness that he hath done. How is this to be reconciled with Ps. 14. 1–3; 53. 1–3; Ec. 7. 20; Ro. 3. 10, which all concur in denying that there is any righteous—any that doeth good? There is no contradiction. The sinner who has sought a Saviour, Ac. 16. 30, has been 'justified freely by grace,' Ro. 3. 24, and is accounted righteous in the sight of God. But how can the sinner be said to have 'done' this righteousness? Observe, in answer, what, through grace, the sinner has done—actually done. Through faith in Jesus, and led by the Spirit, Ro. 8. 14, he hath penitently forsaken his sin, ver. 21; Ac. 10. 43. And because, through grace, he has done this, the prophet speaks of 'the righteousness that he hath done.' But all his doing (see Phi. 2. 13) lies in rejecting his own righteousness, Phi. 3. 9, and receiving CASTLE OF BABYLON. [EZEKIEL, xvii : 17.]—"Neither shall Pharaoh with his mighty army and great company make for him in the war, by casting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons." This castle has nothing to do with Babylon the Great, for it is in Egypt, and is put to illustrate this verse simply because Pharaoh, King of Egypt, is represented as building forts and casting up mounts. This is a relic of the town which was built by Cambyses, B. C. 525. It is upon the site occupied by Old Cairo, where the epistle of Saint Peter was written. The fort itself belongs to the Roman period. Here was stationed one of the three legions of the Roman army. The masonry resembles very much that which we find in the palace of the Cæsars in Rome, and also in the temple of Minerva and the Roman Pantheon.

5 ¶ But[e] if a man be just, and do [3]that which is lawful and right,[4]

6 And hath not [g]eaten upon the mountains,[5] neither hath [h]lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, neither hath [i]defiled his neighbour's wife, neither [j]hath come near to a menstruous woman,

7 And[k] hath not oppressed any, but [l]hath restored to the debtor his pledge,[6] hath spoiled none by violence, [m]hath given his bread to the hungry, and hath covered the naked with a garment;

8 He[o] that hath not given forth upon usury,[7] neither hath taken any increase, that hath [p]withdrawn his hand from iniquity, [q]hath executed true judgment between man and man,

9 Hath[r] walked in my statutes, and hath kept my judgments, to deal truly; [s]he is just, he shall surely live,[8] saith the Lord GOD.

10 ¶ If he beget a son that is a robber,[9] a shedder[t] of blood, and that doeth the like to any one of these[1] things,

11 And that doeth not any of those duties, but even hath [u]eaten upon the mountains, and defiled[v] his neighbour's wife,

12 Hath[x] oppressed the poor and needy, hath spoiled by violence, hath not restored the pledge, and hath [y]lifted up his eyes to the idols, hath committed abomination,

13 Hath[z] given forth upon usury, and hath taken increase: shall he then live? he shall not live: he hath done all these abominations; [a]he shall surely die; his blood[2] shall be upon him.

14 ¶ Now, lo, if he beget a son [b]that seeth all his father's sins which he hath done, and considereth,[c] and doeth not such like,

15 That hath not [d]eaten upon the mountains, neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, [e]hath not defiled his neighbour's wife,

16 Neither[g] hath oppressed any, hath not withholden the pledge,[3] neither hath [h]spoiled by violence, but [i]hath given his bread to the hungry, and hath covered the naked with a garment,

17 That[j] hath taken off his hand from the poor, that [k]hath not received usury nor increase, hath[l] executed my judgments, [m]hath walked in my statutes; [n]he shall not die for the iniquity of his father, he shall surely live.

18 As for his father, [p]because he cruelly oppressed, spoiled his brother by violence, and did that which is not good among his people, lo, even he shall [q]die in his iniquity.

19 ¶ Yet say ye, Why? [r]doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father? When the son hath done that which is lawful and right, and hath kept all my statutes, and hath done them, he shall surely live.

20 The[s] soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son; the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him.

21 But[t] if the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and [u]keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

22 All[v] his transgressions that he hath committed, they shall not [x]be mentioned unto him: [y]in his righteousness that he hath done he shall live.

23 Have[z] I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord GOD; and not that he should return from his ways, and live?

24 ¶ But[a] when the righteous turneth [4]away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and doeth according to [b]all the abominations that the wicked man doeth, shall he live? [c]All his righteousness that he hath done shall not be mentioned: in his trespass that he hath trespassed, and in his sin that he hath sinned, in them shall he die.

25 ¶ Yet ye say, [d]The way of the Lord is not equal. Hear now, O house of Israel; [e]is not my way equal? [g]are not your ways unequal?[5]

26 When[h] a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them; for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die.

27 Again,[i] when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive.

28 Because [j]he considereth, and turneth away from all his transgressions that he hath committed, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

29 Yet[k] saith the house of Israel, The way of the Lord is not equal. O house of Israel, are not my ways equal? are not your ways unequal?

30 Therefore [l]I will judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord GOD. [m]Repent, and turn [6]yourselves from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin.[7]

31 ¶ Cast[o] away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a [p]new heart and a new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel?

4 This verse by no means impugns the doctrine of perseverance in grace. See 1 Pe. 1. 23. It merely states the possibility that a believer may fall into sin—a fact implied in the Lord's prayer, when it inseparably unites the petition for daily bread with the petition for forgiveness of sin. And when it declares 'he shall die in his trespass and sin,' it does not necessarily mean that he shall die under their guilt, and so perish eternally; but that he shall die under their punishment, as an example and a warning. 5 The people with whom the prophet here argues appear to have had their consciences seared. They were not aware of their own guilt before God. Evil training, evil example, a corrupt state of society, had blinded them. When punishment came, therefore, they were unable to see the cause of it, and they charged the Lord with injustice and caprice in his government. The prophet attempts to instruct them, and proves that the guilt is theirs.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—Hardened sinners readily dare to strive with their Maker, and charge him with injustice, when he but justly punishes them. Nor can anything less than the ruin they deserve silence their presumptuous murmurings. Let God reward or punish men's behaviour as exactly as he can, prejudiced criminals will hold his conduct unjust, and their own equal

1 A lamentation for the princes of Israel, under the parable of lions' whelps taken in a pit; 10 and for Jerusalem, under the parable of a wasted vine.

MOREOVER, take thou up [a]a lamentation for the [b]princes of Israel,

2 And say, What is thy mother? [c]a lioness: she lay down among lions, she nourished her whelps among young lions.

3 And [d]she brought up one of her whelps: it became a young lion, and it learned to catch the prey; it devoured men.

4 The[e] nations also heard of him; he was taken in their pit, and they brought him with chains into the land of Egypt.

5 Now, when she saw that she had waited, and [g]her hope was lost, [h]then she took another of her whelps, and made him a young lion.

6 And[i] he went up and down among the lions, he became a young lion, and learned to catch the prey, and devoured men.

7 And he knew their [1]desolate palaces,[2] and he laid waste their cities; and the land was desolate, and the fulness thereof, by the noise of his roaring.

8 Then[j] the nations set against him on every side from the provinces, and [k]spread their net over him: he was taken in their pit.[3]

9 And they put him in ward in chains,[4] and brought him to the king of Babylon; [l]they brought him into holds, that his voice should no more be heard upon the mountains of [5]Israel.

10 ¶ Thy mother is like [n]a vine in thy [6]blood,[7] planted by the waters: [o]she was fruitful, and full of branches, by reason of many waters.

11 And she had [p]strong rods for the sceptres of them that bare rule, and her stature was exalted among [q]the thick branches, and she appeared in her height with the multitude of her branches.

12 But[r] she was plucked up in fury, she was cast down to the ground, and [s]the east wind dried up her fruit; her strong rods[8] were broken and withered, [t]the fire consumed them.

13 And[u] now she is planted in the wilderness,[9] in a [v]dry and thirsty ground.

14 And[x] fire is gone out of a rod of her branches, which hath [y]devoured her fruit, so that she hath [z]no strong rod to be a sceptre to rule. [a]This is a lamentation, and shall be for a lamentation.

How extensive is the amiable character of a truly good man! Cordial worship of the true God alone, chastity, honesty, equity, mercy, and withdrawing from fellowship in wickedness, jointly taken, are the necessary lines of it. And none can expect a glorious reward, unless by grace he persevere in his righteousness. But it is vain to seek righteousness as it were by the works of the law, which requires of us what only infinite power can effect. And it is infatuated to attempt holiness of life while our hearts are unrenewed by grace. But infinitely dangerous is it to rush upon death and damnation, notwithstanding the most earnest warnings, entreaties, and offers of a gracious God; or to indulge ourselves in neglect of the most difficult duties, when God hath graciously promised to work them in us.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 1–9. The kingdom of Judah, and family of David, abandoned to violence and oppression, associated themselves with their heathen neighbours, their princes and nobles, and learned their ways. Jehoahaz, son of king Josiah, was scarcely enthroned by the nation when he became a tyrannical oppressor. But the Egyptians quickly dethroned him, and carried him off a prisoner. The Jews, finding that there was no hope of his restoration, or of freeing themselves from their dependence on the Egyptians, did, with their consent, make Jehoiakim their king. Conversing with his heathen neighbours, he soon became a most cruel oppressor, and rendered his kingdom everywhere miserable by his tyrannical rage. The Chaldeans and their allies quickly invaded their country, and by making him their prisoner, restrained his oppressive cruelties. Not long after, they transported to Babylon king Jehoiachin his son, and almost all the princes of Judah; and after eleven years more, Zedekiah; and laid the land desolate. 10–14. Once the Jewish state and family of David wonderfully flourished, had many valiant princes fit to sway the sceptre, and in glory and power could have vied with any of the neighbouring nations. But by the Egyptians, and especially by the Assyrians and Chaldeans from the east, the nation is wholly ruined, and the princes either murdered or carried captive; and now the poor remains of the nation are miserable captives in Babylon. And king Zedekiah, by his rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar, hath occasioned the ruin of his family and nation; and never shall any of his family be honoured with an earthly sceptre.

Ver. 2. What is thy mother? The address seems to be to Jehoahaz, comp. ver. 4 with 2 Ki. 23. 34, whose mother was Hamutal, 2 Ki. 23. 31. But by 'mother Jerusalem is evidently to be understood, the nurse and nursery, as it were, of the degenerate prince. The allusion to a mother, however, records a fact often observed, and of deep import—that the good or evil of human character is generally to be traced to the early influence of maternal rather than paternal precept and example C.

Ver. 5. She took another. Most probably Jehoiakim, 2 Ki. 24. 1, 2. This verse renders it certain that by 'mother,' ver. 2, Jerusalem is to be understood; for the 'mother' continues the same, and takes 'another of her whelps;' whereas Zebudah, and not Hamutal, was mother to Jehoiakim, 2 Ki. 23. 36. And if by 'another' is to be understood Jehoiachin, comp. ver. 9 with 2 Ki. 24. 8–16, neither was his mother Hamutal, but Nehushta, 2 Ki. 24. 8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Faithful ministers have often mournful work put into their hands to declare the awful consequences of sin. It is just and common for those who terrified and enslaved others, to be affrighted and enslaved in their turn. And they who fill up the measure of their fathers' sins, lay up sorrows and lasting matter of lamentation for their children.

CHAPTER XX. Ver. 4. Do not intercede for, but reprove, convince, and condemn them for their own and their fathers' abominable iniquities, which they imitate. 5, 6. I entered into promise with them by solemn oath, and manifested my power for their deliverance. 7. Renounce with abhorrence these abominable idols, to which ye with pleasure lift up your eyes in worshipping them. 9, 14, 22. Out of respect to my honour and glory I spared them, and proceeded to bestow further deliverances on them. 12. I gave them my Sabbaths and ordinances as a token of the covenant relation between me and them, and in order to promote their sanctification in heart and life. 11, 13, 21. No doubt a perfect fulfilment of the broken promise of works, if possible, would entitle a man to eternal life; but the immediate meaning of these verses is, that in a careful observance of God's laws, the Jews should enjoy prosperity in Canaan. 25, 26, 28. I permitted them to make for themselves wicked and destructive rules of superstitious and idolatrous worship, and even to provoke me to desolate their country, by the sacrificing of their own children to Molech.—For by their inventions in my worship, or in that of their idols, they have exceedingly disparaged my wisdom, sovereign authority, and sole deity. 29, 30. And do not ye to this day impudently keep up the superstitious and idolatrous worship of the high-places, notwithstanding all my remonstrances against it? And do not ye, elders, continue in the idolatries of your fathers, notwithstanding the judgments inflicted upon you for the same? 32–38. In vain ye hope to prosper by imitating the heathen idolatries; for I will manifest my power over you in inflicting upon you the most terrible judgments. And I will, in the most wrathful manner, gather you out of all the countries around your own land, and carry you to Chaldea, or some worse place, to be slaves to the most barbarous nations; and there will I execute my judgments upon you, to manifest my own perfections, and convince you of your wickedness.—And by severe corrections, and by distinguishing the real saints and obstinate transgressors in my punishments, I will re-acknowledge you as my peculiar people, and reduce you to blessed fellowship with and obedience to myself. 39–44. For a time I will indeed abandon you to your idolatries, and reject you from being my people; but after the captivity, and especially after the dispersion, I will bring you back to your own land, restore my worship among you, work wonders of mercy for your establishment and happiness, and render you deeply sensible of and penitent for your own and your fathers' iniquities. 46–48. Since Jerusalem is now filled with inhabitants, unfruitful in holiness or virtue, and is become a harbour for cruel oppressors, thieves, and murderers, I, by the Chaldeans, will burn it to a heap, and destroy all ranks of people in it without remedy.

Ver. 11. Which if a man do perfectly, without any failure, defect, or shortcoming—a condition never fulfilled by a sinner; wherefore righteousness is not of the law, and salvation can only be of grace. C.

2 Then came the word of the LORD unto me, saying,

3 Son of man, speak unto the elders of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Are ye come to inquire of me? [e]as I live, saith the Lord GOD, I will not be inquired of by you.[2]

4 ¶ Wilt thou [g]judge[3] them, son of man, wilt thou judge them? [h]cause them to know the abominations of their fathers;

5 And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, In the day when [i]I chose Israel, and [k]lifted up mine hand[5] unto the seed of the house of Jacob, and [l]made myself known unto them in the land of Egypt, when I lifted up mine hand unto them, saying, [k]I am the LORD your God;

6 In the day that [i]I lifted up mine hand unto them, to [n]bring them forth of the land of Egypt into a land that I had [o]espied for them, flowing[p] with milk and honey, which is the glory[q] of all lands;

7 Then said I unto them, [r]Cast ye away every man the abominations of his eyes, and [s]defile not yourselves with the idols of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

8 But they [t]rebelled against me, and would not hearken unto me: they did not every man cast away the abominations of their eyes, neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt:[6] then I said, I[u] will pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt.

9 But [v]I wrought for my name's sake,[7] that it should not be polluted before the heathen, among whom they were, in whose sight I made myself known unto them, in bringing them forth out of the land of Egypt.

10 Wherefore [z]I caused them to go forth out of the land of Egypt, and brought them into the wilderness:

11 And [y]I gave them my statutes, and showed them[8] my judgments, [z]which if a man do, he shall even live in them.

12 Moreover also, I gave them my [a]sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that [b]I am the LORD that sanctify them.[9]

13 ¶ But the house of Israel [c]rebelled against me in the wilderness: they walked not in my statutes, and they despised my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them; and [d]my sabbaths they greatly polluted: then I said, [e]I would pour out my fury upon them in the [g]wilderness, to consume them.

14 But[h] I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, in whose sight I brought them out.

[9] This does not mean that the Sabbath rest was first instituted in the wilderness, for that the Israelites did not know of it previously. The plain meaning is that the Sabbath had not been observed during the Egyptian bondage, and that on their deliverance God restored it as a sign that the covenant relation between him and his people was re-established. It was also designed in this way to keep up the remembrance of their deliverance from Egypt. The observance of the Sabbath will always be a test of the state of religion in nations, families, and in the hearts of individual believers.—P.

[4] Sun or Baal worship was the most common form of idolatry among the ancient Canaanites. Their sanctuaries & altars were upon the tops of mountains and hills, from which they were able to catch the first glimpse of the rising sun. The generic name, therefore, for the idol sanctuaries of Canaan was bamah, 'a height,' or 'high place.' Moses was instructed to warn the Israelites with special care and solemnity against the idolatrous practices of the Canaanites, and he commanded them to destroy all the bamoth, 'high-places,' in the land.—P.

15 Yet[i] also I lifted up my hand unto them in the wilderness, that I would not bring them into the land [j]which I had given them, flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands;

16 Because[k] they despised my judgments, and walked not in my statutes, but polluted my sabbaths: for their heart went after [l]their idols.

17 Nevertheless[m] mine eye spared them from destroying them, neither did I make an end of them in the wilderness.

18 But [o]I said unto their children in the wilderness, Walk ye not in the statutes of your [p]fathers, neither observe their judgments, [q]nor defile yourselves with their idols:

19 I[r] am the LORD your God; [s]walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them;

20 And[t] hallow my sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the LORD your God.

21 Notwithstanding[u] the children rebelled against me: they walked not in my statutes, neither kept my judgments to do them, which if a man do, he shall even live in them; they [v]polluted my sabbaths: [z]then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the wilderness.

22 Nevertheless[y] I withdrew mine hand, and [z]wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the heathen, in whose [a]sight I brought them forth.

23 I[b] lifted up mine hand unto them also in the wilderness, that I would scatter them among the heathen, and disperse them through the countries;

24 Because[c] they had not executed my judgments, but had despised my statutes, and had polluted my sabbaths, and [d]their eyes were after their fathers' idols.

25 Wherefore[e] I gave them also statutes that were not good,[1] and judgments whereby they should not live:

26 And[g] I polluted them[2] in their own gifts, in that they caused to pass through the fire all that openeth the womb, that I might make them desolate, to the end that they [h]might know that I am the LORD.

27 ¶ Therefore, son of man, speak unto [i]the house of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Yet in this your fathers have [j]blasphemed me, in that they have [3]committed a trespass against me.

28 For when [k]I had brought them into the land, for the which I [l]lifted up mine hand to give it to them, then they saw [m]every high [4]hill,

Ver. 20. One great principle of Sabbath observance is the sign which it furnishes of the perpetual rights of God and obligations of man: a sign the more needful, because of the natural tendency of the heart to forget God, adverting to which the commandment says, 'Remember the Sabbath-day to keep it holy.' C.

Ver. 34. Of the providential methods whereby God will effect the gathering of his people it is not possible to speak with precision, seeing God reveals the fact rather than the means. This passage, however, seems to intimate a series of terrible judgments, both upon the unbelieving Jews, ver 38, and idolatrous Gentiles, ver. 34, by which the separation will be finally effected. Such separations have again and again been exemplified, as in the expulsion of the Moors from Spain and the Huguenots from France. See The Suppression of the Reformation, by D. D. Scott. But the Lord knoweth the means: and, when his time arrives, not one jot or tittle, either of threatening or promises, will his providence leave unfulfilled. See ver. 40–42. C.

Ver. 46. Jerusalem might be called a 'forest,' from its lofty

WAITING PROCESSION IN THE FESTIVAL OF THE MAH 'MAL—BEGINNING OF THE PILGRIMAGE TO MECCA. [EZEKIEL, xx : 7.]—"Then said I unto them, Cast ye away every man the abominations of his eyes, and defile not yourselves with the idols of Egypt: I am the Lord your God." The festival of the Mah 'Mal is a modern form of idolatry which seems always to have been characteristic of Egypt. This festival takes place at Cairo annually in April. It is one of the most gala days ever seen in this city. The particular incident which gave rise to this festival is connected with a beautiful woman who lived at the beginning of the reign of the Mamelukes. After the death of her husband she reigned eighty days as Sultana, and then married again. She gave her hand and her throne to her husband, and retired herself within the harem. She made a pilgrimage to Mecca in a magnificent litter borne between camels, and every year since a litter has been sent from Egypt to Mecca along with the pilgrims who make the journey to the holy Mohammedan city.

and all the thick trees, and they offered there their sacrifices, and there they presented the provocation[o] of their offering: there also they made their sweet savour, and poured out there their drink-offerings.

29 Then [5]I said unto them, What is the high place[6] whereunto ye go? [p]And the name thereof is called Bamah[7] unto this day.

30 ¶ Wherefore say unto [q]the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD, [r]Are ye polluted after the manner of your [s]fathers? and commit ye whoredom after their abominations?

31 For when ye [t]offer your gifts, when ye make your sons to pass through the fire, ye pollute yourselves with all your idols, even unto this day; [u]and shall I be inquired of by you, O house of Israel? As I live, saith the Lord GOD, I will not be inquired of by you.

32 And that which cometh into your mind shall [v]not be at all,[8] that ye say, [w]We will be as the heathen, as the families of the countries, to serve wood and stone.

33 ¶ As I live, saith the Lord GOD, surely [y]with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you;

34 And[z] I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out.

35 And I will bring you into the [a]wilderness of the people, and there will [b]I plead with you face[c] to face.

36 Like[d] as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord GOD.

37 And I will cause you to [e]pass under the rod,[9] and [g]I will bring you into the bond[1] of the covenant:

38 And [h]I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me: I will bring them forth out of the country where they sojourn, and [i]they shall not enter into the land of Israel; and [j]ye shall know that I am the LORD.

39 As for you, O house of Israel, thus saith

[5] In this verse three distinct Hebrew words are rendered by one English word, 'south.' I think they are proper names, each specifying a distinct district. The first word is Teman, which embraced that section of southern Palestine which lay along the borders of Moab and Edom. The second is Darom, which was the name of the region in the extreme south-western part of the country, including part of Philistia towards Gaza. The third is Negeb, a name exclusively applied to the southern part of Judea. This prophecy, therefore, was directed not against all Palestine, but against that extreme southern portion of it which had as yet in a great measure escaped the ravages of the Assyrian and Babylonian armies.—P.

the Lord GOD, [k]Go ye, serve ye every one his idols, and hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me: but [l]pollute ye my holy name no more with your gifts, and with your idols:

40 For in mine [n]holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Israel, saith the Lord GOD, there shall all the house of Israel, all of them in the land, serve me: there will I [o]accept them, and there will I require [p]your offerings, and the first-fruits[2] of your oblations, with all your holy things.

41 I will accept you with your sweet [3]savour, when [q]I bring you out from the people, and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered; and [r]I will be sanctified in you before the heathen.

42 And[s] ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall bring you into the land of Israel, into the country for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to your fathers.

43 And there [t]shall ye remember your ways, and all your doings, wherein ye have been defiled; and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight, for all your evils that ye have committed.

44 And [u]ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I [v]have wrought with you for my name's sake, [x]not according to your wicked ways, nor according to your corrupt doings, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lord GOD.

45 ¶ Moreover, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

46 Son of man, [y]set thy face toward the south, and drop [z]thy word toward the south, and prophesy against the forest[4] of the south [5]field;

47 And say to the forest of the south, Hear the word of the LORD, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, [a]I will kindle a fire in thee, and it shall devour every green tree in thee, and every dry tree: the flaming flame shall not be quenched, and all faces [b]from the south to the north shall be burned therein.

48 And[c] all flesh shall see that I the LORD have kindled it: it shall not be [d]quenched.

49 Then said I, Ah Lord GOD! they say of me, Doth he not speak parables?[6] buildings, or from the many shady and fruitful trees that gave the surrounding country the aspect of a forest. The prophet describes it as situated in the south, either because it lay, according to Hebrew geography, south of that part of Chaldea where he then resided: or, more probably, ver. 47, because it lay in the south of Canaan. See ch. 21. 4. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Wretched is their stupidity, and presumptuous their heart, who, even under sufferings, ask God's leave to go on in sin! God's choice of us, and his manifestation of himself to us, are altogether of blessed grace; and to these, and to our own faith we owe our happiness. And it is from regard to God's own honour that corrupt churches, nations, families, and persons are so long borne with and preserved. Our disobedience to his laws originates in an inward bias towards the world and the flesh; and if once bad principles or customs be rooted, it is almost impossible to extirpate them. Though by disobedience to God's laws men plainly rush upon their own death and damnation; yet where parents are negligent in the education of children, children rarely make the laws of God the object of their earnest study. But when men profane God's ordinances and Sabbaths, he ordinarily gives them up to strong delusions in their principles and worship. And dreadful is the case of those to whom the slavery of their own lusts is allotted for their punishment; and when they will not take warning by all the admonitions against or mischievous consequences of sin, which have taken place before them.—But they who will not acknowledge God as their gracious saviour and righteous ruler, shall feel him their judge and destroyer. His purpose must stand: and he will easily find both place and time to punish obstinate apostates, and to pluck them out from among his people, whom they have corrupted; nor will either sinful compliances or carnal projects avail to their safety. They who think to serve themselves by sin, do but make themselves slaves to it. And pretences to religion, in such a case, do but add profaneness and hypocrisy to iniquity, and lose men the favour of the world, while they render them the detestation of God.—Even the believers must often be saved as by fire, their transgressions are so many, and their corruptions so strong. But afflictions must purge them; and, through all the changes on earth, they must be prepared for their comforts here, and heavenly inheritance hereafter. Their persons being once accepted in Christ, the acceptance of their services done in faith must follow. And O what baseness, malignity, and ingratitude do they discern in sin through the glass of his redeeming love, while they loathe themselves on account of it, and are more engaged to his service. But, alas! that sinners should need to be so repeatedly warned of their ruin; that God's fruitful vine should become an unfruitful forest, and his house a den of thieves! But if all ranks combine in wickedness, they must be jointly involved in punishment. They who are unwilling to profit by God's Word, ordinarily pick quarrels with it, or the manner of delivering it. But if people deride ministers, it is enough that they have a God to complain to.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Ezekiel prophesieth against Jerusalem with a sign of sighing. 8 The sharp and bright sword, 18 against Jerusalem, 25 against the kingdom, 28 and against the Ammonites.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, [a]set thy face toward Jerusalem, and [b]drop thy word toward [c]the holy places, and prophesy against the land of [1]Israel,[2]

3 And say to the land of Israel, Thus saith the LORD, Behold [d]I am against thee, and will draw forth [e]my sword out of his sheath, and will[g] cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked.

4 Seeing then that I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked, therefore shall my [h]sword go forth out of his sheath [i]against all flesh from the south to the north;

5 That[j] all flesh may know that I the LORD have drawn forth my sword out of his sheath: it[k] shall not return any more.

6 Sigh,[l] therefore, thou son of man, [m]with the breaking of thy loins; and with bitterness sigh before [o]their eyes.

7 And it shall be, when they say unto thee, Wherefore sighest thou? that thou shalt answer, For[p] the tidings, because it cometh: and [q]every heart shall melt, and all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees shall be weak as water:[3] behold, [r]it cometh, and shall be brought to pass, saith the Lord GOD.

8 ¶ Again, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Son of man, prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD; Say, [s]A sword, a sword is sharpened, and also furbished:

10 It is sharpened to make a sore slaughter: it is furbished that it may glitter: [t]should we then make mirth? [4]it [u]contemneth the rod of my son, as every tree.[5]

11 And [v]he hath given it to be furbished, that it may be handled: the sword is sharpened, and it is furbished, to give it into the hand of the slayer.

12 Cry[z] and howl, son of man; for it shall be upon my people, it shall be upon all the princes of Israel: [y]terrors by reason of the sword shall be upon my people:[6] smite[z] therefore upon thy thigh.

13 Because[7] it is [a]a trial, and what if the sword contemn [b]even the rod? it shall be no more, saith the Lord GOD.[8]

14 Thou, therefore, son of man, prophesy, and smite thine hands together,[9] and [c]let the sword be doubled the third time, the sword of the slain: it is the sword of the great men that are slain, which entereth [d]into their privy chambers.[A]

15 I have set the point[2] of the sword [e]against all their gates, that their heart may faint, and their ruins be multiplied. Ah, it is made bright, it is wrapped[3] up for the slaughter.

16 [g]Go[4] thee one way or other, either on the right hand, or on the left,[5] whithersoever thy face is set.

17 I[h] will also smite mine hands together, and [i]I will cause my fury to rest: I the LORD have said it.

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 10–13. The king and princes shall be no more able to resist or avoid the Chaldean sword than the meanest of the common people. That terrible calamity will so disgrace the royal power of David's family, that none of them shall ever afterwards sway an earthly sceptre; and when the Chaldeans have executed my judgments on others, they themselves shall be destroyed. 19. Mark on a tile, or on the ground, two ways, one leading from Babylon to Jerusalem, and the other leading to Rabbath, the capital of the Ammonites; and pitch on a proper place for Nebuchadnezzar to consult which way he should go first. 23. The Jews, who have perfidiously violated their oath of subjection to Nebuchadnezzar, will contemn and deride his divinations: but he will quickly punish them for their treacheries, by murdering or taking them captives. 25–27. Thou wicked Zedekiah, who hast profanely broken thine oath to Nebuchadnezzar, shalt now be punished, and an end put to thy idolatry, perfidy, and other abominations, in thy destruction. Thou shalt be disgracefully dethroned, and the whole nation and royal family turned upside down; Jehoiakim, now in prison, shall be exalted, and thou shalt be debased. Dreadfully shall the nation be overturned by the Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, and Romans, &c. Nor shall it ever attain its wonted lustre and dignity, or any of the family of David wear a sceptre, till Christ take his spiritual kingdom in the gospel church, nay, in the millennium. 29. Your diviners falsely promise you safety and happiness, and that you shall tread down the Jews, whose wickedness hath made them fully ripe for punishment: but they will really bring you into the same miserable condition with these wicked Jews.

Ver. 3. The righteous and the wicked may die together. To the righteous, calamity being a purification, 2 Co. 4. 16–18, and death a deliverance; while to the wicked, calamity is a punishment, and death a curse, Ro. 6. 21, 23. C.

Ver. 6. With the breaking of thy loins. So as to make the prophet bow his head and bend his loins, as one overwhelmed with sorrow of heart. Gill interprets it of sighing till the girdle of his loins should burst; but such an effect seems scarcely possible by any muscular exertion, unless the girdle were so frail as to render its disrupture but little emblematic of the intensity of the prophet's distress. C.

Ver. 10. My son the king, of whom Jerusalem was called mother, ch. 19. 2. The rod—the sceptre, ch. 19. 11. As every tree—holdeth the kingly sceptre in no more respect than the branch of a tree by the way-side. C.

Ver. 13. 'For it (the sword) is tried, and what if it despise the sceptre? This (the rod—sceptre) shall not remain, saith Jehovah' (Boothroyd). And though 'the sceptre'—the power of self-government—'shall not depart from Judah'—from the tribe—'till Shiloh come,' yet no king of David's line shall reign in Jerusalem 'till he shall come whose right it is,' ver. 27. C.

Ver. 14. Smite thine hands together. By some it has been interpreted as a sign of encouragement to the Chaldeans; and certainly clapping the hands is a mode of call common in the East. Others have regarded it as a form of oath, intimating the certainty of the judgment. But Scripture is rather to be interpreted by comparison with Scripture, than by any reference to oriental manners or customs; and, viewed in this light, the action prescribed is either a form of confirmation or oath, see ver. 17; ch. 22. 13, or else a token of the prophet's grief at the judgment he was commanded to foretell. See ch. 6. 11. C.

Ver. 19. Appoint thee two ways. Describe or draw a plan or map, as in ch. 4. 1, of two roads, one for the invasion of Judah, the other for the invasion of Ammon, ver. 20. C.

Ver. 21. He made his arrows. 'Mingled his arrows' (Boothroyd). A heathenish mode of divination in war, which consisted in writing the name of each city to be assailed upon an arrow, shaking the whole in a quiver, and deciding upon priority of attack by the order of drawing.—He looked in the liver. The heathen priests pretended to foretell future events by examining the entrails of beasts slain in sacrifice—and particularly by the liver—and by disease, wounds, the form of the lobes, &c., they augured good or evil to the person inquiring. Such are specimens of the manner in which Satan has continued to deceive, and succeeded in persuading men to follow a dark and baseless superstition, while rejecting the sunlight evidence of divine revelation. C.

Ver. 23. As a false divination. The Jews will despise this mode of divination; and because they know the mode to be a mere pretence, will conclude the prediction to be false.—Note. The success of such divinations is no more evidence of their divine origin than would be the success of a prophecy that the sun would rise. That rising is foretold by experience anticipating the uniform course of nature. Even so—they can never err that prophesy evil against evil men: it is the uniform course of Providence. C.

Ver. 26. This shall not be the same. This man shall no longer wear the crown; or this crown shall no longer be a badge of royalty, ver. 27. C.

Ver. 27. Until he come, &c. Until Messiah come, whose right the government is, by creation, as God; by descent, as man, Jn. 1. 3; Ac. 2. 30. C.

Ver. 29. To bring thee—Rabbath, the capital of the Ammonites, ver. 20; ch. 25. 2–6. The slain—the Jews, whom, being slain, the Ammonites would be incited to plunder. C.

REFLECTIONS.—There is great need that ministers should use great plainness of speech in dealing with souls; should observe God's hand in his public judgments, in which even the godly share with the wicked; and should deny themselves, and be affected with their messages, in order to edify others. Alas! infinite is their danger who have God against them. Nothing can defend them from his righteous and terrible judgments. And while wicked men abound everywhere, his wrath shall follow without restraint. Nor is it proper to be jovial, but penitent, when his judgments are abroad in the earth, in order to vindicate his perfections. But it is matter of comfort to saints that all judgments are managed by Christ, the Son of God, and their friend and Saviour: and that to them they are but corrective trials, not blows aimed for their destruction.—God can easily force the most proud and crafty plotters on earth to court his direction in their concerns, and lead them, even by events apparently fortuitous, to his proper work. None are more ready to despise God's warnings than perfidious and profane swearers. And in none do these sins look worse than in magistrates and ministers who profess the true religion. But if men despise the warnings and offers of God's grace, they shall be seized by his judgment and none are so high but God can debase them, nor any so low but he can exalt them. Pride goes before destruction; and before honour is humility. At what pains and cost do men destroy one another! But if all overturnings in the world make way for Christ, the rightful Sovereign of nations and churches, and his

CUSTOMS PIER, SMYRNA. [EZEKIEL, xxii: 15, 16.]—"And I will scatter thee among the heathen, and disperse thee in the countries, and will consume thy filthiness out of thee. And thou shalt take thine inheritance in thyself in the sight of the heathen, and thou shalt know that I am the Lord." This prophecy has been literally fulfilled. The Jews have been scattered throughout the Gentile nations of the world, and they have learned as no other nation has the great truth that there is one God. It is said to be very difficult to find a Jew who is not a believer in God. We give a picture here of the Customs Pier in Smyrna because this is one of the great Jewish cities in Asia Minor. Many of the leading commercial establishments in this city belong to Jews. Here they live and hold their inheritance in sight of the heathen Turks by whom they are surrounded. In Smyrna the Jews have lived from remote times to the present. There are many great commercial houses managed by them in this city to-day.

18 ¶ The word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,

19 Also, thou son of man, [j]appoint thee two ways, that the sword of the king of Babylon may come: both twain shall come forth out of one land; and choose thou a place, choose it at the head of the way to the city.

20 Appoint a way, that the sword may come to [k]Rabbath of the Ammonites, and to Judah in Jerusalem [l]the defenced.

21 For[m] the king of Babylon stood at the parting[6] of the way, at the head of the two ways,[7] to use divination: he made his arrows bright,[8] he consulted with images,[9] he looked in the liver.

22 At his right hand[1] was the divination for Jerusalem, to appoint captains,[2] to open the mouth in the slaughter, [o]to lift up the voice with shouting, to appoint battering rams against the gates, to cast a mount, and to build a fort.

23 And it shall be unto them [p]as a false divination in their sight, to them that have sworn oaths:[3] but he[4] will call to remembrance the iniquity,[5] that they may be taken.

24 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Because ye have [q]made your iniquity to be remembered, in that your transgressions are discovered, so that in [r]all your doings your sins do appear; because, I say, that ye are come to remembrance, [s]ye shall be taken with the hand.[6]

25 ¶ And thou, [t]profane wicked prince of Israel,[7] whose [u]day is come, when iniquity shall have an end,

26 Thus saith the Lord GOD, [v]Remove the diadem, and take off the crown; this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high.

27 I will overturn, overturn, overturn it;[8] and it shall be no more, until he[9] come whose right it is; and I will give it him.

28 ¶ And thou, son of man, prophesy, and say, [w]Thus saith the Lord GOD concerning the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach;[1] even say thou, The sword, the sword is drawn; for the slaughter it is furbished, to consume because of the glittering;

7 It would appear that the king of Babylon would march to a certain point where one path would lead to Jerusalem and another to Rabbath-ammon. There can be little doubt that the point indicated was Riblah. There we know he established his headquarters. The route from Babylon to Palestine could only cross the desert by Palmyra, or at a point farther north. Riblah is on the line of march, and being situated in the midst of a fertile plain on the bank of the Orontes, no better position could be selected for the encampment of a large army. From Riblah three roads branch to the southwards:—one runs along the eastern base of Antilebanon, by Damascus and Bashan, direct to Rabbath-ammon; another runs down the valley of Cœle-Syria to Central Palestine and Jerusalem; the third passes the northern end of Lebanon, enters Phœnicia, and follows the coast to Philistia and Egypt. gracious designs, let us be therewith content.—Nevertheless, let the proud reproachers and oppressors of God's people, who wish to extirpate his and their name from the world, remember their iniquities will but draw similar judgment on themselves, and neither rights nor possessions on earth will avail them anything.

CHAPTER XXII. Ver. 16. I, who was once your inheritance, have cast you off, and now you may support yourselves in your notorious wretchedness in the best way you can. 18–22. They are even growing worse and worse in the midst of my judgments upon them, and therefore shall be terribly punished and destroyed. 24–30. They are not refined nor washed by the judgments which I have inflicted. Their prophets combine against upright persons, and persecute, rob, and murder such as oppose them. Their priests wrest my laws to countenance their oppression and impiety: they irreverently officiate in my service; and neither in preaching nor in practice make any difference between right or wrong, clean or unclean: they take no care to have my sabbaths observed; and thus dishonour me by their infamous conduct. Their princes have abandoned themselves to cruelty, murder, oppression, and extortion. Their prophets, by false reasonings and unstudied discourses, pretended visions, and presages of peace and prosperity, flatter them in their sinful courses. And there is none among them who either apply themselves to reform the nation, or to supplicate the prevention of my judgments.

Ver. 30. The national defection and corruption was extreme—as in Sodom and Gomorrah, where no citizen was spared—because none was uninfected; and Lot alone, a stranger, was mercifully delivered—an extreme example of the blessed fact, that, in the worst of times, all are never lost; a remnant, however small, still testifies to the power of grace and the salvation of God. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Lord, what are men, that they, that professors of the true religion, should be such monsters! And what an awful connection there is between the different forms of wickedness! There is nothing so abominable, but forgetfulness of God, and of his relations and favours, may produce it. But very base and contemptible before God are degenerate and hypocritical professors. Dreadful is the case of a nation, when prophets, priests, and princes are accomplices and ringleaders in guilt. And when there is scarcely a faithful opposer or importunate intercessor, God's judgment must break in upon them, and render them impotent and miserable. Then shall they tremble

9 In [p]thee are men that carry tales[2] to shed blood; and in thee they [q]eat upon the mountains;[3] in the midst of thee they [r]commit lewdness;

10 In thee have they [s]discovered their fathers' nakedness; in thee have they [t]humbled her that was set apart for pollution.

11 And one[4] hath [u] committed abomination with his neighbour's wife; and another[5] hath lewdly[6] defiled [v] his daughter-in-law; and another in thee hath humbled his sister, his father's daughter.

12 In thee [x]have they taken gifts to shed blood;[7] thou hast [y]taken usury and increase, and thou hast greedily gained of thy neighbours by extortion, and hast [z]forgotten me, saith the Lord GOD.

13 Behold, therefore, I have [a]smitten mine hand[8] at thy [b]dishonest gain which thou hast made, and at thy blood which hath been in the midst of thee.

14 Can[c] thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong, in the days that I shall deal with thee? [d]I the LORD have spoken it, and will do it.

15 And I will [e]scatter thee among the heathen, and disperse thee in the countries, and [g]will consume[9] thy filthiness out of thee.

16 And thou shalt [1]take thine [h]inheritance[2] in thyself in the sight of the heathen, [i]and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

17 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, the house of Israel is to me become [j]dross: all they are [k]brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, in the midst of the [l]furnace; they are even the dross[3] of silver.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Because ye are all become dross, behold, therefore, I[m] will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem.

20 As they gather[4] silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it; so will I gather you in mine anger and in my fury, and I will leave you there, and melt you.

21 Yea, [o]I will gather you, and blow upon you in the fire of my wrath, and ye shall be melted in the midst thereof.

22 As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace, so shall ye be melted in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I the LORD have[p] poured out my fury upon you.

CHAP. XXIII.

1 In this chapter, which may be regarded as the conclusion of one section of the book, we have a symbolical summary of Israel's national sin. The two kingdoms, Israel and Judah, are set forth under the emblems of two harlots, who, forgetful alike of shame and honour, run a long career of vice and debauchery, the result of which is heavy judgment.—P.

23 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

24 Son of man, say unto her, [q]Thou art the land that is not cleansed, nor rained upon[5] in the day of indignation.

25 There is [r]a conspiracy[6] of her prophets in the midst thereof, like a roaring lion ravening the prey: they [s]have devoured souls; they have taken the treasure and precious things; they have made her many widows in the midst thereof.

26 Her priests have violated[7] my law, and [t]have profaned mine holy things: [u]they have put no difference between the holy and profane, neither have they showed difference between the unclean and the clean, and [v]have hid their eyes from my sabbaths, and I am profaned among them.

27 Her [x]princes in the midst thereof are like wolves ravening the prey, to shed blood, and to destroy souls, to get dishonest gain.

28 And her prophets have [y]daubed [8]them with untempered mortar, [z]seeing vanity, and divining lies unto them, saying, Thus saith the Lord GOD, when the LORD hath not spoken.

29 The people of the land have used oppression,[9] and exercised robbery, and have vexed the poor and needy; yea, they have oppressed the stranger wrongfully.[1]

30 And I [a]sought for a man among them, that should [b]make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it; but I found none.

31 Therefore [c]have I poured out mine indignation upon them; I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath: [d]their own way have I recompensed upon their heads, saith the Lord GOD.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 The whoredoms of Aholah and Aholibah. 22 Aholibah shall be plagued by her own lovers. 36 The prophet reproveth the adulteries of them both, 45 and declareth their judgments.

under his hand, and feel what a wretched exchange they have made by their apostasy from him. And as their stations aggravated their offences, they shall enhance their misery and ruin.

CHAPTER XXIII.—Whoredom here, and in many other places, denotes an idolatrous apostasy from God, their covenanted husband, to idols, and a dependence on heathen alliances. Ver. 4. The Israelites are called AHOLAH, her own tabernacle, because their worship, appointed by Jeroboam, was of their own invention; and the Jews AHOLIBAH, my tabernacle is in her, as they enjoyed the temple and ordinances of God. Both belonged to God by solemn marriage covenant; and they once brought forth many converts unto him. 32–34. The dreadful and lasting miseries with which ye also shall be punished shall render you contemptible, infamous, infatuated, and even mad with rage and despair. 38–43. When they had newly polluted themselves with idolatry and murder, they immediately rushed into my temple; and after offering their children to Molech, they sacrificed to their idols in my courts. And to please the Assyrians, Egyptians, or Chaldeans, they have built temples, and prepared altars and sacrifices, and have perfumed them with the incense and oil devoted to my service; and have received their ambassadors with distinguished veneration, and along with them have wallowed in ease and luxury, and have even courted the friendship of the base and thievish Arabians, that they might bring them ornamenting presents. Where and when are these base alliances and idolatries to stop?

REFLECTIONS.—Disgraceful to men, and dishonourable to God, are sinful confederacies and confidence in an arm of flesh. And the greater our privileges, and nearer our connections with God, the more criminal is [d]elder,[5] and [6]Aholibah[7] her sister; and they were mine,[e] and they bare sons and daughters. Thus were their names, Samaria is Aholah, and Jerusalem Aholibah.

5 And Aholah [g]played the harlot, when she was mine;[8] and she [h]doted on her lovers, on the Assyrians her neighbours,

6 Which were clothed with blue, captains and rulers, all of them desirable young men, [i]horsemen riding upon horses.

7 Thus she committed her whoredoms with[9] them, with all them that were the chosen men of Assyria,[1] and with all on whom she doted: with all their idols she defiled herself.

8 Neither left she her [j]whoredoms brought from Egypt: for in her youth they lay with her, and they bruised the breasts of her virginity, and poured their whoredom upon her.

9 Wherefore [k]I have delivered her into the hand of her lovers, into the hand of the Assyrians, upon whom she doted.

10 These discovered her nakedness;[2] they took her sons and her daughters, and slew her with the sword; and she became [3]famous[4] among women; for they had executed judgment upon her.

11 And when her sister Aholibah saw this, she was [l]more corrupt in her inordinate love than[5] she, and in her whoredoms more than her sister in her whoredoms.[6]

12 She doted upon the [m]Assyrians her neighbours, captains and rulers clothed most gorgeously, horsemen riding upon horses, all of them desirable young men.

13 Then I saw that she was defiled, that they[o] took both one way;

14 And that [p]she increased her whoredoms: for when she saw men pourtrayed upon the wall,[7] the[q] images of the Chaldeans pourtrayed with vermilion,

15 Girded[r] with girdles upon their loins, exceeding in dyed attire[8] upon their heads, all of them princes to look to, after the manner of the Babylonians of Chaldea, the land of their nativity,

16 And, as soon as she [s]saw them with her eyes,[9] she doted upon them, and [t]sent messengers unto them into Chaldea.[1]

17 And the Babylonians[2] came to her into the bed of love,[3] and they defiled her with their whoredom; and she was polluted with them, and her mind was alienated[4] from them.

18 So she discovered her whoredoms, and discovered her nakedness: then my mind [u]was alienated from her, like as my mind was alienated from her sister.

19 Yet she [v]multiplied her whoredoms, [w]in calling to remembrance the days of her youth, wherein she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt.

20 For she [5]doted upon their [6]paramours, whose flesh is as the flesh of asses, and whose issue is like the issue of horses.

21 Thus [y]thou calledst to remember the lewdness of thy youth, in bruising thy teats by the Egyptians for the paps of thy youth.

22 ¶ Therefore, O Aholibah, thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, [z]I will raise up thy lovers against thee, from whom [a]thy mind is alienated, and I will bring them against thee on [b]every side;

23 The[c] Babylonians and all the Chaldeans, Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa,[7] and all the Assyrians with them: all of them [d]desirable young men, captains and rulers, great lords and renowned, all of them riding upon horses.

24 And they shall come against thee [e]with chariots,[8] waggons, and wheels, and with an assembly of people, which shall set against thee buckler, and shield, and helmet, round about: and I will set judgment before them, and they shall judge thee according to their [9]judgments.

25 And[g] I will set my jealousy against thee, and they shall [h]deal furiously with thee: [1]they shall take away thy nose and thine ears;[2] and thy remnant shall fall by the sword: they shall take thy sons and thy daughters; and [i]thy residue shall be devoured by the fire.

26 They shall also [j]strip thee out of thy clothes, and take away thy fair jewels.[3]

27 Thus [k]will I make thy lewdness to cease from thee, and thy whoredom brought from the land of Egypt: so that thou shalt not lift up thine eyes unto them, nor remember Egypt any more.

28 For thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, [l]I will deliver thee into the hand of them whom thou hatest, into the hand of them from whom thy mind is alienated:

29 And[m] they shall deal with thee hatefully, and shall take away all thy labour, and shall leave thee naked and bare: and the [n]nakedness of thy whoredoms shall be [o]discovered, both thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

30 I will do these things unto thee, [p]because thou hast gone a whoring after the heathen, and because thou art polluted with their idols.

31 Thou[q] hast walked in the way of thy sister; therefore will I give [r]her cup into thine hand.

32 Thus saith the Lord GOD, [s]Thou shalt drink of thy sister's cup deep and large: [t]thou shalt be laughed to scorn and had in derision; it containeth much.

[w] Recent excavations among the ruined palaces and temples of Assyria and Babylonia illustrate these words. The halls and courts of the great cities of those kingdoms were covered with figures of their gods and heroes, mostly coloured. It is probable that some of these sculptures had been imported into Judea; or, perhaps, some Jews who visited Babylon saw them there, and brought back such glowing descriptions, that the idolatrous people of Jerusalem were induced to imitate them, even in the chambers connected with the temple.—P.

our apostasy from him. If men will strengthen their corruptions, and bid defiance to repentance, by long-continued customs of sinning, or by reflecting on their former wickedness with pleasure and pride, and will alienate their affections from God, let them not wonder if he mark his detestation of them in the most fearful calamities. If we follow the pattern of punished transgressors, we must expect to share with them in their tremendous plagues. And if we indulge ourselves in 33 Thou shalt be filled with drunkenness and sorrow, with the cup of astonishment and desolation, with the cup of thy sister Samaria.

34 Thou[u] shalt even drink it, and suck it out, and thou shalt break the sherds thereof, and [v]pluck off thine own breasts: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD.

35 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [w]Because thou hast forgotten me, and cast me behind thy back, therefore [y]bear thou also thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

36 ¶ The LORD said moreover unto me, Son of man, wilt thou [z]judge[4] Aholah and Aholibah? yea, [a]declare unto them their abominations;

37 That[b] they have committed adultery, and blood[c] is in their hands, and with their idols have they committed adultery; and have [d]also caused their sons, whom they bare unto me, to pass for them through the fire, to devour them.

38 Moreover, this they have done unto me: they [e]have defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and have profaned my sabbaths.

39 For when they had slain their children to their idols, then they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it; and, lo, [g]thus have they done in the midst of mine house.

40 And, furthermore, [h]that ye have sent for men to come[5] from far, unto whom a messenger was sent; and, lo, they came: for whom thou didst[i] wash thyself, paintedst thy eyes,[6] and deckedst thyself with ornaments,

41 And sattest upon a stately[7] bed, and [j]a table prepared before it, whereupon thou hast set mine incense and mine oil.

42 And a voice of [k]a multitude being at ease was with her: and with the men of the common sort[8] were brought [9]Sabeans[1] from the wilderness, which [2]put bracelets upon their hands, and beautiful crowns upon their heads.

43 Then said I unto her that was [l]old in adulteries, Will they now commit whoredoms with her,[3] and she with them?

44 Yet[n] they went in unto her, as they go in unto a woman that [o]playeth the harlot; so went they in unto Aholah and unto Aholibah, the lewd women.

45 ¶ And the [4]righteous men,[5] they shall judge them [p]after the manner of adulteresses, and after the manner of women that shed blood; because they are adulteresses, and blood is in their hands.

46 For thus saith the Lord GOD, [q]I will bring up a company upon them, and will give them to be [r]removed and [s]spoiled.[6]

47 And [t]the company shall stone them with stones, and dispatch them[7] with their swords; they shall [u]slay their sons and their daughters, and burn up their houses with fire.

48 Thus[v] will I cause lewdness to cease out of the land, [z]that all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness.

49 And [y]they shall recompense your lewdness upon you, and ye shall [z]bear the sins of your idols: and ye [a]shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 By the parable of a boiling pot, 6 is showed the irrevocable destruction of Jerusalem. 15 By the sign of Ezekiel not mourning for the death of his wife, 19 is showed the calamity of the Jews to be beyond all expressions of sorrow.

AGAIN, in the [a]ninth year, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,[1]

2 Son of man, [b]write thee the name of the day, even of [c]this same day; the king of Babylon set himself against Jerusalem this same day.

3 And[d] utter a parable unto the [e]rebellious house, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Set on a [g]pot,[2] set it on, and also pour water into it:

4 Gather[h] the pieces thereof into it, even every good piece, the thigh, and the shoulder; fill it with the choice bones.

5 Take the choice of the flock, [i]and [3]burn also the bones under it, and make it boil well, and let them seethe the bones of it therein.

6 Wherefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Woe to the [j]bloody city, to the pot whose [k]scum is therein, and whose scum is not gone out of it! [l]bring it out piece by piece;[4] let [m]no lot fall upon it.

7 For [o]her blood is in the midst of her; she set it upon the top of a rock; she poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust;

8 That[p] it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance; [q]I have set her blood upon the top of a rock, that it should not be covered.

9 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [r]Woe

1 This prophecy was revealed and uttered on the very day in which the Chaldean army commenced the siege of Jerusalem. Ezekiel is commissioned to announce the events about to occur to the captive Jews by the banks of the Chebar. The events are as usual set forth symbolically. The first symbol is that of a boiling pot or caldron, which represents the destiny of the people; the second symbol is the death of the prophet's wife, which is intended to show with what callous indifference the people of Jerusalem would regard the terrible judgments inflicted on their nation.—C.

1 By the parable of a boiling pot, 6 is showed the irrevocable destruction of Jerusalem. 15 By the sign of Ezekiel not mourning for the death of his wife, 19 is showed the calamity of the Jews to be beyond all expressions of sorrow.

AGAIN, in the [a]ninth year, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,[1]

2 Son of man, [b]write thee the name of the day, even of [c]this same day; the king of Babylon set himself against Jerusalem this same day.

3 And[d] utter a parable unto the [e]rebellious house, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Set on a [g]pot,[2] set it on, and also pour water into it:

4 Gather[h] the pieces thereof into it, even every good piece, the thigh, and the shoulder; fill it with the choice bones.

5 Take the choice of the flock, [i]and [3]burn also the bones under it, and make it boil well, and let them seethe the bones of it therein.

6 Wherefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Woe to the [j]bloody city, to the pot whose [k]scum is therein, and whose scum is not gone out of it! [l]bring it out piece by piece;[4] let [m]no lot fall upon it.

7 For [o]her blood is in the midst of her; she set it upon the top of a rock; she poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust;

8 That[p] it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance; [q]I have set her blood upon the top of a rock, that it should not be covered.

9 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [r]Woe

forgetfulness of God, the most shocking treachery, gross idolatry, barbarous murder, heaven-daring profaneness, and confederacy with the worst and basest of mankind, will most probably follow. And what can then await us but disappointments, and miseries unnumbered and tremendous? But most shameful is it when the heathen executioners of God's judgments are less wicked than the hypooritical professors on whom they execute them.

CHAPTER XXIV. Ver. 4–13. Gather the Jews, especially their great men, kings, princes, and rulers in church and state, into Jerusalem, that there my kindled wrath may render them and their people inexpressibly miserable, by sword, famine, or pestilence. Since they continue obstinate in wickedness let them be destroyed, one after another, by diversified judgments. By their open and avowed wickedness they have provoked me to punish them with public, correspondent, and destructive judgments. Let resentment and hope of plunder animate the Chaldeans utterly to destroy the inhabitants, and even burn up their city, to see if that will cure them of their vain hopes, heathen confederacies, and obstinacy and impudence in wickedness, notwithstanding all my reproofs, threatenings, and lesser judgments. 21–23. I will give up the temple, that magnificent structure on which ye rely for security and indemnity, to be defiled and destroyed by the Chaldean heathens; and your friends left at Jerusalem to be murdered; and yet ye shall not dare to make any open discoveries of your mourning for them; but shall secretly, in your own breasts, or with one another, bewail your misery, and pine away in sorrow.

Ver. 1. Ninth year of Jehoiachin's captivity and Zedekiah's reign. The date is so precisely noted that the captive Jews might have an opportunity of observing the accurate fulfilment of the prophecy. C.

Ver. 2. Ezekiel was now in Chaldea—many hundreds of miles distant from Jerusalem—and so could have no human means of ascertaining the precise commencement of the siege; or, indeed, whether there should be any siege at all. His confidence of assertion marks his unhesitating belief in his divine inspiration; and the accurate correspondence of the fact should have amply convinced his fellow-captives that he was indeed the messenger of God. C.

Ver. 17. Bread of men—such as used to be sent from one friend to another upon occasions of mourning; a custom founded upon the presumption that the mourner would neglect to prepare necessary food, which therefore friendship provided for him. C.

Ver. 23. Ye shall not mourn nor weep. The public calamities shall absorb all private sorrows; and the continuance of evils shall at last render you careless and callous.—But ye shall pine away, &c. Ye shall complain one to another, and waste your thoughts and time in vain and provoking recriminations; each man charging his neighbour as the author of the public calami-to the bloody city! I will even [s]make the pile for fire great.

10 Heap[t] on wood, kindle the fire, consume the flesh, and [u]spice it well, and let the bones be burned.

11 Then [v]set it empty upon the coals thereof, that the brass of it may be hot, and may burn, and [x]that the filthiness of it may be molten in it, that the scum of it may be consumed.

12 She[y] hath wearied herself[5] with[z] lies, and her[a] great scum went not forth out of her: [b]her scum shall be in the fire.

13 In[c] thy filthiness is lewdness: [d]because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged, thou[e] shalt not be purged from thy filthiness any more, [g]till I have caused my fury to rest upon thee.

14 I[h] the LORD have spoken it; it shall come to pass, and I will do it; I will not go back, neither[i] will I spare, neither will I repent: [j]according to thy ways, and according to thy doings, shall they judge thee, saith the Lord GOD.

15 ¶ Also the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

16 Son of man, behold, [k]I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes[6] with a stroke:[7] yet[l] neither shalt thou mourn nor weep, neither shall thy tears run[8] down.

17 Forbear to cry,[9] make no mourning for the dead, [n]bind the tire of thine head upon thee,[1] and put [o]on thy shoes[2] upon thy feet, and cover[p] not thy [3]lips,[4] and eat not the bread of men.[5]

18 So I spake unto the people in the morning; and at [q]even my wife [r]died: and I did in the[s] morning [t]as I was commanded.

19 ¶ And the people said unto me, [u]Wilt thou not tell us what these things are to us, that thou doest so?

20 Then I answered them, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

21 Speak unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I [v]will profane my sanctuary, the [z]excellency of your strength, the [y]desire of your eyes, and that which your soul pitieth;[6] and [x]your sons and your daughters whom ye have left[7] shall [a]fall by the sword.

22 And[b] ye shall do as I have done: ye shall not cover your lips, nor [c]eat the bread of men.

* The signs of deepest sorrow and bereavement in the East are: shrill cries; removing the turban or head-dress and sprinkling ashes on the head; putting off the shoes; covering the mouth; and fasting. The prophet was forbidden to manifest any of these signs of mourning. He was in this the type of Israel, who, because they were wholly absorbed in their own misery, would take no notice of the destruction of the temple.—P.

3 This remarkable prophecy has been literally fulfilled. Rabbah has been desolate for centuries. The Arabs of the desert—the Beni-Kedem ('men of the east' of ver. 4) have held possession of it for ages. They do not live in it, they live in tents; but they stable their flocks and herds in it during the noonday heat and the cold nights. Its temples, palaces, theatres, tombs, are all like desolate, and defiled by the flocks. Jackals prowl round it; vultures hover over it; but no human being seeks a home within it. Few will look on this scene of almost unparalleled desolation without calling to mind the language of this verse.—P.

23 And your tires shall be upon your heads, and your shoes upon your feet: ye shall not mourn nor weep; but ye shall [d]pine away for your iniquities, and mourn one toward another.

24 Thus Ezekiel is unto you [e]a sign: according to all that he hath done shall ye do; and [g]when this cometh, ye shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

25 ¶ Also, thou son of man, shall it not be in the day when I take from them their [h]strength, the [i]joy of their glory, the desire of their eyes, and that whereupon they set their [8]minds, [j]their sons and their daughters, 26 That [k]he that escapeth in that day shall come unto thee, to cause thee to hear it with thine ears?
